TRAITORS TO TOM.

Unionites Kill Three-Cent Fare.

Municipal Ownership of Electric Lines Fails in Cleveland.

Laborites Howled for It, but Quit When Wages Are Affected.

Mayor Johnson Forced to Submit Franchise; Fraud Charged.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CLEVELAND (O.) Sept. 5.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Municipal ownership of street railways, which has been a mighty shibboleth to sway the voters, has proved a disastrous failure in the camp of its best friend. Union labor, which howled long and loudly for it, fell away from the proposition as soon as it was discovered that it might affect wages and hours.

The City Council, by unanimous vote in a special meeting tonight, obeyed the behest of Mayor Tom L. Johnson, controlling force in the Municipal Traction Company, the three-cent street-car fare corporation, and authorized the Mayor to call a special election October 22, to submit to a referendum the franchise under which the company is operating.

LOSING MONEY STEADILY.

The decision to call this election, against which Mayor Johnson has fought for months, since a petition demanding it was presented through the efforts of striking street-car employés, was reached last night in a secret caucus of Democratic Councilmen.

To risk the fruits of their seven years' battle for low fare in one referendum vote of the people was the decision forced on Mayor Johnson by the plight in which the Municipal Traction Company finds itself.

Operating for nearly four months at an average monthly deficit of $25,000, the Municipal has found itself compelled to raise money through a stock issue for various expenses of maintenance and necessary improvements.

The lease under which it is operating the lines of the Cleveland Railway Company provides that the latter corporation, on demand, shall issue stock for the obtaining of money for the lessee. This demand was made last week.

CHARGE OF FRAUD.

State Senator Schmitz, in charge of the Municipal's stock selling bureau, the author of the Schmidt law, under which it is provided that a traction franchise must be submitted to a referendum has admitted that because of the filing of the petition for a referendum, the franchise under which the Municipal has leased operation franchises from the Cleveland Railway Company, is invalid.

The Cleveland Railway Company has shown a disposition to refuse to issue stock, and the Municipal, through Mayor Johnson, has been compelled to submit to a special vote in an effort to legalize the Cleveland Railway's franchise and its lease from the Cleveland Railway.

Mayor Johnson and the Municipal were attacked in another quarter today, when John Cline, attorney for striking street-railway employés, asked in Common Pleas Court an injunction against operation of the car lines by the Cleveland Railway and the Municipal, on the assertion that the franchise is illegal, because obtained by fraud, charged to Mayor Johnson.

EIGHT KILLED IN WRECK.

Both Engine Crews and Four Tramps Die in a Head-on Collision.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

MISSOULA (Mont.) Sept. 5.—As a result of a head-on collision between west-bound passenger train No. 5, on the Northern Pacific, and a freight train near Paradise, seventy miles west of here, this morning, both engineers, both firemen and four tramps are dead, and Head Brakeman Dixon of the freight and one tramp are seriously injured.

The dead:

Engineers Munson and Valentine of Missoula.

Firemen Robinson and Herrick of Missoula.

Four tramps, unidentified.

The passenger train was running about thirty miles an hour when the accident happened. The collision is said to have been caused by the failure of Operator Mitchell at Perma to deliver an order to the passenger train, he having received the order after the train had passed his station.

"Three-Cent Tom,"

(Mayor Johnson of Cleveland,) whose pet scheme for municipal ownership of street railways has come to a disastrous end.

SPRINGS FROM ASHES.

RAWHIDE RISES LIKE PHOENIX.

REBUILDING STARTS WHILE THE RUINS SMOLDER.

Adequate Supplies Reach Mining Town, Owing to Prompt Action of Neighbors, and Relief Is Furnished to All—Loss Will Total $800,000, With but $3000 Insurance.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

RAWHIDE (Nev.) Sept. 5.—Like a Phoenix, Rawhide is rising from her ashes and new life is stirring between the hills surrounding this mining camp.

Workmen are busy clearing away the debris of yesterday's destructive fire to make room for the new structures, the material for which is already on the way.

The report that two bodies have been found in the ruins of the Ross Hotel is unfounded.

A commissary department has been established and food is being issued to the needy. During last night Goldfield and Tonopah rushed in eleven automobile loads of provisions in addition to a special train of two cars from Goldfield.

Five thousand dollars worth of supplies also came by special train from Reno. The relief already donated is probably sufficient to last until stock telegraphed for by local merchants arrives.

The town is already being resurveyed and rebuilding will commence immediately. It is planned to put up nothing but substantial buildings. No tents will be allowed within the fire limits after thirty days.

The latest estimate places the total loss by yesterday's fire at $800,000. The total insurance was only about $3000, the rate of 15 per cent. having been prohibitive.

Reno's relief train arrived last night, and twenty-five ore hauling teams of the Western Ore Company transported the much-needed provisions here.

There was not a fatality, nor serious injury, except that of Frank Conahay, the Western Union operator, well known in Colorado as being the first man to have sent news of the Cripple Creek fire to the outside world in 1896. Conahay is badly burned and will be scarred but will recover.

Fire Chief Munn was badly shaken up several times by being blown twenty to thirty feet by concussions of dynamite.

MAY HAVE USED FLATIRON.

Boston Police Believe Chester S. Jordan May Have Killed His Wife With One.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

BOSTON, Sept. 5.—The belief expressed by the medical examiners after their autopsy on the dismembered body of Mrs. Honorah Jordan yesterday that she was struck upon the head with some blunt instrument before being cut up by her husband, Chester S. Jordan, has been apparently corroborated by the finding in a closet of their home in Somerville of a flatiron which was covered with blood, and to which clung a quantity of hair.

The finding of the flat iron tends to discredit a portion of the confession of Jordan, who stated the only blows which he dealt his wife after her taunt were by his fist, and following which he remembers nothing. This discrepancy has led the police to believe that other portions of his story may be wrong.

EYE FOR EYE.

FATHER'S REVENGE DEATH TO THREE.

GENOA (Italy) Sept. 5.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Distracted at the sight of his little son, Anton, being run down and killed today by an auto in which were two sisters, the Marchionesses of Revedim, Angelo Galloni, an engineer living on the outskirts of the city, drew a revolver, shot the chauffeur dead and fatally wounded the younger sister.

The automobile, becoming uncontrollable, upset, fatally injuring the elder Marchioness.

Both of the sisters are dying in a local hospital. Galloni is under arrest.

The tragedy has caused intense excitement throughout the city. Many are condemning Galloni for his terrible revenge, but others are insisting that, owing to the increasing number of accidents in the city, the father was justified.

The little boy was playing in the road when struck by the auto which, the father says, was going at terrific speed. The two sisters were of an old Italian family and were among the most prominent figures in society.

RECONCILED.

SEPARATED FOR YEARS

Gen. Sickles and Wife United.

Noted Warrior and Better Half Apart Quarter Century.

Son Introduces Mother to Her Husband; Differences Forgotten.

"How Fat You Have Grown" Are His First Words; Both Laugh.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] After a separation of twenty-seven years, Gen. Daniel E. Sickles and his wife are reunited.

It will surprise the public to learn that the noted old warrior has a wife and that for more than a quarter of a century the ocean has separated them, he residing here and she living quietly in her native city of Madrid, Spain.

Mrs. Sickles, accompanied by her only son, Stanton Sickles, arrived in this city August 27 and established herself in the Brevoort House, only one short block from the general's house, on the northeast corner of Fifth avenue and Ninth street.

SON BRINGS ABOUT REUNION.

Although a wide chasm of years had completely separated husband and wife, the general has ever been in close touch with the two children born of his Spanish marriage of long ago.

These children were a daughter, Edno, now the wife of Dayrell E. M. Crackenthorpe, a prominent member of the British diplomatic corps, and the son, Stanton Sickles, who until recently was attached to the American legation at Athens, Greece.

It was the son who brought the long-estranged general and his wife together. The reunion took place on the afternoon of Friday, August 28, in the rooms of the general on the ground floor of the Fifth-avenue apartment-house which he owns.

"HOW FAT YOU ARE," GREETING.

Gen. Sickles, wasted with illness, sat at his desk. He glanced up and bowed politely as his son entered the room with a lady on his arm.

"Father, do you know this lady?" asked the son.

The old general fixed his eyes upon the woman's face, thought for a moment and answered:

"She looks strangely familiar."

"This lady is your wife and my mother, general," were the next words of the son, impressively spoken.

Quickly extending a trembling hand in welcome, the old general said:

"I am glad to see you, but my, how fat you have grown!"

The husband and wife laughed and clasped hands.

DIFFERENCES FORGOTTEN.

Whatever were the differences that have kept the general and his wife apart all these years, they were seemingly settled at that first interview.

Both now insist that there never were any differences. Nevertheless, Gen. Sickles will remain alone in his fine apartments, while his wife will retain her rooms at the hotel.

"You see, I could not live in the general's house," explained Mrs. Sickles, yesterday. "Why, it is a bachelor apartment," she added in tones of dismay. "There is nothing in it but books and typewriters and records of Gettysburg and all sorts of strange things.

"No, I could not stay there," she added, "but I will live close by and care for my husband."

CHICAGO WOMAN FINDS BURIED GOLD AT CHATTANOOGA.

Says "Little Emma" Had Urged Her to Look for It for Three Years and on Her First Trip She Found It as Described, Consisting of Roll of Notes and Coin.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 5.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. Frank W. Gulliford, who has been a resident of Austin for fifteen years, has startled her neighbors by her recital of discovery of hidden treasure through the guidance of spirits.

A large sum of money, the amount of which Mrs. Gulliford has not made public, is now in a Chicago bank awaiting its rightful owner. The money, consisting of a large roll of notes and a quantity of gold, was found on the outskirts of Chattanooga, Tenn. Mrs. Gulliford made a trip to Chattanooga with her brother, W. J. Clark, conductor on the Grand Trunk Railway, and the two have just returned to Austin, where Mrs. Gulliford gave out the story of how she unearthed the currency.

"The hiding place of the money was disclosed to me through the guidance of 'Martha,' a spirit child, who, for three years has persistently urged me to find it," said Mrs. Gulliford. "Neither my brother nor I had ever been in Chattanooga, but we found the money."

FLEE FOR LIVES.

FOREST FIRE SWEEPS NORTHERN MINNESOTA.

Thousands of Acres and Millions of Feet of Lumber Laid Waste, One Town Wiped Out, Others Threatened, Ten Thousand Homeless.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

DULUTH (Minn.) Sept. 5.—Thousands of acres of agricultural lands and millions of feet of standing timber were laid waste, one town was wiped out, three more towns may have been destroyed, several mining locations were burned and at least ten thousand persons are homeless tonight as the result of forest fires which swept through many districts in Northern Wisconsin and Northern Minnesota this afternoon and tonight.

Chisholm, Minn., ninety miles north of Duluth, was practically destroyed. The only buildings standing is the new $125,000 High School. The loss there alone is estimated at $2,000,000.

Nashwauk, Minn., fifty miles north west of Duluth, is surrounded by flames and the outskirts of the town are burning.

BUHL IS CUT OFF.

Buhl, Minn., twelve miles east of Chisholm, is cut off by the fires that are bearing down on the town. Wrenshall, twenty miles northwest of Duluth, faces a wall of flames that is sweeping toward the village. It appears to be doomed. Several small settlements in Douglas county, Wisconsin, have been burned and forest fires are sweeping the northern part of the county.

A fire at Bayfield, Wis., damaged buildings to the extent of $75,000. One fatality is believed to have occurred.

May Fisher, a woman at Chisholm, would not leave the city, and she is believed to have perished. Chisholm is a mining town in the central portion of the Mesaba Iron Range, the greatest iron-producing area in the world. Until recently it derived considerable support from the lumbering industry also.

REFUGEES CARED FOR.

Chisholm was started ten years ago by a townsite company headed by A. M. Chisholm, a wealthy mining man of Duluth, and has been one of the most flourishing and prosperous towns on the range.

Refugees poured into this town tonight until the population was almost doubled. To relieve the congestion,

ROYAL HONORS TO RAILWAY KING.

HARRIMAN IS GIVEN OVATION IN OREGON.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

PORTLAND (Or.) Sept. 5.—Bronzed by the sun and flushed with the health that comes from out of door life, E. H. Harriman arrived here tonight in a special train from his summer lodge on the shore of Pelican Bay, Klamath county, where he had spent a vacation of several weeks. Mr. Harriman's journey to this city was in the nature of a royal one. He was met at the various cities on his route by the mayors and delegations of leading citizens who called attention to the railway needs of their respeceive localities.

To all Mr. Harriman gave the assurance that he expected to make extensive additions to the Southern Pacific system in Oregon, but could give no definite plans, as they had not reached such a stage.

"Confidence of the people and a growing disposition to coöperate with the railroads," said Mr. Harriman, "is helping matters quite materially at this time and if the improvement continues we will soon be able to secure the funds needed for carrying out a number of projects which would have been well under way before this time had it not been for the unfortunate financial trouble last fall. This growing sentiment, which recognizes a mutuality of interest between the railroads and the people, is certain to bring good results and it is our intention to do whatever we can to supply the legitimate demand for transportation facilities."

An informal reception in honor of Mr. Harriman and the visiting railroad officials was held at the Portland Commercial Club tonight.

MAGNATE AT ALBANY.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

ALBANY (Or.) Sept. 5.—"I'd like to know what you have got against me," said E. H. Harriman, replying to a remark that the people of Oregon would send him to the United States Senate if he would make his home here.

The magnate arrived at noon on his special train, stopping here half an hour. He was greeted by the Mayor and several hundred citizens.

Answering an inquiry as to whether he would extend the Corvallis and Eastern, Mr. Harriman said:

"I intend to do more extensive railroad building this year than for a long time, and Oregon will receive her share. I will build across the mountains, but have formed no definite plans yet. My reception at Albany

BANK SCANDAL.

EXAMINER DRUNK.

Closes Two Banks In Pittsburgh.

Officials Declare Fifty Per Cent. of Deposits on Hand.

Pronounce Action Greatest Outrage Ever Perpetrated.

Friends Take Federal Officer Home in Deplorable Condition.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PITTSBURGH (Pa.) Sept. 5.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A tremendous sensation has been caused by the disclosures following the closing of the Cosmopolitan National Bank today. The bank was closed at 9 o'clock this morning by order of National Bank Examiner John B. Cunningham.

E. A. Kitzmiller, Charles A. Muehlbrenner and other officials of the bank declare that Cunningham was drunk when he closed the bank, and that they are prepared to make affidavit to that effect. They declare the bank has 50 per cent. of its deposits actually within the walls of the institution at the present time.

"It is the greatest outrage that was ever perpetrated on a bank," declared Vice-President Kitzmiller in the absence of President John McClurg this afternoon. "I can only account for it by the fact that Cunningham was drunk, and has been drunk for some time.

FELL DOWN CLUB STEPS.

"His condition is known to every one. It was common talk that the other night he fell down the steps of the Duquesne Club while drunk and that at all times when he has visited banks he was under the influence of liquor. For further proof I have only to refer you to Cunningham's condition at the present time."

When Cunningham was found his condition was deplorable. In order to get him out of sight his friends took him home.

D. J. Richardson, cashier of the bank, said:

"It is absolutely past comprehension that the bank should have been closed. Yesterday our deposits aggregated $900,000. We have $320,332 on hand, which includes $100,000 of State funds secured by bond, and $100,000 United States funds secured by government bonds."

INVESTIGATION PROMISED.

Vice-President Kitzmiller stated tonight that the entire matter would be laid before the Comptroller of the Currency and that he believed the Cosmopolitan would be reopened for business within a few days.

The Cosmopolitan was one of the younger banks of the city. It has been prosperous, however, and within the past year has been forced to move into larger quarters.

During the failure of the Enterprise National Bank, which was wrecked by politicians, it was claimed that the Cosmopolitan was also in trouble. It weathered the storm successfully, however, although it is admitted that it has carried some political paper.

Even at present it is admited that it carries some of the paper of the Santa Fé Railroad, in which "Bull" Andrews, Territorial Representative of New Mexico, is interested.

Its depositors were composed largely of business men along Liberty and Cross streets and the closing of the institution created the most intense excitement among those merchants.

PREFERS DOG TO FAMILY.

Prof. Hanson Deserts Wife and Children, Taking Canine Friend.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 5.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Prof. Charles Wabash Hanson, tutor to the children of some of the wealthiest families of Evanston and former principal of the Evanston Business College, has demonstrated the truth of his boast that he loved his dog better than his wife and eleven children.

He has run away with the animal, leaving his family dependent, today, upon the charity of neighbors and authorities.

Hanson and his terrier disappeared two days ago, but the wife, too proud to complain, suffered with her children until sympathetic neighbors reported the affair to the police. Steps toward placing the children in an institution have been taken.

OVER CAUTIOUS.

FRANCE SLOW IN MOROCCO.

Lost Diplomatic Victory by Hesitation.

Germany Scored and Powers Will Fall in Line.

Franco-Spanish Note Is Now Being Awaited.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Sept. 5.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Germany has scored unmistakably in the Moroccan business except in one particular, the increase of friction in France and the postponement to a yet remote future of the day when Paris and Berlin will unite to bury the hatchet.

The really big mistake has been made by France and not by Germany. Clemenceau waited too long for the crucial step. Had France and Spain, agents of the powers, acted promptly after the decisive defeat of Abd El-Aziz by Mulai Hafid in the night battle of August 20, and taken the initiative in a proposal to the powers to recognize the usurper on condition that he pledge himself to observe the Algeciras act, Clemenceau would have won a great diplomatic victory. Paris and Madrid hesitated and lost.

Spanish public opinion, as distinct from the official attitude, sharply condemns the course of the French government. El Heraldo says:

"France and Spain are alike involved in the debacle of Abd-El-Aziz and may be thankful if Germany spares them the chagrin of seeing the victorious arms of Mulai Hafid turned against the mandatories of the Algeciras act. More than six months ago Paris and Madrid ought to have changed their talk and prepared for the inevitable. Germany threw out hints then which would have been accepted had they come from any other source."

Some Spanish papers, like the Espana Nueva, reproach Clemenceau with having refused to recognize Mulai Hafid when the two capitals of the Spereefian Empire, Fez and Marrakeesh, had proclaimed him Sultan.

"Whatever the preliminaries may be," says a London week-end review, "our friends in Paris may as well make up their minds to join as gracefully as possible in the consecration of Mulai Hafid by Europe."

Another London journal suggests that "for the first time in his administration Clemenceau has lacked the requisite resoluteness and has displayed something of the fatal procrastination of the fallen Moor."

POWERS SLOW TO ACT.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

PARIS, Sept. 5.—Reports received here from French diplomats abroad all are of similar import—namely, that the powers are content to await the receipt of the Franco Spanish note regarding the Moroccan situation before taking any action on the communication forwarded by Germany to the effect that Mulai Hafid should now be recognized as the legitimate Sultan of that empire.

The conviction is now stronger here that Germany, in view of the manner in which her maneuver has been received, will refrain from pressing the issue further.

SPAIN AMENDS NOTE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

BERLIN, Sept. 5.—The delay in the issuance of the joint French and Spanish note to the powers, relative to the situation in Morocco, is due to the amendments made by Spain to the French proposals which prolong the negotiations. Spain, it is learned officially here, thinks it is wiser not to require Mulai Hafid to accept so many conditions as France first suggested.

The position taken by France ten days ago is believed to have been materially changed in consequence of the attitudes taken by Germany and Spain.

ALFONSO UPHOLDS FRANCE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SAN SEBASTIAN, Sept. 5.—Premier Maura, after an interview here today with King Alfonso, announced that Spain would act in unison with France in the Moroccan difficulty.

BRINGS FRESH HOPE.

NEW CURE FOR CONSUMPTION.

RUSSIAN SCIENTIST MAKES IMPORTANT DISCOVERY.

Evolves a Serum Which He Calls "Tuberculinum Purum," and Which He Claims Has Remarkable Power in the Treatment of Great White Plague.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—Tests are being made in New York City of a new serum treatment for tuberculosis, the invention of Dr. Gabrilowitch, director of the Imperial Russian Sanatorium for Tuberculosis at Halila, Finland.

Dr. Gabrilowitch, whose fame as a scientist is world-wide, is about to start from Finland for the United States to read a paper explaining and describing his discovery before the International Congress of Tuberculosis, which will convene in Washington on September 23.

So careful has Dr. Gabrilowitch been to avoid making assertions that might not be borne out by the subsequent tests that even in Russia very few physicians have had an opportunity to learn of what the new treatment for the great white plague consists.

Two months ago, after having tested its effects for more than a year, Dr. Gabrilowitch invited a few physicians to make tests of the serum for the purpose of confirming or disproving the conclusions at which he had arrived. So successful have those tests been—in America at least—that arrangements have been made with the Tuberculosis Society of St. Petersburg to furnish the serum in sufficient quantities for the use of any physician and hospital that may wish to try it.

While no public announcement has as yet been made as to how he makes the serum, it is known that it is based on the so-called old tuberculin discovered by Prof. Robert Koch, and announced by him in 1890 as a cure for tuberculosis.

Koch's serum, however, caused in its use so many complications that its remedial value was almost nullified. Dr. Gabrilowitch has attempted to purify the Koch serum and has named his product tuberculinum purum, or pure tuberculin.

Prince Arthur of Connaught.

CLASS STRUGGLE.

STARVING MEN MOB PRINCE AT FEAST.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

GLASGOW (Scotland) Sept. 5.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] With cries of denunciation against the city corporation officials for their extravagance in giving an elaborate luncheon today in honor of Prince Arthur of Connaught, while thousands of the citizens are in want, a crowd of unemployed attempted to mob the Prince and to storm the hall where the luncheon was served.

Warned of the attack a heavy guard of police was at the station when the Prince arrived and an escort surrounded him as he was driven to the City Hall. All along the route the mob jeered and hooted the Prince and the police, the latter being compelled to beat off the crowd on numerous occasions. A number of persons were injured by the fierce tactics that the officers adopted.

After the Prince entered the hall the mob attempted to break in, but hundreds of extra police fought the infuriated men back.

The demonstration was the fiercest yet made by the socialists and unemployed, many of whom are on the verge of starvation owing to the depression here in business and industrial affairs.

Today's attack was the outcome of the refusal of the Municipal Council to give a hearing to the unemployed on Thursday night, when 400 men attempted to break into the Council chamber. The people are demanding that the city do something to furnish employment to the needy.

TEXT-BOOK FIGHT.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 5.—That a quiet but determined fight has been going on for two years between the Chicago school authorities and the various publishing firms—the officials trying to keep text-book prices down and the publishers insisting on raising them—came to light yesterday in connection with Trustee John J. Sonsteby's proposed invitation of the so-called "book trust."

During recent months the rise in the price of books purchased by the Chicago school children has been a steady one. In almost every instance when a new book was adopted or a contract for an old renewed, the price demanded by the publishers has been found to have increased anywhere from 25 to 50 per cent. To combat this tendency various expedients have been used by Superintendent Cooley and the members of the board. One of these is the judicious use of the "open list." Books placed in this list are not prescribed for exclusive use in the classrooms. They are merely authorized and they may use them or not as they see fit.

DESERT WASTE IS TRANSFORMED.

SUGAR BEET INDUSTRY HAS WROUGHT GREAT CHANGE.

Has Made Southwestern Kansas and Southeastern Colorado a Veritable Garden—Electric Line Projected to Run Between Dodge City, Kan., and Canyon City, Colo.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TOPEKA (Kan.) Sept. 5.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The extension of the sugar beet industry in Southwestern Kansas and Southeastern Colorado during the past three years has transformed the Arkansas Valley from a desert waste to a veritable garden.

Millions of dollars of eastern money is being invested there. Garden City, Syracuse, Lamar, La Junta and Rocky Ford have grown from villages to cities of from 2000 to 10,000 people.

The latest enterprise which will stimulate the growth of that vast area is a proposed electric line from Dodge City, Kan., to Cañon City, Colo., a distance of over 200 miles. A state charter has been granted to this new company, with a $5,000,000 capital, and the charter fee of $2550 has been paid into the State Treasury.

The Santa Fé railroad traverses the Arkansas Valley between the points named. The valley is from ten to fifteen miles wide, and is practically all under irrigation. It is the plan of the electric line promoters to veer away from the Santa Fé road six or eight miles, and run short feeders to the principal towns along its line, thus covering the entire alfalfa and sugar beet section.

Five sugar beet mills have been built in that region at a cost of over $8,000,000. It is said that 10,000 German families will locate there next year, and engage in the growing of sugar beets, canteloupes and fruit.

Want to Shut Out Inexperienced Persons.

Would Decrease Number of Accidents, They Say.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Army officers and civilians are marveling today over Orville Wright's latest feat with his aëroplane, repaired after a former trial.

His machine glided off the starting track and into the air as gracefully as a swan, made five and one-half circles of the cavalry parade grounds, remained aloft four and one-half minutes, and came to earth at the entrance to its tent as easily and as lightly as a feather.

Actuated by the death of Charles Oliver Jones at Waterville, Me., on Wednesday, by falling from his airship, leading aëronauts gathered at Fort Meyer to witness the aëroplane tests are discussing the advisability of the enactment of a law to prevent accidents of this character. It is proposed to make it illegal for any one not holding an aëronaut's license from a recognized aëro club to make an ascension.

Aëro clubs have been formed in nearly twenty cities, and nearly all balloon ascensions by recognized aëronauts are made under the auspices of the Aëro Club of America. It is proposed that these clubs be given power to issue licenses.

WILBUR WRIGHT MAKES SUCCESSFUL FLIGHT.

Covers Distance of Fourteen or Fifteen Miles, and Remains in Air Within Fraction of Minute of the French Aeroplanist's Time—Had Perfect Control of Machine.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

LEMANS, Sept. 5.—Wilbur Wright, the aëroplanist of Dayton, O., made a magnificent and highly successful flight here this morning.

His machine was in the air for 19m. 48 2-5s., thus approaching within a fraction of a minute Henri Farman's record for the longest public official flight.

The distance covered by Mr. Wright was not accurately measured, but it is estimated at between fourteen and a half and fifteen miles. The feat was accomplished on the field of Auvours, and was accompanied by a remarkable series of evolutions, demonstrating the precision of Mr. Wright's control of the machine.

When he alighted easily within 300 feet of his starting place, the American aëroplanist was overwhelmed with congratulations. He said he could have remained in the air longer, but he descended on account of an abnormal noise made by the motor.

M. Boullee, who timed the flight, estimated that the average height of the aëroplane from the ground was thirty-five feet, and that its speed exceeded thirty-seven miles an hour.

After readjusting his motor, Mr. Wright prepared for another flight, but in the meantime, a strong wind had arisen, blowing at times as high as twenty-four miles an hour. Nevertheless Mr. Wright launched his machine, and the aëroplane was slipping along nicely when suddenly, when he had reached a point opposite a group of trees, a heavy gust of wind threatened to drive him into the branches. To avoid this, Mr. Wright turned his machine sharply, but he had lifted the right wing too much, and the left wing came in contact with the ground. This brought about a repetition of the accident of August 23, when the delicate framework was deranged and torn from a similar cause.

CHARGES HOLD-UP.

One Small Boy Accuses Another of Taking All His Money by Force.

John Fellows, aged 14 years, was arrested last night on the charge of robbing Fred Meyers, a newsboy, aged 9 years, of 31 cents. He admitted taking the money, but says that it fell out of young Meyers's pocket and that he grabbed it and ran.

The newsboy asserts that Fellows, whom he did not know, met him at Sixth and Hill streets, while on his way home about 7 o'clock, and asked him how much money he had. Drawing his knife, Meyers says that Fellows compelled him to empty his pockets.

Fellows lives with his parents at No. 1349 East Fifty-fifth street, and was taken to the Detention Home. Young Meyers's home is at No. 933 South Grand avenue.

GETS MILLION FROM BAD DEBT.

QUICKSILVER FOUND ON LAND THOUGHT WORTHLESS.

H. E. Perry of Chicago, Who Accepted Two Sections in Texas Because He Could Make no Other Collection, Becomes Owner of Mines Producing $5000 a Month.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 5.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] H. E. Perry of No. 1619 Prairie avenue, Chicago, is the luckiest man in the United States, for he saw a bad debt grow into a million dollars. Several years ago Mr. Perry was forced to take two sections of land near Terlingua, Tex., on a debt. Situated 100 miles from the nearest railroad point, in a region that is mountainous and barren of all vegetation, and under the terrific heat of a semi-tropical sun, the land was considered worthless. It was hardly fit for goat grazing.

One day, some time after the first discovery of quicksilver in the Terlingua district, a Mexican goat herder accidentally came across an outcropping of cinnabar rock upon one of Mr. Perry's sections of land. The ore when tested proved to be rich in quicksilver, running as high as 40 per cent.

One day Mr. Perry was agreeably suprised to receive a letter at his office in Chicago offering him $50,000 cash for his 1280 acres. He had considered the land worth not to exceed $1000, and the letter was a mystery to him. The writer did not state what had caused the enormous increase in value, so Perry investigated and learned that he had one of the most valuable quicksilver mines in the world. He is working it now. It is valued at upward of $1,000,000. During the time that it has been operating, quicksilver to the value of about $5000 a month has been extracted from a ten-ton furnace.

The Chisos mine is said to be far superior in richness and productiveness to the new Almaden quicksilver mines in California, where the ore runs only 1½ per cent. In order to increase the output of the mine preparations are now being made to extend the shaft to a depth of 1000 feet. A new twenty-ton furnace has just been installed, and an ore crusher of modern type will soon be placed in operation.

Russia Urges Compliance With Pelagic Sealing Agreement to Protect Herds.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

VICTORIA (B. C.) Sept. 5.—News was received by the Glenfargg that the Russian Ambassador in Tokio, M. Malevitch, is endeavoring to have Japan join the Pelagic sealing agreement between Great Britain, the United States and Russia, under which restrictions are made for the preservation of the seal herds in Bering Sea, and the Commanderoffsky Island rookeries.

The Russian action is taken as the result of the recent seizures of Japanese sealing vessels for poaching at the Copper Islands. It was not the Japanese government that proposed entering the arrangement as previously reported.

The Tokio government is considering the proposal.

MUNICIPAL RAILWAY FRAUD.

A Cleveland Taxpayer Files Suit to Declare Grant Null and Void.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CLEVELAND (O.) Sept. 5.—Suit filed in the Common Pleas Court today by James K. Farasy, taxpayer, asks that the security grant of the Cleveland Railway Company be declared null and void, and the lease of the property to the Municipal Traction Company be set aside. Fraud and financial interest by city officials is named as basis for the suit.

The petition declares the Municipal Traction Company is a fraud upon the city and its taxpayers without legal or financial responsibility and was wholly and solely controlled and conducted by Tom L. Johnson, Mayor of Cleveland.

It is further declared the franchise grant is a fraud because it provides a higher rates of fare than had been offered by the Cleveland Electric Railway Company of seven tickets for 25 cents, with transfers. It is alleged that the public funds of the city were used to promote the interests of the 3-cent fare lines. Five hundred thousand dollars is named as the sum so used.

WIFE'S SHARE, THIRD.

MRS. DUNPHY GETS DIVORCE.

Given Sixty Thousand Dollars of Common Estate.

Charge of Extreme Cruelty Goes Uncontested.

Husband's Chief Concern to Reduce Alimony.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 5.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. James C. Dunphy obtained an interlocutory decree of divorce from her husband by a decision today of Judge Graham. The courts awards her $60,000, which is nearly a one-third interest in her husband's estate. The sum of $750 was also awarded her for counsel fees.

Judge Graham reviewed the grounds on which the suit was brought, and said the plaintiff was entitled to her divorce, as there was no denial of acts of cruelty. The only question in dispute was the amount to which Mrs. Dunphy was entitled for her support.

The testimony brought out the fact that Dunphy's estate consisted of only a little over a $200,000 interest in the estates of his father, William Dunphy and his mother, Carmen U. Dunphy. He has been popularly credited with being a millionaire, but the testimony showed that the estates were barely paying expenses, and that Dunphy's income did not exceed $500 a month. Dunphy desired the court to make an order for $100 a month alimony, but Mrs. Dunphy wanted a lump sum set apart for her.

The Dunphy divorce case was one of the most sensational of recent years in local courts. Mrs. Dunphy accused her husband of extreme brutality and in support of her allegations put on the stand several witnesses, who testified that he was habitually intoxicated, that on a number of occasions he had addressed his wife with vile epithets, that on several occasions he had threatened to blow her head off, and that once he had attacked and cut her with a razor. Another witness testified he had driven Dunphy about to numerous wayside resorts with other women, and that on one occasion the defendant had purchased sealskins for several of them.

Dunphy made no attempt to refute this testimony.

Mrs. James C. Dunphy,
who was granted a divorce in San Francisco yesterday with $60,000 alimony from reputed millionaire.

Twelve Rodents With Tags to Be Paid for at Fifty Dollars Apiece.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 5.—In order to stimulate the zeal of those who are engaged in ridding the city of rats, to prevent the possible recurrence of cases of bubonic plague, twelve rats, each bearing a tag inscribed with a private mark, were turned loose at o'clock this afternoon, one in each of the sanitary districts.

For the return of each rat so tagged to the office of the sanitary bureau, a reward of $50 will be paid. Any regular sanitary inspector bringing in one of the marked rodents will be promoted, in addition to being paid the reward. The release and recapture of the rats is expected to aid the authorities in determining the direction in which these animals migrate through the city.

SALT LAKE CITY, Sept. 5.—That the great mesas, cliffs and cañons that now form a large part of the desolate region included in San Juan county, in the southeastern part of Utah, was once the home of an extensive population that had reached some degre of civilization is the opinion of Prof. Byron Cummings of the University of Utah, who has just returned from three months' exploring trip of that region.

It has already been established that this desert stretch was once inhabited, but through the efforts of Prof. Cummings, and his co-workers it is shown that not only were these desolate cliffs and desert stretches once the center of a considerable population, but that the people had arrived at a considerable degree of cleverness in building and the manufacture of pottery and weapons.

MEETING AT SAN FRANCISCO WILL CONSIDER PLANS.

Modification of the Drainage Bill, Appropriating $400,000, to Be Considered With Other Matters Affecting the Sacramento, San Joaquin and Feather Rivers.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 5.—One of the most important meetings in regard to the improvement of California rivers to be held in recent years will be held here next Monday, September 7, for the purpose of discussing the modification of the drainage bill by the appropriation of $400,000 by the State, the bill before Congress calling for an appropriation of $400,000 by the Federal government for the betterment of conditions of California rivers.

This meeting has been called jointly by the River Improvement and Drainage Association of California and the Sacramento Drainage Commission.

All matters pertaining to improvement of conditions on the Sacramento, San Joaquin and Feather rivers and their tributaries will be thoroughly discussed at this meeting, with the idea that the two organizations perfect concerted action for the general betterment of the State's waterways.

Schwartz went into the well on Wednesday, lowering himself down with a rope run through a block. The block became detached, and the man was a prisoner thirty-five feet below the surface, standing in the water at the bottom.

Despite his cries and struggles to reach the top by cutting steps in the walls, the man was forced to stay in the well until thirty-six hours had passed, when his employer, happening to go to the well, saw him at the bottom, and rescued him, stiff with cold and nearly exhausted from hunger and fatigue.

FRENZIED FINANCIERS.

San Francisco Has Colony of Four Now.

Martel and Nash Held for False Reports.

Meet Bartnett and Brown; Expect Haven.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 5.—The "bankers' colony" at the San Francisco County Jail was today increased by three more members. A. F. Martell, president of the Market-street Bank, which is now in the hands of a receiver; W. A. Nash, cashier of the bank, and L. Q. Havens, a former cashier of the suspended institution, who is also a son-in-law to President Martell. All three bankers are tonight at the County Jail, having been unable to secure bail. All three were indicted.

All three were indicted by the grand jury late yesterday afternoon on the charge of having made false reports to the State Bank Commission as to the actual condition of the Market street bank. Martel and Nash, arrested last night, spent the night in the city prison, but were turned over to the Sheriff today and transferred to the County Jail.

Haven has not yet been apprehended by the police. It is believed he is trying to arrange for bail and that he will then give himself up. Friends of Martel and Nash failed in their efforts to secure bail for their release, fixed at $10,000 cash, or $20,000 bonds, each.

Besides Martel and Nash, there are at the County Jail Walter J. Bartnett, former vice-president of the California Safe Deposit and Trust Company, which failed last November owing depositors over $8,000,000, and J. Dalzell Brown, manager of the same bank.

Bartnett was convicted of embezzlement in connection with the hypothecation of the Colton securities and sentenced to ten years in San Quentin. He is in jail pending the action of the Appellate Court on his appeal. Brown pleaded guilty to the charge of embezzlement and was given eighteen months in San Quentin. He was brought from the penitentiary to testify against Bartnett and James Treadwell, the latter a director of the same institution, who was acquitted last week on the charge of perjury.

RIFLE DUEL FATAL.

Farmer and Prospector Engage in Long Combat Over Mining Claim.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WINNEMUCCA (Nev.) Sept. 5.—News has reached here of a tragedy that occurred at Willow Point yesterday, in which Ed McKinzie, a prospector, was killed by C. F. Hanson, a farmer, during a desperate rifle duel. Two children of Hanson were severely wounded by stray bullets.

The shooting was caused by a dispute over a mining claim. According to the information, McKinzie rode up to the Hanson farm, and seeing Mrs. Hanson, the mother, standing in the yard, opened fire on her, but missed. She sought refuge in the house. The oldest son rushed out to order McKinzie away, and was met with a fusilade of shots. The father, hearing the shooting, hurriedly procured his rifle and met McKinzie, when a fierce battle followed, the combatants running from wood pile to trees and rocks.

McKinzie fired many bullets into the house, and two of the children, in bed with the grandmother, were shot. After the battle had lasted half an hour Hanson, with a well-directed blow, laid the desperate prospector low.

Hanson says he had to kill McKinzie to save his family and himself. The Coroner and Sheriff Lamb have left for the scene.

Chino Man Shoots Himself When His Father Urges Him to Stop Drinking and Go Home.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

POMONA, Sept. 5.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] With the words: "It's all off, father, I'll never go home," John Pickens, son of George Pickens, both of whom reside on Tenth street, Chino, drew a revolver and shot himself through the lungs, grazing the heart, tonight. According to attending physicians he will die.

Pickens, who is about 26 years old, had been drinking for a day or so. He was sitting in a wagon in front of a stable when his father met him and quietly remonstrated against his drinking any more. The parent urged him to come home. Young Pickens stepped from the wagon to the ground, uttered the words quoted and drew a revolver. His father leaped to his side and sought to deflect his son's aim. In doing so, his thumb was powder burned.

Immediately after the shot was fired a doctor was summoned, the ambulance telephoned for, and the unfortunate man was rushed to the Pomona Valley Hospital, where he is now dying.

Couples Applying for Marriage Licenses Have Found Matrimonial Sea Tempestuous.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND, Sept. 5.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A complicated tale of the vicissitudes sometimes encountered on the matrimonial sea was disclosed today at the State capital when two marriage licenses were issued to James Phelps and Mrs. Nellie Clyde, and William Lutz and Mrs. Perlina Hermann.

There is a string of complications in which Phelps, the groom in one of the matches, and Perlina Hermann, the bride in the other, form the central figures. Of this quartette, Phelps and the now Mrs. Lutz were twice married to and twice divorced from each other within the past five years, this being Phelps's fifth venture into Cupid's realm, while Mrs. Lutz has just entered upon her third term. Mrs. Nellie Clyde-Phelps and Lutz are launching out upon a second voyage.

Mrs. Hermann-Phelps-Lutz and Phelps were first married in February, 1903, and divorced in October, 1906; remarried in December, 1906, and divorced the second time in March, 1908. The required six months' period elapsed only a few days ago.

They made application for marriage licenses not fifteen minutes apart today, neither knowing that the other was contemplating wedlock.

BURIED GOLD IN PIG PEN.

Farmer Finds Treasure Melted Into a Lump by Fire.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

BEREA (O.) Sept. 5.—Fearful of banks, Frank Marks, a Longsville farmer, converted all his money into gold coin and hid the metal under the floor of his pig pen. While he and his wife were in Cleveland, robbers searched his house, ripping mattresses and upholstery in an effort to locate the hidden wealth.

Incidentally the thieves fired the barn and pig pen. Neighbors fighting the flames saved Marks's house.

On his return home Marks surprised his friends by digging in the ruins of the pig pen and drawing forth a huge lump of gold said to be worth several thousand dollars. The gold coins had been melted by the intense heat.

SLOPE BRIEFS.

Oakland Rat Crusade Ends.

OAKLAND, Sept. 5.—Dr. John D. Logg of the United States Marine Corps, who for the past year has been in charge of the Oakland rat crusade, left this morning for San Francisco to resume his duties. He was sent to Oakland by Surgeon-General Wyman, where there was a threatened bubonic plague scare.

Fall in Water Fatal.

SAN JOSE, Sept. 5.—A Coroner's jury last evening found that Peter McKenna, who died as the result of falling in a creek on the Alvero road, came to his death from being accidentally thrown into a stream of water which produced an ademic condition of the lungs, due to weakening of the heart.

Collegiate Alumnae Entertained.

SAN JOSE, Sept. 5.—Twenty-four collegiate alumnae were entertained by Mrs. Judge Leib on the Alameda this morning, after which they went to Edendale as the guests of Mrs. J. O. Hayes at luncheon. They proceeded to Del Monte this evening.

Follows Woodbine's Course.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 5.—In order to place C. E. Rankin, under indictment for alleged embezzlement in connection with certain Ocean Shore bonds, under arrest, Detective Goss was yesterday compelled to climb up the water pipe to the third story of the Stanford apartments, where Rankin was hid behind closed doors. When the officer reached the window of Rankin's room the latter surrendered and raised the sash, submitting quietly to arrest.

Japanese Publishers Fall Out.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 5.—Manager Taniguchi of the New World, a Japanese paper published in this city, yesterday secured warrants for the arrest of S. T. Mikuriya and Ito, editors of another Japanese paper, the Telegraph, on a charge of criminal libel. A warrant was also issued for the arrest of K. S. Kuwabaram, owner and manager of the Telegraph, on complaint of M. Odona, the plaintiff alleging that $280 given him by the defendant for the purchase of type for the paper had been misappropriated.

To Face Abduction Charge.

SAN JOSE, Sept. 5.—William German, who was arrested last night on the charge of having abducted Abel Ross of Salinas, 16 years of age, was taken back to that city today by Sheriff Nesbit.

Tried to Kill Father-in-Law.

OAKLAND, Sept. 5.—Albert Andrews, found guilty of assault with a deadly weapon on his father-in-law Frank Foster, was yesterday sentenced to six years at San Quentin. Andrews some weeks ago attacked Foster, who, he charged, was keeping Andrew's wife away from him, and fired several shots at the elder man, none of them taking affect. When the police arrived, Andrews turned his gun on himself, but the wound he inflicted was slight, and soon healed.

CONFIDENCE GAME.

HER WEDDING WAS FICTITIOUS.

WOMAN IS LURED INTO BOGUS MARRIAGE AND ROBBED.

"Husband" Is Believed to Have Had Confederate Officiate as Justice of the Peace and Perform Ceremony—Victim Loses $14,000 in Money and $4800 in Diamonds.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 5.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. Margaret Maynard, in revenge for being lured, as she believes, into a bogus marriage with Dr. Edward Lord, alias Goldberg, who posed as an army and navy physician, this afternoon, took out warrants before Judge Dicker, charging her "husband" with the theft of $14,000 in currency and diamonds valued at $4800.

The warrant followed the receipt from Major R. H. Boardman, chief of police of Washington, D. C., informing Mrs. Maynard that there is no record of her "marriage" to "Dr." Lord, and that she must have been duped by the alleged swindler. Lord was a steward at the local naval recruiting station when he posed as a naval physician and surgeon.

Major Boardman found that Lord had registerel himself at the New Willard Hotel in Washington as "Edward Lord and wife, U.S.N.," a little more than a year ago. It was in this hotel that the wedding is supposed to have occured. It is believed that the man had a confidence man pose as a justice of the peace and perform the ceremony.

FLASHES FROM WIRES.

The formal acceptance by Harry K. Thaw of the notice that the first meeting of his creditors will be held Monday, and the notice to attend the meeting for examination was filed by Referee in Bankruptcy W. A. Blair yesterday. It was stated at the office of Referee Blair that it is not known whether Thaw will be present.

OVATION FOR HARRIMAN and other points in Oregon has been most pleasing. We must work together."

SHRINERS KIDNAP MAGNATE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

PORTLAND (Or.) Sept. 5.—An Evening Telegram special from Eugene, Or., says: By the waving of the great red banner of the Shriners' Chinese Band, the Harriman special was brought to a stand at Halsey this morning. The wizard was carried from his car on the broad shoulders of former United States District Attorney W. C. Bristol, and pleasantly greeted every Shriner en route to Eugene.

The Shriners' train was held up at Halsey to await the Harriman train, due from Eugene. At first it was decided to kidnap the wizard and carry him on to Eugene, but he pleaded so hard and W. W. Cotton offered to give "zem-zem" water to the whole crowd on its return to Portland if Mr. Harriman were not kidnaped, that he was allowed to proceed.

As the railroad king's special slowed down, Mr. Bristol boarded Harriman's car, dragging the magnate out onto the platform, and then lifting the man of many railroads onto his shoulders. When the fez-wearers caught a glimpse of the new guest, the cheering was deafening. Drums beat, fifes blew, engines rang their bells, and there was a great clatter.

"What in the world do you want with me?" asked Harriman. "But it don't matter what, I guess. You've got me."

"We will take you to Eugene," came the answer from the crowd.

"Please don't; please don't," pleaded Harriman. "Not that I don't like that city and you, but I have just got to get into Portland."

At this point a Shriner's badge was pinned on him. Then the newly-made mystic man bowed low and started to make a speech, but he couldn't be heard. Then a fez was placed on his head and the train pulled out.

RECEPTION AT ROSEBERG.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

ROSEBERG (Or.) Sept. 5.—E. H. Harriman was just arising from bed when his special train pulled into Roseburg, early this morning. He was greeted by a delegation of prominent citizens of Roseberg and Coos Bay, who accepted his invitation to ride on with him and take breakfast, the train stopping here only fifteen minutes. A large basket of fruit was presented to Mr. Harriman by the ladies of Roseburg, which was pronounced by him the finest seen in Oregon.

Three of the Roseburg delegation who left the special at Isadora, twenty-four miles north, and returned here on the south-bound train, report that during the time spent with the magnate there was no conversation on railroad matters; that they merely discussed the resources of Southern Oregon. They were told by General Manager O'Brien of the Oregon lines, who is accompanying Mr. Harriman, that in view of the antagonism to his policies these warm greetings from Oregon towns greatly surprised and pleased him.

MAY BUILD TO COOS BAY.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

EUGENE (Or.) Sept. 5.—Mr. Harriman stated to the joint committee of Marshfield and Roseburg citizens who rode on his special train with him from Roseburg to Eugene, that he would immediately send a man to Coos Bay to investigate conditions there. If he could be insured interest of 4 per cent. on an investment of $5,000,000 for ten years, he would order a road built connecting Coos Bay with the main line of the Southern Pacific from the Columbia River to Klamath, the Oregon Eastern coming later by easy stages.

A large crowd assembled at the depot and the distinguished visitor was met by the leading citizens of Eugene and taken for an automobile ride around the city, the train leaving for Albany at 11 o'clock. Mr. Harriman is accompanied by John Muir, the eminent scientist, who has been his guest at Pelican Lodge.

General Manager E. E. Calvin of the Southern Pacific is also on board the special train.

PLANS RECEPTION.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 5.—An informal reception will be tendered to E. H. Harriman at the Fairmont Hotel next Tuesday afternoon by the Manufacturers' and Producers' Association. Mr. Harriman is expected to arrive in San Francisco Monday.

It was at first proposed that a banquet be given in honor of the railroad magnate, but when his wishes were consulted he expressed preference for an informal reception. A large gathering of business men and representatives of the various commercial organizations in the city will attend the reception.

An invitation is extended by the Manufacturers and Producers' Association to commercial bodies and citizens generally throughout the State to send representatives, or come in person, to this city on Tuesday, so as to welcome Mr. Harriman and discuss with him the the interests of their various sections.

STUDENTS SPEND AWFUL NIGHT.

Are Caught by Rising Tide and Compelled to Stay on Narrow Ledge Till Daybreak.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND, Sept. 5.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] With the hungry breakers lapping at their feet throughout the long night, threatening every moment to snatch them from the scanty footing a tiny ledge on a steep cliff afforded, three students of Mount Angel College spent an awful night Wednesday on the Oregon coast near Tillamook.

They were cut off by the rising tide and could not retrace their steps after walking along the beach beyond a jutting headland. Martin Calmus, John and Mike Melchoir were the three who had the nerve-racking experience. Throughout the long night until daylight came and the tide had receded sufficiently for them to escape they clung with benumbed fingers above the water.

When they made their way back to camp and told their story they were on the verge of a nervous collapse.

Hop Pickers Win Strike.

UKIAH (Cal.) Sept. 5.—The strike at the Horst hop fields was settled this morning by paying the pickers 80 cents per hundred in weekly settlements, with a bonus of 20 cents per hundred at the end of the season. About two hundred of the pickers went back to work this afternoon. It is feared that the granting of this concession will cause trouble in other fields in the valley, which are only paying 80 cents.

How to Brown Hair Without Detection

Mrs. Potter's Walnut-Juice Hair Stain Can Be Applied in a Few Minutes Every Month.

There is a way of staining gray, faded or bleached hair any shade desired, from a beautiful rich brown to almost black, so that it is difficult, if not impossible, for even experts to detect that the hair has been treated in any way.

This preparation has the tremendous advantage over hair-dyes containing no silver sulphur, lead or other poisons which invariably cause hair-falling. It has no odor, no oil, no sediment, and no grease, and does not rub off on the clothing. It makes the hair grow out fluffy and luxuriant.

A liberal amount as a laboratory trial package of this walnut-juice hair-stain, together with a booklet on hair, is sent by Mrs. Potter's Hygienic Supply Co., 541 Groton Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio, in plain, sealed wrapper, if you will send twenty-five cents in stamps or coin, and if it is desired to continue the treatment, full sized packages may be obtained at drug stores for one dollar a package.

It is applied in a few moments with the comb, and it stains nothing but the hair, and stains it evenly from tip to root. It produces any shade desired from a beautiful rich brown to almost black.

One bottle of this walnut-juice hair-stain can last a year.

Mrs. Potter's Walnut-Juice Hair-Stain is recommended and for sale in Los Angeles by Owl Drug Co., 320 So. Spring and Fifth and Broadway.

FOREST FIRES RAGING.

the Duluth, Mesaba and Northern Railway started a special train, crowded with homeless people, who will be taken care of here.

No organized efforts have been started here to succor the refugees, but the Mayor is expected to take the situation in hand.

The most destructive of the many forest fires was that which embraced Chisholm in its fiery grip and completely destroyed it. For three days the dry woods have been on fire west and north of the town, and small bush fires were reported to the eastward.

THREE FIRES JOIN.

Gradually these closed in upon the doomed town, but no danger was felt by the citizens, as the town is protected on the east by Long Year Lake, a small body of water, and there are many mining locations to the west, in which district the citizens believed the advancing flames would be stopped.

At noon today, the three walls of fire joined, making a semi-circle of threatening flames, which swept toward the little mining town with a rush and a roar. The hot breath of the conflagration was felt as the advancing flames rolled over the hills, licking up every tree, stump and every vestige of plant growth, and sending up a hurricane of red-hot brands that fell upon the doomed town.

At the first advent of these flaming couriers, the citizens of Chisholm went forth to fight the flames. The fire department was unable to cover a large territory, and although intermittent blazes started by the falling brands were quickly extinguished, the wall of fire rolled onward toward the town and the citizens soon realized that its destruction was inevitable.

FLEE FOR LIVES.

So quickly did the fire communicate to the outlying districts that the citizens did not have time to save any of their household goods or personal effects. The people had time to escape with their lives, however, and soon the roads leading from the towns were thronged with the fleeing people in wagons, on horses and on foot.

There are two roads from Hibbing to Chisholm and the most direct was in the path of the flames, necessitating travel by way of the longer road. Conveyances were at a premium. A foreigner with a small wagon and one horse offered to take a woman and three small children to Hibbing for $25.

A man overheard the conversation and drawing a revolver he pointed it at the foreigner's head and climbing into the rig compelled him to drive the party over the fire zone.

Oscar La France, editor of the Chisholm Tribune, was in his office and above him the roof was in flames before he was apprised of his danger. He was compelled to break a window to escape. Business men ran home to get their families and many separations occurred as they, in turn, fled toward the business district.

The Great Northern, the only railroad running into Chisholm, took fifteen box cars crowded with homeless people to Hibbing this evening, where the citizens are throwing open their houses, and tents are being supplied to care for the refugees, who are entering the city by hundreds.

The sheet of flames from the falling and crackling forests toyed with the western outskirts of Shisholm for several minutes late in the afternoon and then driven by the strong west wind, swept across the city, the buildings falling and disappearing before it like tender plants before the hot blast of the simoon.

AWE-INSPIRING SCENE.

Within a few minutes every structure upon both sides of Main street was burning and the residence district was being ignited. By this time most of the citizens had left the burning town, and they stood on the small rises to the southwest and watched their homes burn.

The scene was awe-inspiring in the late northern twilight, the flames seemed to lap up to the sky which was overcast with a red glow. Over the town hung a great blanket of smoke that seemed to creep down and shade the burning city from the eyes of the hundreds of tearful watchers who were beating a slow retreat to Hibbing.

Wise Talks

By the "Office Boy"

The old man says, "To keep off the rocks, obey the rudder." To do right brings good—to do wrong brings misery. You'll find that when your sins find you out they always hang around until you come in again. Isn't it funny how a man would rather win a dollar on a wager than earn five at honest labor? When a man gets up near the top of the ladder, and then slips back, there is usually a woman at the bottom of it. Still, no matter what a woman's political creed may be, she always wants protection. One touch of the milliner's finger makes the whole feminine world kin, and the name "Silverwood" in a man's hat means CORRECT STYLE and STERLING VALUE. Some people have got it in their heads that we only sell $3 hats. I think there isn't a doubt but that we sell more Stetson's than any concern in the West. We practically carry Stetson's complete line, from $4 to $12. Then we sell an awful lot of the famous Knapp-Felt hats at $4, and the Knapp-Felt-de-Luxe at $6. But the Silverwood Special $3 hat is still the best hat obtainable for that price. We've kept improving it from season to season, until you'd expect to pay $4 or $5 for it, if the price was not marked on the hat in plain figures. The new hats are ready and our hat men would be awfully glad to show them to your. Either store.

Both stores closed all day tomorrow on account of "Labor Day."

Beveridge and Hughes Open Campaign With Vigor.

POLITICAL.

OPENING GUNS BOOM IN TAFT CAMPAIGN.

Remarkable Enthusiasm Displayed by Audience at Youngstown, Ohio, and New York Governor Is Shown to Be One of Popular Leaders.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

YOUNGSTOWN (O.) Sept. 5.—Aside from formally defining issues both national and State, the opening of the Republican campaign in Ohio here today, according to Republican critics, developed an important fact, namely, that Gov. Charles E. Hughes of New York will be in great demand outside of his own State during the national campaign. The Governor not only held the attention of a crowd of thousands, who had been listening to other speakers for hours, but moved them to vigorous outbreaks of applause, and was fairly mobbed when he finished by hundreds who pressed forward to shake his hands.

His satirical comments on William J. Bryan's ideas of regulating trusts called forth shouts of laughter. Revision of the tariff and a continuance of the policies of President Roosevelt and, in Ohio, county-wide local option were the keynotes sounded.

Senator Beveridge of Indiana and Gov. Hughes delivered impressive speeches dealing with national issues, while Gov. Andrew L. Harris, renominated by his party, devoted himself to questions of import to the State of Ohio.

BRYAN A DREAMER.

Both Mr. Hughes and Mr. Beveridge dealt kindly with Mr. Bryan in his personal capacity, but insisted that he was a dreamer of dreams, a preacher and not an executive. Glowing tributes were paid to President Roosevelt.

Both speakers insisted on a revision of the tariff, from a protective to a maximum and minimum basis, in line with the policy of Germany and France.

Tariff for revenue only, the Indiana statesman declared, was obsolete and the purely protective tariff out of date. Under a maximum and minimum tariff, he said, Germany had forged ahead to the front rank in the volume and value of her foreign trade.

Arthur I. Vorys, Republican campaign manager for Ohio, was chairman of the meeting, which was held among the tall oaks of Wick Park. The day was a perfect one for an outdoor demonstration.

Gov. Harris and Senator Beveridge did not reach the city until the streets were swarming with the thousands of steel workers, clad in white uniforms, and marching clubs were ready to begin the parade through the downtown streets to the park.

The city was ornately dressed for the occasion. Senator Beveridge and Gov. Hughes left the city immediately after the exercises.

HARRIS LAUDS TAFT.

Gov. Harris, following an introductory speech by Arthur Vorys, began the speech-making with an address dealing largely with the liquor question in Ohio, which has become an important State issue.

"The name of Taft is especially dear to the people of Ohio," said Gov. Harris. "Ohio will no doubt rally to his standard as it did to that of Hayes, Garfield and of McKinley; his election will complete the quartette of Ohio Republican Presidents who contributed so much to American prosperity and good government. But with all his good record in county, State and Federal positions, he is also recognized as the truest and strongest exponent of the progressive policies of Theodore Roosevelt, to which we are unequivocally pledged in both our State and national platforms.

"With Taft on that platform there is no more doubt about the result in Ohio than in Pennsylvania. I am most heartily in accord with the Republican State platform of 1908, and especially with the exposition of Republican principles, as promulgated in the recent letter of acceptance of Judge Taft. All those who study these documents carefully will certainly appreciate the continuance of Republican rule."

Gov. Hughes followed Gov. Harris on the programme. He was frequently interrupted by applause. Gov. Hughes said:

HUGHES EXPOSES MANY WEAKNESSES OF BRYAN.

The Republican party makes appeal to public confidence as the most important political agency for conservation and for progress. By virtue of its achievements, its leadership and its aims, it stands forth as an efficient instrument for strong and capable administration, as a safeguard of stability, and of the prosperity which depends upon stability, and as an unrivaled power for the correction of abuses. It stands in striking contrast to the record of vacillation and ineptitude presented by the chief opposing party. That opposing party proffers a candidacy which is at once a monument and a guidepost. It memorializes the fallacies and unsafe policies we are asked to forget, and it points the way to business uncertainty and to the impairment of the confidence which is the security of industry and trade.

When we hear sounded a strident call to the defense of popular rights, we look carefully to see who constitute the new patriotic army into whose keeping we are asked to turn over the destinies of this great nation. The campaign watchwords "Shall the People Rule" and the demand "Whether the government shall remain a mere business asset of favor-seeking corporations" are not impressive when emblazoned on the banners of Tammany Hall and of other essential allies. The army opposing us cannot pass muster either as one of defense or of salvation, and we may well pause before we permit it, despite its boast of fidelity, to garrison our institutions.

MR. TAFT'S CANDIDACY.

No one more than I desires to see administration purged of every selfish taint, to have fair and impartial laws faithfully executed, to get rid of every vestige of special privilege at the expense of public interest, to liberate trade from unjust encroachments, to purify our electoral methods and to maintain honest representative government. And it is because of his loyalty to these ideals, because of his broad sympathies and his rare equipment in character, ability and experience, because tested in the difficult fields of judicial and administrative work he has proved his quality by eminent service, because of his varied learning, his acquaintance with affairs, his respect for constitutional government and his capacity intelligently and justly to plan and direct necessary reforms that I most earnestly support the candidacy of William Howard Taft.

POPULAR RULE.

Twelve years ago the democracy of Tilden and of Cleveland was overthrown in its own house. Under the old name, but with a new alignment and leadership, a desperate assault was made upon the credit of the country and the integrity of private debts. It was an attack upon our fundamental securities, and our belief as to the sincerity of the motive serves only to magnify the dangerous character of the attempt and the unwisdom of the leadership which inspired it. A campaign of education followed. Thousands of Democrats, more intent upon the safety of the country than upon fidelity to a party name, itself betrayed, supported the Republican, or rather the national, cause. Then ensued a great popular victory, the vindication of the conscience and intelligence of the electorate, and the people ruled in the election of William McKinley. Four years later, after the surprises of the Spanish War, with its entailment of unexpected obligations, that administration was triumphantly vindicated in popular support. President McKinley, a victim of insensate passion, laid down his life trusted and beloved by all the people. To the difficult task then devolved upon him with the problems created by an unparalleled prosperity, came a new leader dear to the people's heart. He entered upon his work with courage and determination, and four years ago he received an overwhelming vote of popular confidence. For seven years, with lofty aim and unconquerable spirit he has labored for the people, and today by virtue of his sincere devotion to their welfare, his valiant attack upon evil in high places, his zeal for the common interest, whether in the protection of the public domain or in insistence upon the freedom of interstate trade, or in the maintenance of high standards of administration, or in the recognition of the rights of labor or in the care of our natural resources, the forceful and representative leader is typified to the popular imagination in the person of Theodore Roosevelt.

ROOSEVELT ADMINISTRATION.

It is easy for those who are free of its responsibilities to criticise administration, and criticism is wholesome and stimulating. Mr. Bryan is an eloquent critic, but the record of the Republican party is known to all, and the American people will neither be confused nor misled by adroit thrust or pleader's skill. Their good judgment may be trusted to maintain a proper sense of proportion and to make a just estimate of the work which has been accomplished.

The business of the great national departments has been in worthy and competent hands. The mention alone of the names of Hay, Root and Taft suffices to call attention to the honorable conduct of affairs in which all our citizens take just pride. The dignity and honor of the nation have been maintained and troublesome difficulties have been adjusted with an access of prestige. And every American has been gratified by the possession of world-wide influence attained by the President by reason both of his personal qualities and because of the distinction in our international relations of the administration of which he has been the head.

In the management of internal affairs honesty and efficiency have been insisted upon. Looters of the public domain, those endeavoring to maintain combinations in unlawful restraint of trade and those seeking to profit by unjustly discriminating rates and illegal rebates have been taught respect for the law. Zeal and energy have been shown in the fields of governmental activity, and the welfare of the nation with regard both to present needs and to the requirements of future developments has been the paramount concern.

REPUBLICAN LEGISLATION.

When we consider the inevitable conflict of many opinions and the importance of the questions involved the record of progressive legislation is extraordinary. The creation of the Bureau of Corporations, the Railroad Rate Bill, the Pure Food Bill, the Meat Inspection Bill, the Employers' Liability Bill, and the laws passed for the better protection of labor constitute a record of legislation which no just critics can afford to minimize and which attests in a marked manner the response of the Republican party under its forceful leadership to the demands of the people.

DEMOCRATIC PROPOSALS.

If all that Mr. Bryan has favored during the past twelve years had been enacted into law we should have been overwhelmed with disaster and would regard it as our chief business in the future to find a way of escape from the meshes of ill-considered legislation in which we would have been entangled. It is fortunate for him as well as for us that he was defeated, and whatever may be his present political potentiality may be ascribed to the fact that hitherto he has not been permitted to carry out his programme. No doubt much remains to be accomplished in the way of necessary reform, but the record alrady made by the Republican party is a noteworthy one, and we must make further advances with care and needed reflection. Our progress will be entrusted to safe hands and we shall be fortunate in having a sailing master who knows his chart and who will take quite as much account of reefs and shoals as of the speed of the vessel. We have got our direction, we have a most precious cargo and we must have a safe and experienced pilot.

Mr. Bryan says that the Democratic platform "is binding as to what it omits as well as to what it contains." He might have added that it is as significant in the one case as in the other. Lincoln said: "In the absence of formal written platforms the antecedents of the candidates become their platforms." It may also be said that in the presence of formal written platforms the antecedents of candidates cannot be forgotten. Silence is often eloquent. In the election this fall we choose men, not abstractions. Platforms must be read in the light of history, and they may be eloquent of past mistakes and misguided agitations which their sponsors would gladly ignore, but which the nation will do well to remember.

CANDIDACIES CONTRASTED.

There are a thousand exigencies in the affairs of this great nation which cannot be foreseen or attempted to be controlled by any platform. The sagacity, steadiness of character, firmness and sound judgment of the Chief Executive must be the security of the nation in many a trying emergency. And it is no injustice to Mr. Bryan's attractive personal qualities, to his effectiveness as an orator, his skill as a party leader, nor is it any disparagement of the purity of his motives to say that the man who espoused free silver in 1896, renewed its advocacy in 1900, and later declared his belief in government ownership of railroads cannot be regarded as a safe leader to whom may be confided the great powers of the President, merely because those doctrines are omitted from his present platform. The country needs a man rock-based in sound conviction and fundamental principle, in whose good judgment in any difficulty all may feel secure, and such a man preeminently is William H. Taft.

Our opponents seem to regard the questions before us as simply involving a programme of legislation or of constitutional amendment. But first and chiefly we are electing a President, the executive of the nation. Nor should we, in considering legislative proposals, forget this. Now there is no man in the country better fitted properly to preside over and direct the varied business of the executive department than Mr. Taft. He already knows it thoroughly. He has rare executive ability. No one is better qualified than he to do the work which, under the Constitution, the President is called upon to perform.

THE SUPREME COURT.

Not only will the coming election directly affect the executive branch of the government, but it is most important in its relation to the judicial branch. Rarely has the choice of President involved more far-reaching consequences. For it is not improbable that the next President will appoint at least four judges of the United States Supreme Court. Upon these appointments will largely depend the quality of the judicial work of this great court for years to come. Congress may pass laws, but the Supreme Court interprets and construes them, and determines their validity. The Constitution, with its guarantees of liberty and its grants of Federal power, is finally what the Supreme Court determines it to mean. Upon the learning, wisdom and character of the judges of the Superior Court rests not merely the just determination of the important matters of private right which come before that august tribunal, but to a very large degree the course of our political history and the development and security of our institutions. In view of the vacancies which in the natural course of events will most probably occur during the next few years, we must remember that we are about to choose a representative of the people to whom is confided the nomination of Federal judges, a power second to none possessed by the President, the exercise of which calls for the highest judgment. If we should search the country for a delegate of the people who could be confidently entrusted with this important duty, it is probable that no one could command higher confidence than the Republican candidate for President. Himself a judge, learned in the wisdom of the law, he commanded the respect and esteem of the entire bar of the country, without regard to partisan division. By litigants and lawyers alike it was felt that when he left his important place upon the Circuit Court of Appeals to undertake his difficult duties in the Philippines the judicial branch of the government had sustained a most serious loss. And he has long been regarded as one in every way worthy to succeed the present Chief Justice of the United States. With his fairness and acumen, with his wide knowledge of the bar from which the judges must be recruited, with his broadmindedness and Democratic sympathy, and his keen interest in all that pertains to the welfare of the people, we may be assured that if he is selected to perform this duty the interests of the country will be impartially and wisely safeguarded in its discharge.

QUALITY OF ADMINISTRATION.

Legislation must inevitably depend upon the complexion and disposition of Congress. The President can only recommend or veto. But the quality of the national administration on its executive side will depend entirely upon the man who is chosen to be President. Whatever else we may do or fail to do, that we can determine in our vote for Presidential electors. The character of our diplomacy, the concerns of our insular possessions, the management of our vast internal business and the many intricate questions which lie within the range of executive discretion are in the hands of the President for the weal or woe of the nation. And on this issue alone as the coming election will determine the character of the executive administration for four years and in all probability the character of the judicial branch of the government for many years longer, the sober judgment of the people can hardly fail to miss the importance of the selection of such a man as Mr. Taft.

QUESTIONS NOT ISSUES.

Some questions which are discussed with no little vigor can hardly be considered as campaign issues. Mr. Bryan desires United States Senators to be chosen by direct vote of the people in the several States. Mr. Taft also inclines to favor this course. And I am glad he does.

But this can be accomplished only by constitutional amendment, and such amendment can be had only when ratified by three-fourths of the States. This would hardly seem to be an issue upon which to select a President. In case of Congressional initiative two-thirds of both houses must concur in order to present the amendment for ratification. Or if the States desire the amendment and there is any such sentiment as promises the necessary ratification, two-thirds of the States may require a convention to be called for the purpose. Further, any State may, if it desires, provide for a direct vote which will generally be treated by the Legislature as binding because of its expression of the wish of the people. This is the case in a number of States where Senators are practically chosen by direct vote now. But as long as there are twelve States who do not desire the amendment, the constitutional provision for the election of Senators by the Legislatures cannot be changed.

Again, Mr. Bryan objects to the present rules of the House of Representatives and complains that it is no longer a "deliberative body." How to make the procedure of a body of nearly four hundred members more fully deliberative while at the same time to make provision for the proper dispatch of business, how to give greater freedom and how to escape from the alleged tyranny of the Speaker without creating a new tyranny of the minority, is a question which parliamentarians may discuss to advantage. It would be well to have some definite statement of the amendments desired and an opportunity to judge their effect. In any event, the members of the House will make such rules as they think best and the general suggestions of the Democratic platform on this point can hardly be regarded as pertinent to the Presidential campaign.

ELECTION LAWS.

Mr. Bryan also has much to say with regard to corrupt practices and campaign expenditures. But he omits to give due credit to the Republican party for what it has accomplished with regard to these important reforms, an accomplishment the more noteworthy in the light of Mr. Bryan's reiterated criticisms of contributions to Republican campaign funds. In the State of New York a Republican Legislature in 1906 passed a statute prohibiting corporations from making any political contributions directly or indirectly and providing that officers, directors, or stockholders participating in or consenting to the violation of the law should be guilty of a criminal offense. And I know of no more drastic statute in this country with regard to the publicity of campaign contributions and for the prevention of corrupt practices than that passed in New York under Republican auspices. These were not promises of an opposition party seeking power but enactments by a party in power securing genuine reforms. Proper recognition must, of course be given to the patriotic Democrats who supported these reforms, but they were enacted by a Republican administration. Congress has also legislated against political contributions by corporations. Purity of elections and free opportunity for the uncorrupted expression of the popular will lie at the foundation of every reform and cannot be to carefully safeguarded. And there should be Federal legislation securing proper publicity of and accounting for campaign contributions in connection with Federal elections. But it must fairly be recognized that the skirts of neither party have been clean. If we search Mr. Bryan's following we shall find not a few who have sinned, and also those who, if we may judge from their local activities, are still unrepentant. The Democratic party cannot claim unsullied virtue either with regard to the source of its revenues or its readiness to receive them. And when criticism is meted out to the Republican party on this score justice requires that it should also receive credit for the reforms it has achieved.

REVISION OF TARIFF.

Both parties demand a revision of the tariff. But they differ in the principle and aim of such revision. The Republican party stands for the policy of protection. It maintains its historic position in defense of American standards of living and of the American scale of wages. The Democratic party seeks, as Mr. Bryan construes its platform, to overthrow protection and to establish a revenue tariff. Instead of readjustment of protective rates and a fair arrangement of schedules consistent with the long established policy of the country under which our trade has been developed and our industrial activities have attained their notable expansion, he insists on an overthrow of the entire system of protection, thus threatening the dislocation of trade and the most serious disturbance of industry. He seeks not tariff revision but tariff revolution. Mr. Bryan appears to recognize the serious consequences of such a course and in announcing his position he hastens to assure us that "the Democratic plan does not contemplate an immediate change from one system to the other; it expressly declares that the change shall be gradual and a gradual change is only possible where the country is satisfied with the results of each step taken." This opens a vista of indefinite tariff tinkering to accomplish the desired object.

Revision there must be. It should be prompt, thorough and fair. But the policy of protection will be maintained and American industry, involving the interests of our wage-earners, must be properly safeguarded.

DIFFERENCE OF PRINCIPLE.

But it is urged that the Republican party cannot be trusted to make a fair revision of the tariff. Those who are opposed to a protective tariff and whose aim is to put the tariff upon a revenue basis can no more be trusted to make a revision consistent with the policy of protection than those who believe in protection can be expected to adjust the tariff to purposes solely of revenue. If, however, it be charged that the Republican party will not undertake an honest revision and that the application of the protective principle will not be worked out in a reasonable and proper way, it may fairly be retorted that there is no basis, to say the least, for any greater confidence in the operations and methods which might be adopted by our opponents in their proposed readjustment. The experience of the years when they last had the opportunity to frame new schedules in the tariff of 1894, does not inspire such confidence. The rugged Cleveland was disgusted with the work of his own party and while he did not veto the bill that was prepared, he refused to give it the sanction of his signature.

If there are interests desiring favors it does not follow that they will be denied merely because the banner of revenue tariff floats from the Capitol. The difference is one of principle, and is not to be confused by suggestions of improper influences.

The Democratic platform proposes to place upon the free list articles coming into competition with those controlled by the "trusts." But when Mr. Taft points out that if such a course were destructive to the trusts it would certainly destroy the smaller competitors of the trusts, Mr. Bryan replies, with characteristic ease, that he has "other remedies for the trusts," and that it may not be necessary to use this one after all. What becomes of the question of the essential justice of the proposal and what part is it to play in the "immediate revision?"

BRYAN'S TRUST REMEDIES.

When, however, we consider these other remedies that are proposed for the trusts, we find ourselves journeying in a land of dreams. Again the magician of 1896 waves his wand. At a stroke difficulties disappear and the complex problems of modern business are forgotten in the fascination of the simple panacea. And as the free coinage of silver in the ratio of 16 to 1 was to destroy the curse of gold, so the new-found specific of equal perfection is to remove the curse of industrial oppression. The delusion of 1908 is comparable only to that of twelve years ago.

The first suggestion is that the law should prevent a duplication of directors among competing corporations. However advisable it may be to have independent directorates of competing corporations, it would seem still more important to have independent stockholders, for a majority of the stockholders of a corporation choose the directors. If a law were passed preventing the duplication of directors it would easily be evaded in the selection of men who would represent the same interests. The most ordinary experience shows that it is not necessary to serve on a board of directors in order to control its proceedings. Whatever the advantage of such a law as is proposed, it hardly rises to the dignity of a "remedy," or vindicates its title to a place in an imposing scheme of reform outlined in a national platform.

But the more important proposal is "that any manufacturing or trading corporation engaged in interstate commerce shall be required to take out a Federal license before it shall be permitted to control as much as 25 per cent. of the product in which it deals." A license is permission, and the object of the remedy is not to regulate large businesses, but to destroy trusts. Hence the supposed efficiency of the plan is to be found in the prohibition of the control by any such corporation "of more than 50 per cent. of the total amount of any product consumed in the United States." This is another delusion of ratio.

WHAT IS MEANING?

It might be interesting to inquire what is the meaning of "any product consumed in the United States?" Does it refer to a class of commodities? And, if so, how shall the classes be defined? Or does it refer to each separate article of commerce? And, if so, what account does this proposal take of the skill and initiative of manufacturers who have built up a more or less exclusive trade in particular articles, often protected by trademarks, although in most active competition with other articles designed for the same general purpose and seeking the same market? In a desire to correct the evils of business are we to place an embargo upon honest endeavor, whose activities present none of the abuses requiring remedies? And, if not, what statutory definitions shall be found to be adequate and just if we lay down our prohibition in terms of volume or ratio of business and not in terms of right and wrong? If we adopt Mr. Bryan's proposal, to what period of production is the prohibition to apply? Is the excess for a day or for a month to be considered? Or is the average production for a year to be taken? And what system shall be devised by which suitable information may be furnished in the nature of danger signals along the routes of trade so that the manufacturer may know when he is about to exceed the prescribed ratio? He may justly be required to govern his own conduct, but how shall he be apprised of the conduct of others upon which is to depend his guilt or innocence?

The patent laws confer a true monopoly in the exclusive right to manufacture and sell. Are these laws to be repealed because a "private monopoly is indefensible and intolerable?" Is it proposed to apply the prohibition of control of more than 50 per cent. to patented articles?

AN EXAMPLE.

An example of Mr. Bryan's reasoning is found in his statement that "when a corporation controls 50 per cent. of the total product it supplies forty millions of people with that product." There are, of course, specialties which have a limited market and are used by a relatively small number of the people of the United States. More than 50 per cent., and, indeed, even as much as 100 per cent of the trade in such articles may be in the control of a particular corporation. This may, in fact, be relatively a small corporation. It may never have aspired to the unsavory renown of a "trust." But by prosecuting its particular line with fidelity and meeting satisfactorily a limited want; or by reason of some secret processes or advantage of experience, it may control the trade in a given article of commerce. Or, suppose a concern controls the whole trade in some useful by-product which it has found is advantageous to make, is the trade to be prohibited?

The Democratic platform makes no exceptions to cover we have learned that "binding as to what it

CRUDE PLAN.

SEES PROSPERITY WHEN TAFT IS ELECTED.

Eugene Zimmerman,

railroad president, who explains how Republican victory will bring vast capital to the United States for investment, giving work to many men and developing the country.

WILL LOOSEN PURSE STRINGS.

TAFT VICTORY WILL RESTORE CONFIDENCE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TOLEDO (O.) Sept. 5.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Col. Eugene Zimmerman, the president of the Detroit, Toledo and Ironton and Ann Arbor railroads believes that William H. Taft will be elected by a large majority, and that Bryan has no show to win. In an interview tonight he said:

"There is no question in my mind but Judge Taft will be elected by a large majority, for the reason that the people of the country have got supreme confidence in him. Another strong point is Taft's strong standing abroad, especially in England. English investors in American securities have utmost confidence in Taft, and when he is elected English financiers will be seeking investments in this country.

"In England, Judge Taft is looked upon as the greatest diplomat this country has ever put forth.

CONFIDENCE IS NEEDED.

"What is needed more than anything else at the present time is a restoration of confidence in investments. Railroads and corporations are needing money, but the general public have not the needed confidence in railroad investments at the present time. With the election of Taft I am confident that this confidence will be restored, not only in this country, but in England, and will thus enable the railroads to get money and extend their lines and improve their properties.

"The railroads are the largest consumers of the country, and when they have no money to buy supplies it affects the general business of the country. Railroad men and all our employés are in favor of Taft. I have personally investigated this in various parts of the country, talking with all from heads of departments down to section hands, and all assure me that the sentiment is overwhelming for Taft.

IMMEDIATE CONFIDENCE.

"The election of Taft means immediate restoration of confidence. The railroads will then do more business, and all our employés will again be put back to work.

"Railroad rates should be readjusted. Railroads are doing business today too cheap, and should be allowed to readjust their rates at a slight advance; in other words, the railroad situation is the key to prosperity. Business men and manufacturing organizations throughout the country who are opposing any readjustments and advance in railroad rates are simply working against their own interests."

This proposed plan does not meet the demand for an elastic currency system through which the monetary wants of the country may be supplied. To supply such a system is an urgent necessity, and its provision would obviate many of the dangers which have hitherto existed; but to make banks pay for losses they have not caused is to depart from proper principles and to encourage improper practices.

INTERESTS OF LABOR.

The Republican party has been solicitous of the rights of labor. Mr. Taft is clearly right when he says that "not since the beginning of the government has any other national administration done so much for the cause of labor by the enactment of remedial legislation as has Theodore Roosevelt and the Republican Congresses elected to sit during his term of office." And in support of this assertion he instances the reënacted Employers' Liability Act, the Safety Appliance acts, the Government Employés' Compensation Act: provision for the investigation of mine disasters and legislation with respect to child labor in the District of Columbia. He has exposed the disingenuousness of the plank in the Democratic platform that "Injunctions should not be issued in any cases in which injunctions would not issue if no industrial disputes were involved"—a Janus-faced proposal, meaning what you like. The Republican party has taken a reasonable attitude upon the injunction question. But more important to labor than any benefits which may reside in improved procedure in injunction cases is the opportunity to work. It profits little to a workingman to be told that he will be given the right to trial by jury in case he is guilty of contempt of court, if those who promise it propose to enter upon a fatuous course of arbitrary interference with trade. The prosperity of the workingman fundamentally depends upon wise, conserving and upbuilding policies; and demands that efforts to refor industrial evils should be carefully conceived and prosecuted without endangering the stability of legitimate business enterprise.

And it is to the Republican party under its wise and experienced leadership that we must look to the present exigency for proper guidance to these ends. It is not a time for nostrums or for the rule of a party which proposes them.

PROGRESS MUST BE SURE.

But while we freely criticize opposing programmes and candidates, we as freely recognize that no party has a monopoly of patriotic motive or of sincere endeavor to contribute to the welfare of the nation. Divided into different groups, espousing different principles and advocating conflicting methods, our citizens are imbued with the same love of country and are inspired by the same devotion to its interests. We criticise each other without bitterness, realizing that in the contests of public discussion we find the surest protection of our institutions, and that we may confidently rely upon the final judgment of an intelligent and conscious electorate. I have an abiding confidence in the progress of the people. Resistlessly they move forward to the attainment of their goal. Every privilege maintained at the expense of the common interest will finally go the way of despotism and ancient tyranny. But in our progress we must seek to avoid false steps. Ours must be the rule of reason, clear-eyed, calm, patient and steadfast; defeating the conspiracies of intrigue and escaping the pitfalls of folly. Supreme must be the sense of justice, with its recognition of our mutual dependence. We cannot change human nature or bring about a state of society or of administration of government which does not reflect its failings. We rejoice in the measure of success which has already been attained, and we must resolve to devote ourselves more loyally than ever to the general good, counting our partisan opportunities and victories as gain only as they give us chance to serve our common country.

The address of Senator Beveridge closed the programme of the day. Senator Beveridge said:

BEVERIDGE POINTS TO REPUBLICAN RECORD.

We are midway in a historic movement for righteousness written into law. Shall that movement be carried out, or wrecked? Its concrete expression is the Roosevelt policies. Shall they be saved or lost? Had the aboutfacers in both parties who now are powerless, succeeded, they would not have wrecked the movement, but only have delayed it. For the people would have gathered headway again until their purpose was worked out.

But extravagant schemes and emotional agitators can wreck it. The Revolution would have failed had impracticable men been in command instead of the cautious and wise, yet daring and determined Washington. Many a cause has gone down at the hands of hot-headed and eccentric friends.

And so today, in the American people's mighty moral advance, thus far successfully led by Theodore Roosevelt, the gravest question is whether we shall place our commander's standard in the hands of his most trusted captain, who will lead us safely and surely along the well-marked course we are following, or in the hands of those who will lead us on zig-zag marches after rash adventurers until the whole movement dissolves in the people's disgust and the world's ridicule.

"By their fruits ye shall know them." Seven years ago we started upon the great work of modern and humane legislation that has made the Roosevelt period historic. In those years we passed the Railroad Rate Bill, which for the first time in American history asserts the principle that the government of all the people can and will regulate those who carry the products of all the people. We passed the meat inspection and pure food laws, which ended the sale of poisoned foods and adulterated drugs; the irrigation law, which is making fertile the arid West and will build within our own continental boundaries a new empire of productive wealth.

REPUBLICAN LAWS.

In these seven years we have enacted more important laws for the safety, comfort and welfare of labor than in any two decades since the government was founded. We passed the employers' liability law, which revolutionized the heartless rule of the common law and gives the railroad laborer or his family compensation for his injury or death; the law forbidding railways from requiring employés to work an inhuman number of hours without rest; the Safety Appliance Act, which not only lessens the danger to life and limb of employés, but which increases the safety of the traveling public. We passed the Chinese Exclusion Act, which keeps coolie labor out of the republic, and diminishes the number of coolies already here. We passed the government employés liability law, by which every man who works for the government is certain of compensation for injury or his family for his death while in the government's employ.

All these are Republican laws. Each of them is a part of that plan of statesmanship which seeks to write conscience and humanity upon our statute books. Each of them was opposed secretly or openly by both Democrats and Republicans; each of them received both Republican and Democratic votes. But each of them was urged by a Republican President, originated by Republican statesmen, and some of them were not even thought of outside the Republican party. For example, even Mr. Bryan never dreamed of the meat inspection and pure food laws, yet that law means more to the health of the American people than all the curious devices he ever proposed.

A BRICK AT A TIME.

In these seven historic years we have also advanced the American name throughout the world; increased towards us the good will of nations and added to our lasting power in international affairs. At home and abroad our work already done has been so vast that the world speaks of it with praise and wonder; but we are midway in that work, and the question is whether we shall go on until we finish it.

Mr. Bryan complains that it is not finished now. But a brick at a time is the way to build a house. Would you trust an architect who promised to build it in the wink of an eye? The instantaneous statesman writes no sound laws, works no lasting reform. Aladdin rears none but imaginary palaces.

Of the work that remains, the first is to revise the tariff. The tariff we shall make will protect American industries, and also open foreign markets to American products. A straight out revenue tariff is ancient; a single protective tariff is out of date—we Republicans propose to keep up with the times. As a straight out revenue tariff gives everything away to foreign nations and gets nothing in return, so a straight out protective tariff gives nothing away and gets nothing in return. The modern tariff is a maximum and minimum tariff—a high tariff to be applied to any nation that will not give us advantages in its markets, and a lower tariff, still protective, to be granted to any nation that will give us advantages in its markets. The Republican idea is to meet other commercial nations with their own weapons.

By such a tariff Germany, considering her comparative resources and situation, in a dozen years has increased her foreign trade more rapidly than any other nation. By this method France has kept her mills open, her shops active, her trade vigorous in spite of causes that worked against her commercial progress. The man or nation has begun to die who refuses to learn; and just as the French and Germans and other commercial peoples learned the wisdom of a single protective tariff from us, we must learn the advantages of a double protective tariff from them.

NEW MARKETS NEEDED

Such a tariff will sell abroad many head of live stock, barrels of flour, manufactured articles, where one now is sold. This increase in trade means new employment for the laborers, new markets for the farmer. Prosperity depends on trade and trade depends on markets.

Nor will we stop there. Republicanism means advance. Tens of thousands of American citizens are demanding a tariff commission. The great organized producing interests—manufacturers, farmers, stock raisers—have petitioned Congress for this common-sense method of handling this intricate question, as Germany, France, Japan and other aggressive twentieth-century nations are handling their tariff question. Yet the only hope for a tariff commission is in the Republican party. When the tariff commission idea was advanced, Mr. Bryan opposed it in formal printed debate. When a tariff commission bill was introduced in Congress, every Democrat was hostile to it. A tariff commission has put not a single friend among Democratic public men. Certain Republican public men are against it, too; but its only friends are Republicans. A Democratic vote is a certain vote against a tariff commission. A Republican vote is a possible vote for this business-like reform.

REAL LABOR QUESTION.

Every labor law we have passed and will pass is a part of that web of industrial question which we call the labor problem. But after all, the fundamental labor problem is the problem of employment and pay. Work and wages are the foundations of labor's well-being, without which all labor legislation is the giving of a stone instead of bread. More American workingmen own their own homes (and those homes have more comforts) than the workingmen of England, Germany, Japan, France combined. Had any political economist been told twenty-five years ago that carpenters, miners and steel workers ever would be paid the American wages of the present day, he would have scoffed.

All this has come during Republican administrations. We plan to continue and increase it. The maximum and minimum tariff which we will enact will enlarge the markets for American products, as Germany in the same way has enlarged the markets for her products. Markets mean industries to supply them; industries mean demand for labor; demand for labor means high wages.

RECOVERY FROM PANIC.

We are quickly recovering from the briefest panic in our history. Let workingmen contrast that panic with the one that occurred under the last Democratic administration and then answer this question for themselves: Will the election of Mr. Bryan or Mr. Taft best help the rapidly improving business of the country? And remember that active business means well-paid employment.

That Mr. Bryan and the opposition would make business practically im-

HOT WATER IN "CROWN CITY."

Opposition to Bond Project Lines up for Fight.

Board of Trade Members Are Resigning by Scores.

Many Pasadenans Favor the Consolidation Idea.

War has been formally declared in Pasadena and the situation is interesting to everybody in the county.

That the municipal water bond programme of the Pasadena Board of Trade will not go through without vigorous opposition is now a certainty.

As a result of the activity of the board's directors in supporting the project, one-fourth of the members will resign and the organization will become disrupted.

Very bitter charges have been made by those who oppose the purchase of the water plants of Pasadena by the city, and it is openly alleged that the directors are using official positions to further private preferences.

Whether or not the people of Pasadena are to bond their city for the purpose of buying out the private corporations now supplying the city with water will be decided at a special bond election, to be held on the 24th inst. Both the supporters and the opposition to the bonds are lining up their forces, and the fight bids likely to be hotter than the municipal lighting plant election of two years ago.

The Board of Trade has always taken a lively interest in the water project, and for years the directors have almost unanimously been lined up with those who favor municipal ownership of the companies which now supply the city. At the annual banquet, held at Hotel Green in 1905, resolutions were passed indorsing the project and recommending the purchase of the plants.

Four years ago it was voted by Pasadena to sell bonds for the purchase of the water systems. Delays and legal quibbles tied the matter up however, and the legality of the election was questioned. The Board of Trade retained Maj. Henry T. Lee of this city to render an opinion in regard to the matter, and in other ways showed its interest in the project.

Finally the City Council recinded all action previously taken and threw the matter back into the position which it occupied prior to the first election. The advent of the municipal lighting project diverted attention from the water bonds and for some time the whole matter lay dormant.

From time to time prominent members of the oBard of Trade have tried to stir up some action and the organization has generally been looked upon by the people of Pasadena as one of the great sources of strength of the probond party.

Some time ago the directors of the Board of Trade sent out post cards to the members of the organization, asking them to state whether they supported or opposed the proposed bond issue. As many of those addressed failed to reply, a second installment of cards was sent out a short time later.

It was the mailing of the second lot of cards and their misleading questions which caused the opposition to the bond issue to take formal action. First they protested in a letter to the directors of the board, and then decided to resign.

The chief objection offered to the bond project by the opposition is that the purchase of the private water plants will mean the acquiring of title to the present water supply only, and will not solve the problem of securing a sufficient supply to guarantee the city against a shortage in years to come. It is pointed out that the combined resources of the corporations in question are now barely sufficient to meet the present needs of the city.

It is further argued that the only available source of water which will guarantee against a shortage in years to come is the Owens River Aqueduct

That Pasadena and Los Angeles must, in time, become consolidated is freely asserted by those who oppose the bond issue and they insist that, to spend money buying a lot of private water systems, when the greater supply is available, is not only wasteful but foolish.

THE POINT OF IT ALL.

"The point of it all," said one of the leaders of the opposition yesterday, is this:

"Pasadena needs more water. She must have more water. The proponents of the purchase of the existing plants propose what? That we shall get more water? No. That we run in debt for $1,000,000 and exhaust the city's credit to merely buy what water we have now—not to get another drop! We are asked to issue bonds for a million and pay interest amounting to almost another million without getting any more water. We use up our credit in this way, and when we may have a chance to get more water we shall not be able to take advantage of it. If we are to run in debt for $1,000,000, we say let's acquire something for it.

"The inevitable thing for Pasadena is consolidation and an acquirement of a part of the splendid Owens River supply. The little local newspapers oppose consolidation on account of their city printing graft, but sentiment in favor of it is growing, and the iniquitous bond scheme will be defeated."

THE OPENING ATTACK.

The following letter, the first official action taken by those who oppose the purchase of the private plants, was yesterday addressed to the directors of the Board of Trade:

PASADENA (Cal.) Sept. 5, 1908.

To the President and Directors of the Board of Trade, Pasadena, Cal.

Gentlemen: We, the undersigned, members of the Board of Trade of the city of Pasadena, Cal., desire to call your attention to the fact that you have decided that because you personally wish certain bond issues to carry at an election to be held September 24 inst., you have made strong efforts to secure enough members to acquiesce by signing postal cards, so that, under the guise of a majority of the members, you can go forth speaking for the Board of Trade. You must bear in mind that you have not asked the consent of the members to do this thing, but have assumed to ask if the members are in favor of the bond issue for municipal water.

We wish it distinctly understood that you have no right whatever to do this; and the fact that you may secure a majority gives you no right to the support of the minority or any portion of the minority, and we feel that we are being placed in a false position by you if we remain silent. This feeling is increased from the fact that commendatory communications you receive for your pet scheme are promptly given to the local press for publication, while those in opposition to your personal preferences and communications calling your attention to the mismanagement of your office, are not published, and this is the way you act in a representative capacity, with practically one-half of the members of the Board of Trade refusing to acquiesce in your scheme by refusing to answer your postal cards. Your own acts are your condemnation. We only know of one way, at this time, to record our protest, and that is to hand in our resignation, which we now do as members of the Board of Trade, to take effect immediately, and ask that a memorandum of any dues to this date for which we are in arrears be sent forthwith.

MANY SIGNERS.

The above letter has received the signatures of many prominent men, and will go to the board with 100 names on it.

A LOADED GUN.

M. H. Weight, on behalf of the Board of Trade members who object to having the directors place the seal of the official approval of the board upon the bond project, has addressed the following strong communication to the governing body:

PASADENA (Cal.) Aug. 29, 1908.

To the Board of Directors of the Pasadena Board of Trade, Pasadena, Cal.:

Gentlemen: I beg to acknowledge receipt of your second postal asking for an answer to the following question: "Are you in favor of the bond issue for municipal water?" The first I threw aside upon the ground that the real purpose behind the issuance of the card was not set forth in connection with said question, but remained to be published in the newspapers as news to the effect that it is the intention of the officers of the board to use the Board of Trade organization's influence and power on behalf of the bond deal by actively engaging in the contest as an organization. Your second card makes it clear to me that such is your intention, hence I ask you why did you not ask the members of the board if they desired that the organization shall be used for the above mentioned purpose. You will observe that there is a wide difference between the question asked and the use to which you intend to put the reply and the information secured to you thereby as advocates and promoters of the bonds in case your intentions are put into execution. It is obvious that as a strategic policical move it is a beauty. There is absolutely no doubt in my mind that many of those members who have answered your query upon a moment's thought will unhesitatingly state that it is not for the best interests of the board or the city for that organization to be dragged into an internal contest that involves a million-dollar bond debt and a million dollars interest and no additional water in sight except the east side wells for the influence it may have on new citizens and those not familiar with the record and all the facts of vital import to their vote, but who will assume that the position of the Board of Trade must be the right one and vote accordingly?

I had the pleasure to aid in the reorganization of the Board of Trade, in July, 1891, when I found from my experience and associations with city and county matters relating to the then great question of advertising our climatic, industrial and home building advantages (the work having been carried on previous to that time by committees made up in the informal manner) that it was best to effect a strong and permanent organization to work in harmony and accord with the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce (then just getting on its feet) to carry on said advertising and promotion work. The years that have followed have proved the value of its existence in fulfillment of the purpose for which it was created and supported by the people. During the past four years policy, expediency and selfish interests have crept silently and insidiously into the organization and seriously impaired its usefulness, particularly upon this one question above quoted to which you ask a reply. At present it is water bonds. By and by it will be something else and at a future day the board's membership and potency for the well-being of the city will have passed away. This is no dream. It is in the air today and should be checked. The action of the board favoring municipal ownership of water at its annual banquet several years ago in Hotel Green was harmless on its face and practically the entire membership was innocent of a single thought but for the best interests of this city, yet that action laid the foundation for all the trouble that has arisen since that time so far as the relationship of the Board of Trade is concerned to that question. The resolution referred to contained a clause to the effect that they favored the purchase of the plants of the company provided they could be had at a fair price, etc. Now the question of price is before us and it is for the tax payers and voters to satisfy themselves of the justness and fairness of the proposition.

The Board of Trade as a body indorsed municipal ownership. It is now for the individual members of the board in their purely civic capacity to do that which their judgment and conscience dictates in the determination of the issue now before them and permit others to do the same. Let us have no more packed Board of Trade meetings, picked campaign committees, or $1500 Lee opinions. Enough is enough. The Board of Trade of the city of Pasadena for all good from without and against none from within, or let it be dissolved.

I am emphatically against the water bonds for three general reasons sufficient to be stated here. At the same time I surrender to no man nor set of men my allegiance to municipal ownership or control of the water plants. My nature is such that I feel deeply upon public questions even when I try to fight it off and I have during the progress of the city often been found fighting for what I conceived to be right against those whom I personally respected and loved. It is my idea of dealing with public questions and measures that have their place in the commonwealth and which directly affect the stability and happiness of the community as a whole. Let the whole truth be told that the people may know, "for a truth but half told is worse than a lie."

First—I am against the water bond debt because the price asked and agreed upon is a monstrous imposition upon those whom we have induced to buy our lands and locate here and to whom we have never uttered a word about involving them in a million-dollar debt and interest for water later on, and who never had been informed of anything to the contrary, but that they had the rights and privileges guaranteed them; and upon ourselves if we remain here and help to pay it.

Second—The land and the water and the water works of the respective companies are indissoluble, inseparable and as one to be maintained, managed and operated wholly in the interest of the property covered by their articles of incorporation and which is limited to the tracts of land now supplied with water by the respective companies and none can be diverted from its present use.

Third—Because the obligations of the companies to the land owners within the said districts have been so clearly defined and set forth in the decision handed down by the Supreme Court in the case of South Pasadena against the Pasadena Land and Water Company and Mrs. Graham, a land owner, against the same company. The court explicitly states that in case of the sale to the city by that company that the city then assumes and must maintain exactly the same obligations to the respective land owners that the company was obliged to observe and that in case of the failure on the part of the company or the city to properly distribute the water to said land and fulfill their obligations as they have in the past, mandamus proceedings can be entered against them to compel them to do so and there is no recourse. Exactly the decision the land owners of the city of South Pasadena wanted to protect their rights to the water and to insure the proper operation of the water works for their benefit and enjoyment. That decision applies word for word to the obligations of the North Pasadena Land and Water Company, to the Lake Vineyard Company and to the Pasadena Land and Water Company in relation to the lands supplied with water by them, most of which lies within the limits of Pasadena and cannot be diverted. That being the fact and the rights as land owners within the territory supplied by these companies having been unquestionably defined and settled by the Supreme Court of the State, why should we submit to an exceedingly heavy and dangerous debt upon our lands and our homes to make rich a few men who have gambled in our water stock?

Why should we vote an annual expense upon ourselves of what will prove to be not less than one hundred thousand dollars to simply secure control of the plants?

Have not the plants and service been practically built up gradually under the management of the directors elected for that purpose with funds from the purses of the land owners?

Cannot this same course be followed until such time as these stock manipulators can be brought to their senses in the interest of justice and a square deal to this town?

Why is it that the advocates of this great scheme now cry such an abundance of water will be at our command the moment the bonds are voted, or words to that effect, while we have known, those of us who do know, that an additional supply of water beyond the amount that we now possess must be secured and to secure more water we must vote more bonds even in the face of the proposition now before us and the representations made to the contrary?

Please think it over.

Respectfully yours,

[Signed] M. H. WEIGHT.

THE FIGHT ON.

The active opponents of the proposed bonding scheme include such well-known citizens and business men and Board of Trade members as ex-Mayor Waterhouse, M. H. Weight, George J. Kernaghan, C. J. Crandall and E. H. Lockwood. The opposition will thoroughly organize, will hold public meetings, and expects to defeat the project, inasmuch as a two-thirds vote for the bonds is necessary to carry them.

The mainstay of the opposition is the conviction that Pasadena must eventually depend upon the Owens River aqueduct for a new water supply.

FATTED CALF.

WELCOME TO PRODIGALS.

Enthusiastic Rally of All Republicans.

Party Differences Wiped Out at Great Meeting.

Smoker of League Turns Into Love Feast.

The campaign rally under the auspices of the County Republican League at the headquarters of the league last evening was called a "smoker." If it was so named because it was a "smoking hot" rally, the name was a good one. The big rooms were crowded and the enthusiasm was contagious, every visitor had it with him and turned it loose as soon as he got within striking distance.

And it was not the regular Republicans alone who were among the most enthusiastic and most confident of victory—State and national—at the polls next November. As well as the men who have stood loyally by the party standard in the hard fight for principle throughout California, and especially in Los Angeles, were present with enthusiasm, men who have sidestepped for a time, but realize that their true place is side by side with their brothers of the Republican organization. Last evening these men were given a cordial and hearty welcome.

"With all our hearts we welcome the prodigals, and the fatted calf has been killed—you will find him, gentlemen, in the back room," announced R. A. Ling, amid laughter and applause.

When Lee C. Gates faced the crowded audience, among the first of the speakers, he was given a welcome which made his pulses throb. His address was eloquent and he buried deep all party differences.

"I hardly know," he exclaimed whimsically, "whether to call myself the Prodigal or the Fatted Calf," and the audience roared with appreciation. Then he told what a good Republican he was after all, and explained what a good Republican ought to be.

REPUBLICAN GAINS GROW.

Capt. H. Z. Osborne was introduced as the chairman of the evening by Robert L. Cornish, who called the meeting to order, and the captain made an interesting address, showing the gain of Republican majorities in Los Angeles county year after year and always growing, giving statistics to clinch his assertions.

Then all the candidates present who have been nominated by the Republican County Convention were called to the platform and introduced, each taking a seat among the officers and speakers of the league. It was a pleasant and informal time, and the greatest good fellowship and enthusiasm reigned. Among them were R. W. Pridham, H. D. McCabe, Percy R. Hammon, C. J. Nellis, Frank R. Willis, Judge N. P. Conrey, while others on the platform or grouped around it who took part in the proceedings were, George N. Black, D. C. Casselman, Capt. Thomas J. Shea, chairman of the Music Committee; Frank Dominguez H. H. Roser, besides the speakers and others.

D. C. Casselman made a hit by asserting that the Democratic leader's three nominations were: First, an accident; second, a coincident, and third, a precedent.

"What has the Democratic party ever done?" asked the speaker; then he answered his question: "Whenever it has been in power it has been a case of free soup, free bread and free trade." [Applause.] "They now want to revise the tariff again; but this should be done by its friends, not by its enemies." Referring to the local Democrats, he said: "They never had more, nor deserved less."

"SINGLE SHOT" POLICY.

Casselman referred to the attempt which the local Democrats have decided to make to "single shot" one judge into the Superior Court by combining all their force upon one man, the Democratic justice of the local Township Court, Albert Lee Stephens. Then he exhorted all his hearers to stand for the full Republican ticket.

"Are you satisfied with the Monroe doctrine?" he cried, and there were yells of "You bet." "Would you give up Judge Wilbur? a thousand times no. And how about Judge Conrey, with his splendid record? And don't you want Rrank Willis?" There were cheers at each name and Willis was given an ovation.

Chairman Osborne next introduced Lee C. Gates with a eulogy and welcomed him back into the fold. Then it was that Mr. Gates, once more looking, and apparently feeling, at home, referred to himself as the "prodigal or the fatted calf." Mr. Gates spoke of his recent trip to the East, from which he has just returned, and told of the sentiment he had found everywhere, and how in great sections of the country, where in 1896 he had found Bryan idolized, he now discovered that his nomination was considered more as a joke.

"As one old-time Democrat said to me," he interpolated, "'I am going to vote for Taft this time, because I can vote for Bryan any time.'" [Applause.]

Mr. Gates referred to the wonderful history of the Republican party and what it has done for the country and for its prosperity and how, when the time comes, California will roll up a great majority of 50,000 for Taft, when all Republicans and thousands of Democrats will vote solidly for the Republican candidate. [Cheers.] In conclusion Mr. Gates created applause by the statement that the character of Taft was certified to and the American people and the Republican party are to be congratulated.

REPUBLICANS ALL.

Isidore Blair, a negro lawyer, made a hit in an impassioned address regarding the stand of his race in the battle of ballots next November, and how they will be found shoulder to shoulder with the other members of the Republican party to see that "few Democrats escape and none get away." He made the point that the Democrats would rather go thousands of miles from home to give freedom and citizenship to the Filipinos, than give justice to the negro at home.

Former Judge Henry C. Gooding said that there might be "frost on the whiskers and silver in the hair" of some of the old men present who might not be so enthusiastic at first as the younger men: "But we gather speed as we go," he added. He dwelt upon the wise selections of the Republican party in policies and men, and asserted that the Democrats would like very much to turn their backs on their past, but the Republicans were not ashamed.

Frank Dominguez made a speech on love of country and declared there is no other issue, for those of the Democrats were dead ones. R. A. Ling welcomed back Mr. Gates and spoke upon the importance of the tariff as an issue. William J. Seymour, a former neighbor of W. J. Bryan at Lincoln, Neb., told stories of the mercenary traits of the Democratic leader and incidents of his career.

The Veteran Fife and Drum Corps provided plenty of martial music which was supplemented by Josephine Frankel's Venetian Lady Mandolin Orchestra. After the meeting the refreshments, which were continually referred to as the "fatted calf," became the center of attraction, and the first rally and smoker ended with the same brand of enthusiasm as that with which it was begun.

EMILY W. WINS FEATURE RACE AT STATE FAIR.

Grabs Three Straight Heats from Classy Field, Each Horse Finishing in Same Position in Each Heat. Della Derby Is Victorious in Trot for 2:12 Class.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 5.—Four good races drew a big crowd today in the final day of the State Fair harness meet. The feature was the 2:20 class trot, which was valued at $2000 and in which good time was made. Emily W., owned by Fred E. Ward, won the event in straight heats and one of the most sensational finishes of the meet. Trailing her field to the half-mile pole, she swung into the lead before the three-quarter mark in each heat and won easily, outclassing her competitors.

Della Derby took the 2:12 class trot in slow time, and it was necessary to race all five heats, Whitehead's horse taking the last three.

Probably the most remarkable performance made by an aged horse in a long time was the work of Washington McKinney, the great stallion owned by F. J. Kilpatrick, which, after a long absence from the track, went on in an effort to beat 2:30 in an exhibition, and set a figure of 2:20. Summaries:

Roadsters, mile heats, two in three:

Fifty Entries Have Been Received for Driving Club Matinee to Be Given Saturday.

The Speed Committee of the Los Angeles Driving Club opened its list of entries last night, for the matinee to be given at Agricultural Park on September 12 and found there were fifty horses entered. These will be classified next Wednesday. There will be at least ten starters in the mule novelty race and the spectators will see Maud, Gloomy Gus and the other favorites.

It was announced last night that in all probability the County Fair that was supposed would be given next month, will be postponed until January, when the National Live Stock Association will be in session here.

SHARK GETS HIS MONEY.

Little Boy Trails Hand Holding Quarter in Sea, Is Bitten and Loses Coin.

Little Ralph Nelson had a strange experience yesterday morning, while out with his father in a fishing boat about a mile south of Redondo.

The child was idly trailing his hand in the water, when suddenly a sharp pain caused him to cry out. Looking down he saw a large shark, which had mistaken his fingers for bait.

When bitten, the boy, in his surprise, opened his hand, and a silver quarter, which he held in his palm, slid down the shark's throat.

The lad's father bound up the injured fingers and advised him to keep his money out of reach of sharks of all kinds.

New Auto Record.

ST. PAUL, Sept. 5.—D. E. Palma this afternoon broke the world's record for a mile on a circular track by covering the distance in 51 seconds flat. The former record was 52 seconds, made by Walter Christie last year, on the same track. Christie made an attempt to lower his record this afternoon, but the best he could do was 52½ seconds. Palma used a 90-horse-power car.

Fine Shooting.

SEAGIRT (N. J.) Sept. 5.—The honors of the second day of the big shooting tournament here were carried off by the United States Marine Corps. One of its teams captured the Briggs trophy, in the interstate regimental team match, and two of its members landed prizes in the off-hand match.

John W. Hessian of Wilmington, Del., established another record today, scoring twenty-one consecutive bulls-eyes at 600 yards in an individual contest.

PE-RU-NA RECEIVES PRAISE
For Relieving Such Symptoms as Debility, Backache and Headache.

Mrs. Tressie Nelson, 609 N. 5th Ave., Nashville, Tenn., writes: "As Peruna has done me a world of good I feel in duty bound to tell of it, in hopes that it may meet the eye of some who has suffered as I did.

"A good friends advised me to use Peruna and I was glad to try anything, and I am very pleased to say that six bottles madea new woman of me and I have no more pains and life looks bright again."
There are a great many phases of woman's ailments that require the assistance of the surgeon.
But by far the greatest number of such cases are amenable to correct medicinal treatment.
A vast multitude of women have been relieved from the ailments peculiar to their sex through the use of Peruna as prescribed by Dr. Hartman.
He receives many letters from all parts of the country relating to subjects of vital interest to womanhood.
Of the vast multitude of women who take Peruna only a very small percentage consider it necessary to write to the doctor at all.
While it is not affirmed that Peruna will relieve every case of this kind, it is certainly the part of wisdom for every woman so afflicted to give Peruna a fair trial.

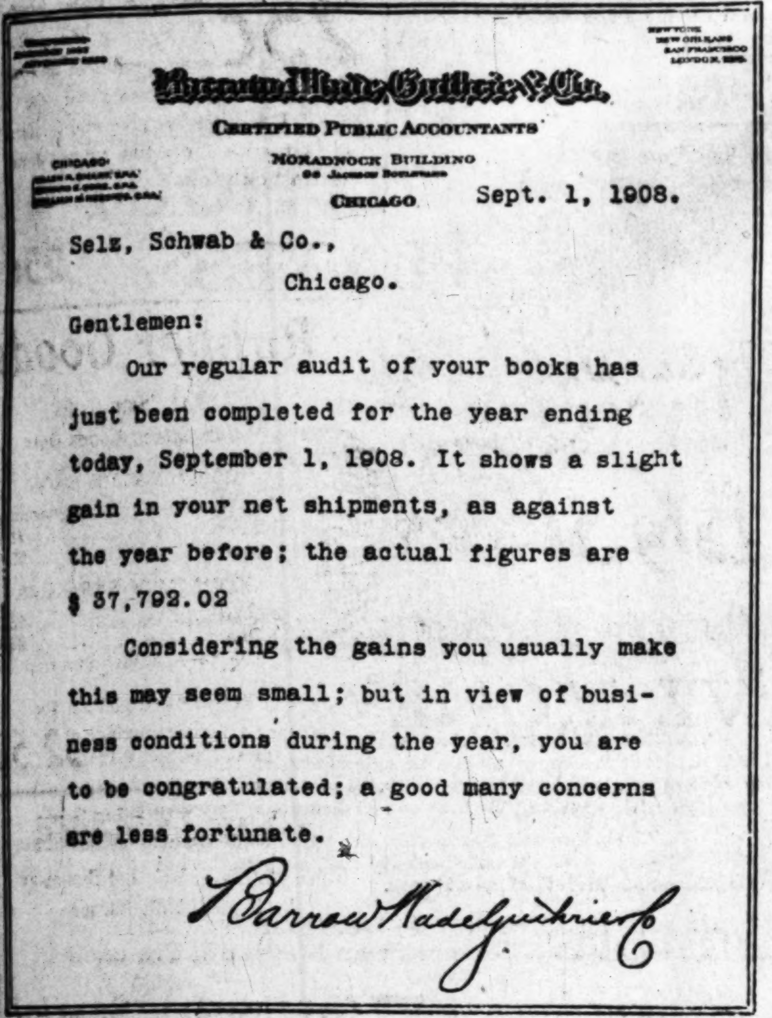
We close our year, September first, with a gain; the smallest, and the biggest, we ever made



[illegible]

Barrow, Wade, Guthrie & Co.
CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANTS
MONADNOCK BUILDING
[illegible]
CHICAGO Sept. 1, 1908.

Selz, Schwab & Co.,
Chicago.

Gentlemen:

Our regular audit of your books has just been completed for the year ending today, September 1, 1908. It shows a slight gain in your net shipments, as against the year before; the actual figures are $ 37,792.02

Considering the gains you usually make this may seem small; but in view of business conditions during the year, you are to be congratulated; a good many concerns are less fortunate.

Barrow Wade Guthrie & Co

YOU know what the last twelve months have been in business; a good deal like what Gen. Sherman called war. Many strong business houses have found their trade far short of the previous twelve months; many shoe manufacturers haven't done half their normal business.

We've gained; a little. Our year ending September 1, 1906, showed a gain over the previous year of $1,890,000; the year ending September 1, 1907, showed another gain almost as good; this year we gain $ 37,792.02. It seems small compared to what we have done; it's colossal compared to what others have done this year; and in view of all conditions, it's the best and biggest we ever made.

It's an evidence of more than business hustle; it proves that when people want shoes they can depend on, they want Selz shoes; it shows that quality always counts. You'll find that it counts on your feet a good deal more positively than on our sales sheets.

There are some things about the making of shoes you ought to know. In our best welt shoes, Royal Blue and Perfecto, we use only the best oak sole leather, many makers use hemlock leather; cheaper; doesn't wear as well. We use solid grain leather inner soles, not split; we use solid, all-leather heels, not scraps or composition; we use single piece sole leather counters, not pieced, nor pasteboard, nor stiffened canvass; first quality upper leather, not second quality, 10-ounce duck linings, instead of 6-ounce, silk thread at $6.50 a pound, not cotton at $1.50.

We could save in making from 20 to 30 cents a pair on these shoes, and you'd never know it to look at them; the wear shows it. We think too much of ourselves to put our name on cheapening frauds such as many good looking welt shoes contain.

The name Selz on a shoe has always stood for best quality; and always shall. Every pair carries with it a positive guarantee of the wearer's satisfaction, which you are invited to take full advantage of, if any pair of Selz shoes fails to satisfy you.

When you buy shoes ask your dealer for Selz; and take no substitute. If you want the best shoe you ever set foot in get Selz Royal Blue, $3.50, $4.00 and $5.00

HOP CROP IS ALL RIGHT.

Report That Kentish Crop Had Been Greatly Injured Is Very Much Exaggerated.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

LONDON, Sept. 5.—It now appears that the report from Maidstone that the Kentish hop crop had been greatly damaged by the rain has been much exaggerated.

An expert says that the sound hops are not injured, and it has been learned that while poles and wires have been blown down, this will not affect the yield.

The recent report from Maidstone also stated that thousands of hop pickers who went there from London are suffering acutely, but this is not so. The pickers have suffered some inconvenience and discomfort through the excessively wet weather, but many of them sleep in comfortable homes, and the others are well housed in rainproof huts. There have been a few cases of illness due to exposure, but the distress is not nearly so great as first stated.

MILK FLOWS IN STREETS.

New York Strikers Injure Horse, Beat Drivers, and Dump Cans Into Gutters.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—Badly slashing a valuable horse belonging to the Sheffield's Farm Dairy Company, after cutting the harness to pieces and spilling the milk in the gutter in West Ninety-seventh street, today, striking milk-wagon drivers of the company gave the delivery man in charge of the wagon, a severe beating when he went to the defense of the animal. In other sections of the city many other wagons were captured during the early hours and hundreds of gallons of milk were upset into the street.

One driver received such harsh treatment that he had to be taken to a hospital.

The strike was caused by the refusal of the Sheffield company to recognize the teamsters' union, but the delivery men were satisfied with their conditions and refused to go out.

MINISTER MAKES MISSTEP.

Conference Finds Him Guilty of Gross Immorality and Expels Him from Church.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

JAMESTOWN (N. Y.) Sept. 5.—Rev. R. T. Cooper of Hillsville, Pa., who was removed yesterday from membership and ministry in the M. E. Church at the ecclesiastical conference in this city, will take the case to a higher tribunal and to the civil courts of Ohio, where the charges originated.

The Rev. Mr. Cooper was expelled on account of gross immorality, as charged before the conference and sustained by the Investigating Committee.

When sentence of expulsion from the church was pronounced by the bishop, said Mr. Cooper today, notice was at once given that the case would be appealed to the judicial conference of the church, and it will also be taken into the civil courts at Youngstown, O.

UNIVERSITIES ARE HARD HIT.

RUSSIAN INSTITUTIONS ARE IN BAD PLIGHT.

Edict That no Social Democrats Shall Act as Professors or Instructors Threatens to Decimate Faculties of Two of Empire's Principal Schools.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 5.—The edict issued Thursday by the Minister of Education to the effect that all professors and instructors in the imperial universities and schools in Russia, who are members of the Constitutional Democracy or other illegal political parties must either withdraw from these parties or resign their position threatens to cripple entirely the faculty of the University of St. Petersburg.

The rector and vice-rector of the university, the deans of four departments and a number of the leading professors were up as Constitutional Democratic candidates for electors in the last parliamentary elections.

The University of Moscow, which is the largest in the empire, is in a similar plight. A number of the professors there have represented the Constitutional Democratic party in Parliament.

PROMOTION FOR BANKER ANDREWS.

A well merited promotion came last Tuesday to John F. Andrews, when the German-American Savings Bank elected him cashier to succeed W. F. Callander, who assumes the presidency of the Bank of Los Angeles.

Mr. Andrews' career began in Creston, Iowa in 1879. Later he was with three of the largest investment banking houses in the Middle West, and has had an uninterrupted banking career of nearly thirty years. He entered the Union Bank of Savings in 1896, holding the office of assistant cashier when this institution was merged with the German-American Savings Bank. His promotion to the cashiership upon the first vacancy is a recognition of his efficient services.

ABOUT LUMPS IN WOMAN'S BREAST

"Lumps in the Breast Sure Death"

Dr. S. R. Chamley, the acknowledged authority in America on Cancer, says in his book on cancers and tumors cured without knife or pain, that any lump in woman's breast is cancer. The book teaches that any tumor, lump or sore on the lip, face or anywhere six months is cancer. The Doctor offers $1000 if he fails to cure any cancer he treats before it poisons deep glands, and charges nothing until cured. Strictly reliable; no X-Ray or other swindle. The book is full of ministers', doctors' and millionaires' testimonials, many of them right here. The leading newspapers and medical journals the world over have given him great praise; no man is doing a grander work for humanity. He has been curing cancers over a third of a century. Investigate his absolute guarantee. The book is sent free to those who describe their cancer, 50 cents to others. The reader may save a life by sending this to some one with cancer. Address Dr. and Mrs. Dr. Chamley & Co., 747 S. Main St., Los Angeles, Cal.

DEAFNESS

Successfully Treated

By the Simplest Method Yet Discovered

Ninety-five per cent. of the cases of deafness brought to our attention are the result of chronic catarrh of the throat and middle ear. The air passages become clogged by catarrhal deposits, stopping the action of the vibratory bones. Until these deposits are removed relief is impossible. They cannot be reached by probing or inner ear spraying, hence the inability of specialists to always effect a cure. Neither can ear drums cure deafness. But there is a scientific treatment for deafness and catarrh which is demonstrated every day by the use of Actina. The vapor generated in the Actina passes through the Eustachian tubes into the middle ear, removing the catarrhal obstructions and loosens up the bones (hammer, anvil and stirrup) in the inner ear, making them respond to the vibration of sound. Actina is also very successful in relieving ringing noises in the head. We have known people afflicted with this distressing trouble for years to be entirely relieved by a few weeks' use. Actina has also been very successful in the treatment of hay fever, asthma, bronchitis, sore throat, weak lungs, colds, headache, and other troubles that are directly or indirectly due to catarrh. Actina will be sent on trial, postpaid. Write us about your case. Our advice will be free as well as a valuable book—Prof. Wilson's Treatise on Disease. TEMBLOR IN PORTO RICO.

SAN JUAN (Porto Rico) Sept. 5.—An earthquake shock was felt here at 12:10 this afternoon. The people of the city were very much alarmed and many of them rushed from their houses into the streets. There was no repetition of the quake and calm was soon restored. No material damage was done here and no damage or loss of life has been reported from interior points.

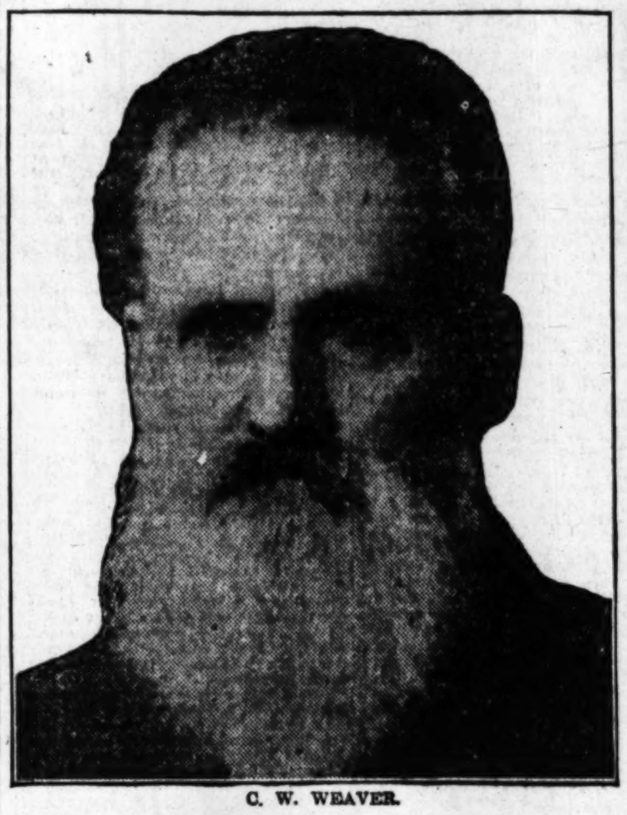
Doctor Said Consumption



C. W. WEAVER.

Mr. C. W. Weaver, of Bristol, Vt., who was told by his doctor that he had only a short time to live, as he had consumption, takes Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey which was recommended by the doctor, gains vigor and strength every day, and is in better health than he had been for years before taking it.

In a recent letter Mr. Weaver writes:

"Two years ago my doctor told me I had consumption, that I could live but a short time, recommending to me at the same time Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. I have taken it ever since according to directions. I feel better and stronger than I have for seven years past. Yes, I heartily endorse Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey as a cure for consumption."

Thousands of letters like this are received daily from grateful men and women who cannot say too much in praise of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey for the benefits derived from its use.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

is an absolutely pure distillation of malted grain; great care being used to have every kernel thoroughly malted, thus destroying the germ and producing a predigested liquid food in the form of a malt essence, which is the most effective tonic stimulant and invigorator known to science; softened by warmth and moisture its palatability and freedom from injurious substances render it so that it can be retained by the most sensitive stomach.

It cures nervousness, typhoid, malaria, every form of stomach trouble, diseases of the throat and lungs, and all run down and weakened conditions of the body, brain and nerves. It is prescribed by doctors and is recognized as a family medicine everywhere.

CAUTION.—When you ask your druggist, grocer or dealer for Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey be sure you get the genuine. It's the only absolutely pure medicinal malt whiskey and is sold in large sealed bottles only; never in bulk. Price $1.00. Look for the trade-mark, the "Old Chemist," on the label, and make sure the seal over the cork is unbroken. Write Consulting Physician, Duffy Malt Whiskey Co., Rochester, N. Y., for free illustrated medical booklet and free advice.

MEMORIAL.

AGED FOLKS' IDEAL CHAPEL.

DEDICATORY CEREMONY TODAY AT HOLLENBECK HOME.

Picturesque Surroundings of the Old Men and Women Who Have Been Left Alone in the World. Splendid Benevolence of Mrs. Hollenbeck.

The John Edward Hollenbeck, Jr., Memorial Chapel, declared to be the most beautiful bit of church architecture in Los Angeles, will be dedicated this afternoon.

The structure is in the form of a complete circle, the sunlight streaming into it from all sides, through magnificent symbolic windows of cathedral glass. Being constructed as a part of the Hollenbeck Home for the Aged, and for the special comfort of the old folks, that special object has been kept constantly in view. It is connected with the splendid buildings of the home by an arcade of artistic design, so that the aged ladies and gentlemen may go to and from the chapel, day or night or during any sort of weather, without in any way exposing themselves at the risk of their health.

Rev. William S. Young, superintendent of the Hollenbeck Home for the Aged.

The chapel, as all other portions of the home, is built through the great generosity of Mrs. Hollenbeck, and dedicated to the memory of her deceased son. It has been completed simultaneously with other splendid additions to the home, for the accommodation of more applicants who wish to reside there, and all of which will be dedicated simultaneously with the chapel today.

It is fitting that the ceremony of dedication should occur today, which is the anniversary of the founding of the home, and also of the death of J. E. Hollenbeck, the husband of the benefactress of the institution.

Dr. William S. Young, who has been superintendent of the home for several years, is a man specially fitted for the position, and great improvements have marked his energetic administration. He will be master of ceremonies at today's dedication, in which a number of ministers of the city will take part. Dr. Hugh K. Walker, pastor of Immanuel Presbyterian Church, will deliver an address.

Hollenbeck Home, situated on the heights at the west end of Hollenbeck Park Lake, is one of the most beautiful spots in Southern California. The buildings are embowered in trees and flowers of the choicest varieties, and all the surroundings are most ideal. Between 100 and 200 aged men and women live there in a perfect heaven on earth. They are free and happy, and express their delight to all who give them opportunity.

The buildings are of mission architecture, and are splendidly finished and furnished, and the inmates possess large rooms, which are just as much their own private homes as is possible. They decorate their rooms and care for them as their very own, and the broadness of the philanthropy has attracted attention throughout the country. It is not a charity home, but those who reside there pay for the privilege, and must be able to show a good character and a clean record before being admitted.

Mrs. Hollenbeck occupies her own fine home on the grounds, and Superintendent Young also has a large private residence near by.

VILAS LEFT NEARLY MILLION.

MADISON (Wis.) Sept. 5.—According to the petition to probate the will of the late Col. William F. Vilas, filed in the County Court this afternoon, his estate is valued at $842,000. It consists of $142,000 in real estate and $700,000 personal property. The indebtedness of the estate is estimated at $70,000. This, however, is subject to correction. The heirs-at-law are Mrs. Anna M. Vilas, the widow, and a daughter, Mary Esther Vilas Hanks.

EVERY TRAIN IS CROWDED.

Influx of Colonists Shows no Sign of Abatement; Breaking of Records Promised.

The influx of colonists from the East shows no sign of abatement. Every train with tourist sleepers which arrived yesterday was crowded to its capacity. It is estimated that the population of Los Angeles has increased by nearly 14,000 persons in the past three days.

Railroad officials say that a large proportion of the colonists this year are coming from the Middle Western and Southern States, the Missouri River district being particularly well represented. Yesterday the first considerable number of colonists from the Atlantic seaboard reached the city.

All indications point to a busy season for the railroads and local officials prophesy that the amount of business done will break all records.

BEVERIDGE'S SPEECH.

possible is proved by their national franchise plan. They propose that every enterprise big enough to do business in more than one State shall secure a national license, which can be granted or withdrawn by any administration. But no business can succeed without certainty; no business man could afford to invest a dollar when he knew that his very right to do business at all might be taken away by the caprice of a President or the accident of an election. The franchise plan makes every President a four years' Czar with absolute power over the life and death of every business concern large enough to trade throughout the nation.

THE NAVY.

A nation without power is a nation without influence. A maritime nation's power is in her navy. With longer coast lines than any three of the greatest commercial nations combined; with far-flung possessions and a foreign commerce which in a quarter of a century will pass that of England and Germany together; with the canal giving us undreamed of advantages in foreign trade, the republic must build a navy as great as these tremendous facts require. We are midway in that work today, and we mean to go on with that programme of economy, safety and peace.

Had our navy been as large in 1898 as it is today, Spain would not have gone to war and Cuba would have been freed by diplomacy; yet the actual cash spent in that little war would have built two navies as great as the one we have today and maintained them for a score of years.

Mr. Bryan and the opposition are against any navy except to protect our coasts. But with such a navy what becomes of the Monroe doctrine? The Monroe doctrine is not sanctioned by international law—it rests on the strength of our navy alone. A navy large enough only "to defend our coasts" means abandonment of the Monroe doctrine. Also it admits that we may have to defend them, yet confines us purely to defense. But often in war, the best defense is attack. We are no Parthian nation, shooting arrows behind us as we fly. A peaceful heart and a strong arm are the best preventives of war.

BRYAN AND TAFT.

This is a campaign of candidates even more than of platform. The question is not which candidate is most upright, patriotic, brave, for both are equally so. Both mean equally well toward their country. The real question is which candidate will make the best President? Which is the wisest and steadiest? Which man would you choose as administrator of your estate? Which would you select to manage your business? Which has the best training and the most experience?

Mr. Bryan never has handled a single foreign problem. He has governed no Philippines, regenerated no Cuba, built no canal, avoided no alien danger, saved us from no threatened peril.

Mr. Taft has done all. It was his genius for the practical and devotion to humanity that took Philippine chaos and made Philippine order; took Philippine hate, and changed it, by the alchemy of his tact, to Philippine love. It was his statesmanship that achieved the impossible, converted an oriental people into a voting citizenship, and laid the foundations for a future which, as God wills, may become a separate nation or a glad and patriotic part of this great republic.

It was William H. Taft who set Cuba in order, established her feet in civilization's upward path; and it was he who, when so directed by President Roosevelt, who first advised with Mr. Taft, when these children of liberty tore his work to pieces, set up once more the blessed rule of order and liberty and law with a father's patience and a statesman' wisdom. It is he who is commanding the practical work of that greatest enterprise of human history, the building of the Panama Canal.

TAFT THE EXPERIENCED.

It was he whose counsel President Roosevelt sought at every crisis of his historic administration; he who helped avert war when little politicians and narrow minds would have plunged us into conflict. It was William H. Taft whom our President, when confronted with foreign perplexities and with the awful weight of our ninety millions' welfare on his heart, sought for strength and wisdom; and it is William H. Taft more than any man ever called to the leadership of the American people, who has had the best training, the widest experience and the wisest teaching to fit him for that glorious but serious task.

In domestic affairs Mr. Bryan has written not one law, administered not a single department, advised no President—while lecturing all. He is a preacher of righteousness, but not an administrator of affairs. He never conducted the government of a city, a county, a State or a nation. William H. Taft has been judge on the bench, Governor of a people, administrator of a department. His hand has helped to shape most of the progressive laws we have passed in the last seven years, and his great heart and splendid mind are behind every law we propose today. The sought for counselor of three Presidents—as different yet as wise as Harrison, McKinley and Roosevelt—Fate has equipped him to be the trusted leader of the people who loved and honored these three chief magistrates. Almost it seems that here is a man prepared by providence to be the captain of this chosen people.

BRYAN'S USEFUL PLACE.

Let no man denounce Mr. Bryan. Such men are necessary to human progress. Always such men have been the voice of a protest, but never the statesman of a cause. Always they have been the urgers of reform, but never the doers of the work.

Mr. Bryan is an Aaron, but not a Moses; a Henry, but not a Washington; a Wendell Phillips, but not an Abraham Lincoln. He is the storm of unrest which clears the atmosphere, but not the trade winds that carry to port the freighted ships of a people's hope.

Four years ago, in his own home, paying tribute to his character and mind, I called him a dreamer who beholds happy visions but achieves no useful deed. His is the mind that thinks the barren field bending with grain; but his is not the plowman's hand, the sower's craft or the gleaner's husbandry. The poet's dream of an undiscovered Utopia has cheered us all; but the Pilgrim's, actually landing on Plymouth Rock, planted the real tree of liberty, beneath whose real shade we rest and by whose real fruits we live.

NO ASTROLOGER.

William H. Taft is of the Pilgrim stuff—his is the wisdom that makes the ideal vision a living fact. Tried in every realm of government, tested in every department of statesmanship, he never yet has failed. He is a skilled seaman of statesmanship, who takes his reckoning by the fixed stars of human nature and experience—not an uncertain astrologer, casting absurd horoscopes from imaginary signs and symbols. And not once on all his voyages has the reckoning he has made been wrong; not once has a single horoscope that Mr. Bryan has cast been right.

We dare not trifle with our future:
"Humanity with all its fears,
With all its hopes of future years,
Is hanging breathless on our fate."

When the great commander, who has guided our ship of state through the storms of opposition and amid the rocks of hatred straight for the port of our higher hopes and our larger liberties, voluntarily steps from the bridge and delivers to us his high commission, let us hand it to the ablest officer aboard and safely make the harbor of our heart's desire.

PEOPLE INSIST.

TAFT TO TOUR EAST AND WEST.

REPUBLICAN CANDIDATE YIELDS TO MANY REQUESTS.

After Long Conference With Chairman Hitchcock It Is Decided That Head of Ticket Cannot Overlook Demands and Trip Will Commence About First of October.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

MIDDLE BASS (O.) Sept. 5.—William H. Taft will make a traveling campaign during the month of October, devoting his time principally to those States which the National Committee may consider doubtful, if the ideas of both the candidate and his national chairman, Frank H. Hitchcock, as expressed today, are carried out.

Mr. Taft indicated that, although the greatest demand for his presence had come from the west, this would not preclude his appearance in Eastern States and that when the tour was decided on it would undoubtedly reach both East and West.

"I had a very fine talk with Judge Taft for a long time about the demand that he go on a speech-making tour," said Mr. Hitchcock, who is on his way to New York.

"There is a great demand for him in the West, in fact all over—a demand that is so strong, so overwhelming, that I do not know whether it is possible to refuse it. Party leaders thought it best that he should not go personally into the campaign but the situation is different now from what it was then. Party organizations want him—want to see him. That trip that Judge Taft made through Ohio has convinced all that he has made good as a campaigner. It is possible therefore that by October 1, he will go out to make some speeches.

"I also went over the situation with Judge Taft, State by State, telling him of the reports I have received and what the party leaders have said. There is no doubt that he will win if we make the right kind of a campaign and keep at it."

GOOD MARGIN.

MAINE SAFE BY TEN THOUSAND.

PLURALITY FOR FERNALD MAY BE EVEN GREATER.

Contest Is on Local Issues Wholly, Prohibition Largely Figuring—Obadiah Gardner, Democratic Candidate, Is Strong With Farmers, and Is Making Good Fight.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Me.) Sept. 5.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Conservative leaders in the Republican party believe that Bert M. Fernald (Rep.) will be elected Governor over Obadiah Gardner (Dem.) on September 14 by a plurality of about 10,000. More radical claims are being made, but few really anticipate a margin of more than 15,000 for the victor, at the outside.

The contest has been waged wholly on local issues, and anything like the 25,000 plurality of 1904 is considered an impossibility. Early in the campaign the Democratic leaders served notice on the National Committee that no aid from outside the State was wanted or expected, the State organization preferring to make its own fight according to its own ideas.

The rebellion which cut Gov. Cobb's plurality from 25,000 in 1904 to 8000 in 1906 was due largely to Mr. Cobb's stand on the enforcement of the prohibitory law and the Sturgis act, which made State authorities displace local officers in enforcing the liquor law in any city or town where such action seemed advisable to the State administration. The unpopularity of this move proved a serious hardship to Gov. Cobb two years ago, and Mr. Fernald faces the same proposition as a result of a platform indorsement of Cobb's efforts.

The Democratic candidate, Obadiah Gardner, is widely known, and, as head of the State Grange, is popular with the farmers, almost to a man. Gardner also gets much strength from his support of the movement to compel owners of timber land to pay taxes on a valuation made on the same basis as that of farm property. He also urges a heavier assessment on railroad property as a means of further relieving the burdens of the farmers.

SHALLENBERGER IN LEAD.

Incomplete Returns from Nebraska Primary Indicate That Dahlman Loses by 3000.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

OMAHA (Neb.) Sept. 5.—Official canvasses of the returns of the primary election were completed in most counties today and about half of them have been received at the newspaper offices. These give Shallenberger a plurality of about 1800 over Dahlman on the Democratic ticket in the race for Governor. It now appears that Shallenberger's plurality will run from 3000 to 5000. Berge, the populist candidate, is third man in the race, and will run about 2000 votes behind Dahlman. The tabulated returns for the entire State will not be available until some time next week.

COLLEGE MEN REPUBLICAN.

POLITICS CHANGED.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 5.—Alfred E. Lunt, president of the National Republican College League, arrived at national Republican headquarters today, conferred with Secretary Hayward and began the college campaign for Taft and Sherman.

"The League has demonstrated its worth," said Mr. Lunt, "by changing the political viewpoint of college undergraduates. It was formerly largely Democratic, but has become overwhelmingly Republican."

CUMMINS MAKES STATEMENT.

MAY STUMP STATE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

DES MOINES (Iowa) Sept. 5.—Gov. Cummins today issued a statement to the stand-patters opposition in which he declared that if he is elected for the short term and is not the choice of the Republican party at the November primary he will resign and take the stump for the successful candidate.

POLITICAL BRIEFS.

Nominations at Eureka.

EUREKA, Sept. 5.—At the Republican County Convention today the following nominations were made: Assembly, Second District, William Kehoe; Third District, J. W. McClelland. Kehoe is an anti-machine man; McClelland is regarded as neutral.

Debs and Party Leave Denver.

DENVER, Sept. 5.—Eugene V. Debs, Socialist candidate for President, and his party, continued their westward trip by special train today. Mr. Debs is scheduled to make a short address this afternoon at Salida, where the railroad shops are located, and this evening he will hold a meeting at Leadville.

Bryan Prepares for Speaking Tour.

FAIRVIEW, LINCOLN (Neb.) Sept. 5.—This was "cleaning up" day at Fairview, preparatory to the departure tomorrow on his long trip to the Eastern and Middle States of William J. Bryan, Democratic candidate for the Presidency. Mr. Bryan was early to work, and during the forenoon practically denied himself to callers.

WOULD TAP LAKE TAHOE.

Scheme Proposed to Utilize Lake Water for Power and City Supply.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

RENO (Nev.) Sept. 5.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] If the plans of a number of California millionaires are carried out, under the advice of Attorney J. A. Waymire of San Francisco, the waters of beautiful Lake Tahoe will be tunneled through the Sierra Nevada mountains to the American River, where four large power plants will be erected for supplying power, light and water to a number of large California cities.

This is the information secured by Henry Thurtell, member of the Nevada Railroad Commission, and former State Engineer. This information is also contained in a pamphlet printed by Waymire, who claims the Tahoe waters can be legally taken.

Nevada engineers are inclined to ridicule the story of Waymire, but the scheme is possible, according to the plans of the attorney, who says he is backed by $50,000,000 of California capital. It would mean ruin to Verdi, Reno and farms on the Truckee meadows and other localities along the route of the Truckee River, where the water supply will be tapped.

AGED COUPLE DIE TOGETHER.

Bodies Found in Residence: Thought Husband Committed Murder and Suicide.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

EAST BRIDGEWATER (Mass.) Sept. 5.—The bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Kimball Sheldon were found in their residence today. The body of Mrs. Sheldon was lying on the bed with a deep wound on the head, while the body of Mr. Sheldon was in an adjoining bathroom, which was filled with gas from a wide open jet.

It was the opinion of the medical examiner that Mr. Sheldon killed his wife and then committed suicide.

Mr. Sheldon was 70 years old. According to friends he had lost $500,000 in the past few years through unfortunate investments.

BUFORD SAILS FOR MANILA.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 5.—With 300 casual troops, fifty marines and ninety cabin passengers on board, the United States army transport Buford sailed for Manila, via Honolulu, today.

Among the cabin passengers are Honolulu school teachers who have been spending their vacation in California, a number of them attending the summer courses at the University of California.

The Buford had a cargo of 500 tons of commissary and quartermaster supplies for Honolulu, Guam and Manila.

Flexible Rubber Plates

Have many advantages over the old thick, cumbersome, ordinary rubber plates and even over gold plates, being much light thinner. These plates are flexible, only a trifle thicker than heavy writing paper, fit closer and adhere better to the roof of the Particles of food and small seeds cannot get under them. They will last longer, are stronger than any others and will not break, will give first, being flexible. Dr. Schiffman's own process and made only by us.

I have always heretofore shared with most people the dread of a dentist's chair. But now am sure I shall not dread the ordeal again, for at your office I can truthfully say, "I was not hurt at all." Even the bridgework which I had dreaded was painless and most satisfactory. MRS. EARL ROGERS.

It gives me great pleasure to state that Dr. Schiffman extracted an impacted wisdom tooth for me, which had been giving me great annoyance for years. It was extracted absolutely without a particle of pain to me. It was easily worth 100 times the amount paid. ROBERT MARSH, Of Robert Marsh & Co., H. W. Hellman Bldg.

Dr. Schiffman placed bridgework in my mouth which has proven, after five years' use, to be a perfect piece of work and durable. Is now quite as serviceable as original teeth. A very difficult tooth was pulled before this bridgework was put in, and "it didn't hurt a bit." C. S. SPRECHER, Printer and Publisher, 115 Winston st.

Dr. Schiffman extracted twenty teeth for me, and did it absolutely without pain. I have had a great deal of experience with other dentists, and can truthfully say that Dr. Schiffman's method is best of all. I highly recommend him to everyone. T. B. ROSECRANS, Soldiers' Home.

For all the past fourteen years Dr. Schiffman has been doing my dental work. In all they extracted and replaced by means of crown and bridgework some twenty odd teeth. The work is very satisfactory and I highly recommend him. H. A. WITTICK, 81 Mary st., Pasadena, Cal.

Have had molar tooth extracted by Dr. Schiffman. It was a complicated task, but work was done very successfully and I heartily recommend Dr. Schiffman to any needing dental work. REV. W. E. BLAIR, District Supt. Children's Home Society of California, 224 Daisy ave., Long Beach, Cal.

Have had several teeth extracted by Dr. Schiffman without any pain. M. E. MASON, With Fairbanks-Morse & Co., 136 S. Los Angeles st.

Dr. Schiffman did some crown work for me, four years ago, which proved satisfactory. I came in today and had my teeth examined and found that everything was just like new. MRS. A. SCHILLING, 864 W. 52nd st.

I have had two plates made by Dr. Schiffman and after a three months' trial can truthfully say that they are entirely satisfactory. T. H. BREWSTER, President Santa Monica Oil, Gas and Mining Co., 224 West 41st st.

I have had teeth extracted, plate and bridgework done by Dr. Schiffman. I am delighted with the work and advise nervous women to go to Dr. Schiffman. MATHILDE M. PHELPS, 1350 S. Figueroa st.

Dr. Schiffman, I consider expert. By experience I find his work painless and perfectly satisfactory. H. C. ROYER, M.D., 103 S. Spring, Los Angeles.

Dr. Schiffman has just filled a tooth for me and he also put in a crown and a bridge about five months ago, all of which has given me complete satisfaction. My work was all done painlessly. S. E. MILLS, No. 530 Ave. 20.

Dr. Schiffman extracted two worthless teeth for me and replaced them by bridgework, which was done to my entire satisfaction and without any pain whatever. MRS. JUSTICE J. ROESE, 903 E. 49th st.

I have been treated by Dr. Schiffman for years. I have tried all the different methods, and I can say unhesitatingly no dentist or physician has ever operated with such success or skill. In extracting my teeth he did it without any pain to me. It is a great pleasure to me to recommend him and his methods of treatment. MILO M. POTTER, Prop. Van Nuys Hotel and Hotel Potter, Santa Barbara.

I have had bridgework Schiffman and I am pleased

PASADENA.

KEEP CORPSE NINE MONTHS.

WOMAN'S BODY HELD DURING HUNT FOR RELATIVES.

Latter, Supposed to Be Wealthy People of Seattle, Cannot Be Located and Local Friends Tardily Come Forward to Pay for Burial. Chafin to Speak.

Office of The Times, No. 28 S. Raymond Ave.

PASADENA, Sept. 6.—Living under two names, deserted by her supposed husband some days before death, her body at an undertaking establishment since December 21 of last year with no one willing to say what shall be done with it, the peculiar case of Mrs. Gertrude Jackson, who passed for several weeks as the wife of a young man known as Lefebvre, has at last aroused tardy attention. The body is now at the establishment of Egglestone & Son, South Pasadena, where it was taken after the usual competition to get such cases, for the woman was supposed at the time of her death to be connected with wealthy people in Seattle. Efforts to secure their address have failed.

Mrs. Gertrude Jackson, whose body has been kept at South Pasadena undertaking establishment nine months in hope that supposed rich relatives of Seattle might be located and pay funeral expenses.

Lefebvre and his supposed wife engaged rooms at the home of Frank L. Conway, No. 112 Waverly Drive, last Hallowe'en. They appeared to have money, and wore diamonds. One by one the diamonds went to the pawnshop and at last the woman, young and attractive, went to the Pasadena Hospital, where it was found she was in an advanced state of tuberculosis. Some days before her death her supposed husband exhibited a draft which he said was drawn to his wife's order. Conway noticed it was drawn to a Mrs. Jackson. The man left the city before his supposed wife died and he has never been heard from since.

Some friends who knew the girl in her prosperous days forwarded enough money to partially pay for burial and the casket and so now, nine months after death, the body will probably be buried in Pasadena, its life mystery going with it to the grave.

CHAFIN WILL SPEAK.

It is announced that because Pasadena has established such a reputation for moral cleanliness and as an anti-saloon city, Eugene W. Chafin, candidate of the Prohibition party for the Presidency, will make it a point to address a public meeting here next Saturday evening at 6 o'clock. He is to deliver an address in Los Angeles at 8 o'clock the same evening.

RANCH IS SOLD.

H. W. Bailey has sold his fifty-acre ranch near Ventura to G. B. Wardman of South Pasadena and Dr. C. L. Bennett, a visitor from Old Mexico. The consideration is $45,000 and the deal was made through the William R. Staats Company.

FAMOUS LAWYER BUILDS.

Thomas T. Fauntleroy, one of St. Louis' most famous lawyers and the man who defended the Woman's Home Companion in the famous suit started by the instance of President Roosevelt, is to build a home at the corner of Marengo avenue and Calaveras street, Altadena.

POPULATION OVER 30,000.

In another week the new directory will be out. It will contain 16,236 names and not less than 600 pages and upon the usual directory estimate ratio indicates a population of about 30,750 in Pasadena.

Assistant Manager John B. Dame of the Hotel Maryland was operated upon at the Pasadena Hospital, yesterday, for appendicitis. It is reported that the operation failed to indicate that appendicitis was the cause of Mr. Dame's illness.

Postal receipts during August showed an increase of 10 per cent. over August, 1907. This is one of the largest gains of the year.

FINE NEW PLANT READY.

Pomona Gets Substantial Addition to Industrial Establishments—Postal Arrangements.

POMONA, Sept. 5.—The San Antonio Meat Company's fine new meat packing plant, southeast of the Pomona Valley Ice Company's plant, is now completed and in running order. It has the most modern and sanitary packing-house in this part of the State. The establishment is another valuable industrial asset to Pomona.

Charles M. Stone, cashier of the First National Bank of this city, and his wife are at Avalon.

The funeral of Henry Cary, who died at his home on South Park avenue yesterday, at the advanced age of 86 years, was held from J. E. Patterson's chapel this afternoon, Rev. M. Cluff of the Christian Church officiating.

On Monday, Labor Day, practically all of the local business houses will be closed. The mail carriers will make regular morning deliveries and collections, but there will be no delivery by the rural route carriers. The rural patrons will be served at the carriers' window, at the postoffice, according to arrangements made by Postmaster Avis, until 10:30 a.m., all departments of the office remaining open up to that time, when the office will be closed for the rest of the day. On Wednesday, Admission Day, the same rule will prevail, except that the rural carriers will make deliveries.

NEW CHIEF GUARD.

Col. Thomas Derry Selected for Post at Soldiers' Home—Enviable War Record.

SOLDIERS' HOME, Sept. 5.—Col. Thomas Derry, the present commander of Company L, will be appointed Chief of the Guard, next week; he will select an entirely new force of men.

Col. Derry has a splendid war record. He was promoted from captain to colonel of the Third Wisconsin Cavalry, and was mentioned in an enviable number of instances for gallant and meritorious conduct in action.

COL. MARKHAM GOING EAST.

Local Manager, Col. H. H. Markham will attend the session of the board of managers at the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, which is to be held soon at Genesco, N. Y.

Two large pumps for operation at wells at the submerged dam site have arrived and will be at once installed. Chief Engineer Dobbings states they will handle 150,000 gallons daily.

Sergeant of the Guard Dugan, tendered his resignation, yesterday. He says he is going to "try his luck" in the desert.

NEW NURSE APPOINTED.

Mrs. S. M. Grant, a graduate of the Los Angeles Emergency and General Hospital, is appointed nurse at the home hospital.

GLENDALE GAIETY.

GLENDALE, Sept. 5.—The most brilliant affair of the summer season was the grand reception and ball tonight at the Country Club following the tennis finals between the Hollywood and Glendale teams, under the auspices of the Woman's Auxiliary and members of the club. The affair followed an eight-course Spanish dinner at Casa Verdugo, when home players and visitors were the guests of President L. C. Brand. The Reception Committee, in the absence of Mrs. Charles Shattuck, was headed by Mrs. Edgar W. Pack. The decorations of the handsome rooms were red geraniums, fern baskets and ivy garlands. One hundred guests were present.

REDONDO.

REDONDO, Sept. 5.—A man named Reed was arrested this morning at the Redondo Villa tract by a deputy sheriff from Visalia, Tulare county, on a charge of incest.

The crime is said to have been committed some time ago and to have been made public through trouble between the man and his son. The latter says he was tied up by his thumbs until exhausted. This act of cruelty turned the children of the man against him, and they accused him of the graver crime, but before he could be arrested he skipped. Only after much difficulty could the authorities trace him.

COVINA.

COVINA, Sept. 5.—The County Horticultural Commission has divided this district and appointed an additional inspector in the person of S. L. Spencer, who will work under Commissioner C. E. Bemis.

Miss Rose Nigg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alois Nigg, is the winner of a Hazzard scholarship through merit in the University of Southern California. This is one of the last of the remaining scholarships sustained by the Whittier philanthropist of that name.

BACKS REQUEST WITH GUN.

Electrician Accused of Trying to Compel Merchant to Cash Check. Disarmed and Arrested.

When H. Kaufman, a merchant at No. 140 North Main street, refused to cash a check for J. D. Quintin, an electrician, last night, the latter drew a revolver, it is said, and attempted to compel the storekeeper to accept the paper. Kaufman dropped behind the counter and shouted for help. James Fisk, a night watchman, responded and seized Quintin as he rushed out of the place. After disarming the man, Fisk took him to the Police Station.

Quintin feigned drunkenness, the police say, and denied that he entered the store. He said that he lives in Pasadena with his family. When searched the check could not be found and Fisk thinks that he dropped it while on the way to the station.

STRIKE GOLD ALMOST PURE.

Miners Leasing Old Property in Montana Find Fabulous Pay Streak.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

HELENA (Mont.) Sept. 5.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] George Malben and George Redding, who have the famous early-day Whitlach Union mine, four miles south of the city under lease, have made one of the richest gold strikes in the history of Montana.

The strike is reported to be eighty per cent. pure, or at the rate of $388,000 a ton. The pay streak is six inches thick and the ore resembles a solid chunk where gold is interspersed with talc.

The discovery was made when the vein in which the men were working encountered a cross vein, and on its "hanging" wall, the ore in the original vein and from which regular shipments are being made averaged $100 a ton, as does that in the new ore independent vein. Whitlach in early days yielded about $4,000,000 in gold, when it became involved in litigation. A few years ago it was purchased by Milwaukee residents and again sold to a Helena syndicate, which has leased it to the fortunate miners. The strike has created a sensation in mining circles.

FOREST FIRES AGAIN RAGING.

Spring up Afresh in Upper Peninsula of Michigan—Many Farms in Danger.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

HOUGHTON (Mich.) Sept. 5.—The losses by forest fires in the Upper Peninsula this year are the heaviest on record.

Forest fires raging in Houghton county the past few days sprang up afresh during the night, and today Houghton and the entire Portage Lake district was enveloped in a dense pall of smoke, occasioning much alarm.

Millions of feet of timber have been burned, and many farms are in danger of being wiped out.

NEAR SEA HORROR.

HEROIC DEEDS IN DENSE FOG.

Shna-Yak Strikes on Rocks Off Point Arena.

Deck Lashings Cut and Six Men Go Overboard.

Shipmates' Splendid Courage Saves Their Lives.

SAN PEDRO, Sept. 5.—The mystery concerning the identity of the vessel recently reported ashore at Point Arena was solved this morning, when the steamer Shna-Yak arrived here, and her captain, William Hutton, told of a narrow escape from destruction and of the courage and heroism of the officers and crew.

On the afternoon of September 1, the Shna-Yak, in an unusually thick fog, grounded among the treacherous rocks off Point Arena. She struck heavily four or five times amidships. Three hundred thousand feet of lumber were jettisoned in a few minutes, she was backed off, and proceeded on her course with only slight damage.

When the deck lashings were cut six of the crew were carried overboard, but scrambled up on the lumber, and were picked up by the lifeboats of the Shna-Yak. These men were First Officer A. Paulsen, R. Holstein, Anton Carlsen, Charles Krohn, Harold Berker and E. R. Larsen. Holstein became entangled in the floating lumber, and was saved by the heroism of Tony Jordan, a shipmate and a fireman, who leaped into the sea from the deck of the steamer, and kept his friend up until help came. Jordan had to dive under the floating lumber in order to assist in extricating Holstein.

CAPTAIN'S STORY.

The story of the accident is told by Capt. Hutton as follows:

"We left Port Hadlock on Sunday afternoon, and after passing Capt Flattery, ran into one of the thickest fogs I ever experienced. It was so dense I could hardly see the bow of my vessel from the bridge, and after twenty-six hours of that sort of weather, I was unable to determine the ship's position. I took all the usual precautions—stopping the ship to take soundings and blowing the siren. Ten minutes before the Shna-Yak struck, I took a sounding, and found plenty of water. At 4:40 o'clock Tuesday afternoon the vessel first grounded.

DOESN'T HEAR FOG HORN.

"I could not hear the fog horn at Point Arena, but I imagined I was near there. She struck four or five times heavily amidships, and realizing that it was the only way to save the vessel, I ordered the deck lashings cut. This order might seem cold-blooded to a landsman, but it was the only course to pursue, since the water was as calm as a mill pond. The order was immediately complied with, and 300,000 feet of lumber and six of the crew were swept into the sea. The main and after rigging was carried away when the lumber went overboard. I ordered the lifeboats launched, and the men, who had scrambled aboard the wreckage, were picked up. Jordan deserves great praise for his rescue of Holstein, who was the only man in serious danger. As soon as the lumber was jettisoned, I found the Shna-Yak was afloat, and backed her out to deep water. The thing that worried me most was lest the wreckage should foul the rudder. We were certainly in a dangerous position. Wash Rock was directly in front of our bow, and huge rocks appeared on both the port and starboard side of the ship. We were only on the rocks about ten minutes.

"We arrived here without the ship leaking but I believe she is little injured. I can not commend too highly the action of the officers and my men in the time of our peril.

HOW IT HAPPENED.

"Of course every one has an explanation for an accident at sea. My explanation of this accident is that it was due to the fact that an unusually strong current was running inshore. After leaving Point Arena, I set the Shna-Yak on her usual course for Point Reyes and she veered inshore four miles in a distance of sixty-eight miles. From Point Reyes to Point Sur is 122 miles and in that distance she fetched inshore seven miles."

The officers and men speak in highest terms of the conduct of the commander. Chief Engineer Frank Bragg, who has sailed the coast for thirty years, stated that Capt. Hutton displayed exceptional courage and calmness in the face of danger.

SHNA-YAK A NEW SHIP.

The Shna-Yak is a handsome new vessel of the steam-schooner type. Her managing owner is George E. Billings of San Francisco. She was built at Eagle Harbor by Hall Brothers and was placed in commission last December. She carries a crew of twenty-two officers and men, has a capacity of one million feet of lumber. She cost $125,000.

TOWS LOG RAFT.

The steam schooner Yosemite, Capt. Jahnsen, has been a busy ship since leaving Astoria. She towed a log raft containing 7,600,000 feet of lumber for the Hammond Lumber Company from the northern port to San Diego and carried 800,000 additional feet for wholesalers at San Diego, Redondo and San Pedro. She cleared tonight for San Diego to load the chains of the log raft and will return to this port Monday night. The value of the log raft was $40,000, of the chains, $20,000, and of her own cargo $8800, a total of $68,800.

INJURED BY EXPLOSION.

The oil pipe on switch engine No. 11 on the San Pedro, Los Angeles and Salt Lake Railroad exploded about 3 o'clock, this morning, at East San Pedro. J. L. Dougherty, night hostler, was seriously burned and was removed to the railroad hospital in Los Angeles. The engine was wrecked and was taken to the shop for repairs.

THREE DAYS TO WRITE PLAY.

James K. Hackett so Greatly Pleased With Plot He Accepts It Unwritten.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 5.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Miss Zoe Akins, daughter of Federal Subtreasurer and former National Republican Committeeman Thomas J. Akins, 21 years old, who proposed a national Republican plank at the Chicago convention for the expulsion and transportation to the Philippines of all negroes in the United States, has closed a contract with James K. Hackett, now appearing at a suburban garden theater here, to write for him a four-act play and have the first draft ready by Monday night.

The play, the temporary title of which is "Mrs. Harwood," deals with the reaction of heredity and the plot pleased Hackett so much that he accepted it before a word had been written.

DOG BITES END FATALLY.

Three Persons Succumb to Rabies During "Dog Days" in New York City.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—In the "dog days" of July and August this year there were three deaths from rabies in this city. That is looked on as an unusual number.

The cases were all well-defined rabies. In each instance the brain of the victim was examined by bacteriologists and the negri bodies, the surest indications of hydrophobia, were found in large numbers.

In the last month, the number of cases of dog-bite treated at the Pasteur Institute fell off a great deal. Before the board of health instituted its death penalty enforcement of the law demanding a muzzle or leash on all dogs in the streets the institute had as high as thirty-eight cases under treatment. There are now only fifteen cases in the institute, and these will soon be discharged.

LETTER CARRIERS' PICNIC.

Members of the Rural Letter Carriers' Association, their substitutes and families of Los Angeles county, also some from routes in near-by counties, will have a picnic tomorrow in Eastlake Park. It is not often that these hard-working suburban employés of the postoffice get a day to celebrate, and they intend to make up for it tomorrow. Ranchers and the inhabitants of a hundred towns will miss their mail tomorrow, but will probably get a double share to make up promptly on Tuesday.

DIES AT OXNARD.

Mother of Los Angeles Woman Passes Away—Japanese Victim of Mexican Highwayman.

OXNARD, Sept. 5.—Mrs. Estelle Lehman, mother of Mrs. E. Gerson of Los Angeles, died here this morning, after six months' illness. The funeral will take place at San Luis Obispo, Monday.

EXTENSION OF TIME.

Greenwell & Donlon have been granted a sixty-day extension on their contract for the paving of the streets of Oxnard with heavy macadam.

JAPANESE ROBBED.

A bold hold-up was accomplished night before last at the entrance to Odd Fellows Hall, while the lodge was holding its regular meeting. T. Tani, accompanied by his wife and another Japanese lady, was suddenly confronted by two Mexicans, one of whom placed a gun at the head of the Japanese and ordered the women to stand in the middle of the street. The second Mexican relieved Tani of a $65 watch and $40 in coin, after which both robbers made a run for it, just as thirty Odd Fellows appeared.

LOMPOC.

LOMPOC, Sept. 5.—Earl Fillmore of Santa Rita, was crushed to death beneath an oil wagon night before last. It is supposed the six horses took fright and that the six-ton tank overturned and fell on him. His body was crushed almost as flat as a pancake. The Coroner's jury returned a verdict of accidental death.

BANNING.

BANNING, Sept. 6.—An unknown Mexican was killed this morning while attempting to board a moving train near the station. The body was dragged several hundred feet and terribly lacerated.

SHOOTS OFF HEAD OF REPTILE TO GET RABBIT.

Miss Warwick, While Guest of Daughter of U. S. Grant, Jr., at Camp Near San Diego, Proves Herself Good Sportswoman—Founder of Rawhide Weds.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN DIEGO, Sept. 5.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Miss Imogene Warwick, a belle of Richmond, Va., who is the guest of Miss Fannie Grant, daughter of U. S. Grant, Jr., today shot and killed a rattlesnake with eleven rattles. The Grant family is in camp on a ranch at Sweetwater Dam. Miss Warwick had shot a rabbit, and when she saw the snake make for it she shot its head off.

MINING MAN MARRIES.

Charles B. Holman, founder of Rawhide, Nev., received the news of the destruction of his property in that town by fire just before he was married to Miss Lillian Howarth, who recently came here from Rhode Island with her mother and grandmother. The ceremony took place at the residence of Rev. Samuel J. Shaw. Before leaving for Los Angeles and San Francisco the groom stated he would immediately restore the buildings that were burned. Holman, who is 29 years old and an Englishman, makes frequent trips to this city for medical treatment.

LOG ROLLING IN PROGRESS.

Fully 5000 Modern Woodmen are now encamped at Tent City, Coronado, where the annual log-rolling is in progress. At headquarters last night the following camps registered: Garvanza No. 9603, Long Beach No. 8269, Whittier No. 7284, Vernon No. 9875, Pacific of Los Angeles, Golden State of Los Angeles No. 7110, Highland No. 1300, Pasadena No. 7242, South Los Angeles No. 2848, Good Fellowship of San Francisco No. 9683.

DECLINES WITH THANKS.

Albert Schoonover of this city, who was nominated by the Democrats to make the race for Congress in the Eighth District, has declined the nomination. He is a partner of Republican Senator L. A. Wright.

A. R. Gress of Pasadena is here to get a child whom, he claims, belongs to him, although she is in the custody of a woman who styles herself "Mrs. A. T. Johnson." Gress applied to Chief of Police Neely for protection from A. T. Johnson, with whom, he says, the woman is living. Gress says Johnson will not allow him on the premises where the mother and the child live.

ASSAULTED BY HIGHWAYMEN.

While returning to his home at Oceanside Thursday night John Manning was assaulted by highwaymen whom he resister when they ordered him to put up his hands. They slugged him with a piece of gas pipe and escaped with $0 in money and a watch. Mr. Manning is the father of Rector Manning of Trinity Church, New York, and of John Manning, a prominent attorney of Los Angeles. He is not seriously injured.

The Biological Society's power yacht arrived in port this evening after a cruise of eleven days down the coast. The voyage was largely to test the new boat, but many fine marine specimens were obtained. The yacht met rough weather, but behaved well. Capt. Dale was in command and Dr. Fred Baker and wife, Prof. Wesley C. Crandall and John F. West of the State Normal School were on board.

DARED INTO MARRIAGE.

Guests at Mound Party Challenge Engaged Couple to Wed and They Do It.

VENTURA, Sept. 5.—Last evening Miss Alice Kiler, who is visiting her sister, Mrs. Will Dunning, at Mound, was tendered a surprise party. Among the guests was Fred Pollard of Indio to whom Miss Kiler was engaged. Some one suggested that the surprise party be turned into a wedding party and the idea was hailed with enthusiasm by everybody, except the parties most concerned. When, however, their friends dared them to get married then and there, the challenge was accepted. A minister was summoned and the ceremony performed at 10:30 o'clock. After a honeymoon trip, Mr. and Mrs. Pollard will make their home in Indio.

LIVES IN PERIL.

FIRE EATS UP SMALL TOWN.

DESTRUCTION OF BARNWELL IS REPORTED BY PROSPECTOR.

Postoffice, Santa Fe Station, Seven Dwellings and Warehouse Prey of Flames—Mail Saved by Postmaster's Bravery—Blaze in San Bernardino Hotel.

SAN BERNARDINO, Sept. 5.—Harry Lewis, a desert prospector, reached here, this morning, with news of the destruction of Manvel (commonly known as Barnwell) by fire Monday night. The mercantile establishment of the Brown-Gosney corporation was the heaviest loser, and next to that the Santa Fé Railroad Company, whose depot was burned.

Other structures razed were the Postoffice, seven dwellings and a storage house. Through the bravery of the Postmaster the mail pouches were saved. The total loss is estimated at $6500 on buildings, $1500 on merchandise and $1300 on goods in the warehouse.

The fire was of unknown origin and was discovered shortly before midnight. Several families had narrow escapes.

HOTEL ON FIRE.

A fire of mysterious origin, at an early hour this morning, threatened destruction to the Southern Hotel at the corner of Fourth and D street. The flames had been extinguished when a big gasoline tank exploded. The total loss is estimated at about $3000.

AT REVOLVER'S POINT.

D. Pendleton, said to be a brother of C. W. Pendleton of Los Angeles, and S. A. Hanson, of a Los Angeles messenger service, were arrested last night by Detective Baldwin at the point of a revolver at Upland. They stole a ride on top of the baggage car attached to the Santa Fé westbound overland No. 2 and had defied the conductor, it is alleged. Both were put in jail, but this afternoon money was received from Los Angeles to pay their fines of $10 each.

Jesus Amarias, this morning, swore to a complaint charging Wong Lung, a gardener with shooting his cow. The defendant was released on $75 bail.

BUILDING ACTIVITY.

Building permits for the week just closed total $6800, an increase of $1400 over the total of last week.

A warrant was issued, today, for the arrest of C. F. Bouldin, charged with forging the name of H. Galeron, Jr., to a check for $11.30 and cashing it at a local restaurant. The accused, a member of a well-known family, has disappeared.

Word was received here today of the death of the 8-year-old son of Superintendent B. S. Morrison of the Duplex mine at Searchlight, Wednesday. The boy was being hauled to the surface in an ore bucket. His father awaited his arrival at the mouth of the shaft, only to find him dead in the bucket, his neck having been broken by coming in contact with a beam at the 500-foot level, while the child was leaning out to toy with the bell cord.

OLDEST MASON IN COUNTRY.

MOUNT SUNAPEE (N. H.) Sept. 5.—James Bellows McGregor, the oldest Mason in the country, and believed to be the oldest white man in the United States, today celebrated his 107th birthday. Mr. McGregor can read ordinary print with the aid of a reading glass, and is hale and hearty.

CHEERY OLD COUPLE

Find Grape-Nuts a Blessing.

After one is seventy, the question of nourishment is a very delicate one.

When old age comes on we do not need so much food as during the more active years, but the digestive organs are very sensitive and care must be exercised in its selection.

No food has the strength giving properties and is so easy to digest by old and young as Grape-Nuts.

"For years I have been troubled with dyspepsia—for one period, 8 years"—writes our aged minister.

"I finally began using Grape-Nuts and have had no trouble with my stomach since, feel perfectly well and strong, and though I am 71 years old I feel like a boy.

"Then, too, my wife has been troubled for years with biliousness and sick headache. Since she began to use Grape-Nuts, about 8 weeks ago, she has no further trouble.

"She is quite well and strong, much more cheery and happy than in other years. Grape-Nuts and Postum occupy an important place on our breakfast table, and in our daily food. It would be hard for me to tell what we owe to Grape-Nuts.

"There's a Reason."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

IN PERIL FROM WATER.

LONG MAROONED IN NEW MEXICO.

PASADENA MAN'S MYSTERIOUS ABSENCE EXPLAINED.

Heavy Floods Drive Him to Isolated Cabin and Keep Him There Three Weeks—Telegram Delights Family, Who Feared Capitalist Had Met With Foul Play.

After being marooned for three weeks in a flooded district of New Mexico, Edward Cobb, a capitalist of Pasadena, sent a telegram, yesterday, to his family informing them that he had escaped injury and would immediately start for home. During the time he was isolated in a cabin about eighty miles from Folsom, N. M., the police officials throughout the State were searching for him. It was feared that he had met with foul play and had been robbed of $20,000 which he intended to invest.

In his telegram Cobb sent he stated that his party had a narrow escape from being swept away in the torrents which flooded the district. They were forced to leave the ranch house in which they were stopping and seek shelter on higher ground. They fortunately had enough provisions to last until they could get to Folsom.

Mr. Cobb went to New Mexico about a month ago to purchase a tract of land. He had negotiable paper amounting to $20,000 when he left here. He went to El Paso to meet several men who were to show him the land. When he left El Paso, on August 17, he wrote to his family and that was the last heard of him until yesterday. About a week ago, the police of El Paso were requested to search for him. Word was received, a day or two later, that he had gone to Albuquerque, N. M., and the police there were notified to look out for him.

Mr. Cobb succeeded in closing the realty transaction about ten days ago and was preparing to leave for home when the heavy floods came, and many lives were lost and acres of valuable property damaged.

"THE SPARK."

Bright Little Magazine Issued by the Pacific Electric—It Will Please.

The first number of The Spark, a Southern California magazine, into which the Pacific Electric Magazine has been transformed, has made its appearance under the September date. It comes out under the editorial and business management of John Stewart Daggett, a keen and versatile young gentleman, well known in this city and Pasadena. In the warmth of his introductory editorial Mr. Daggett says: "The Spark would kindle a flame of love for Southern California in the hearts of those who crave peace, plenty and happiness."

The magazine is a handsome piece of work from the presses of The Times-Mirror Printing and Binding House, has an orange-illuminated cover and is profusely illustrated, and printed on cream-tint plated paper. It is full of excellent reading touching upon Southern California life, the first article in the number being entitled: "Pio Pico's Romance." Following this is a finely-illustrated article on the "Gardens of the Sea," descriptive of the beauties that lie beneath the surface of the Pacific. There is a charming little Chinese story by Mary Stewart Daggett, entitled "The Coat of Many Colors."

There is something characteristic of the editor in the title he writes over his table of contents. "Storage Battery," he calls it. Also in his department heading, "Blowouts," in the first line of which he says: "Southern California is the land of holidays, happiness and hot tamales." He heads out his witty quips with the word, "Shocks." The department devoted to the fruit and vegetable industry is headed, "Feeders." Mr. Daggett will make a readable publication of The Spark. It is the happiest publication of its kind that has been issued here—a great improvement on the P. E.

ATTORNEY IN TROUBLE.

C. N. Gary, an attorney living at Palms, was arrested last night on the charge of passing a fictitious check. The warrant was issued on the complaint of Manager Leavitt of the Jacoby Bros.' dry goods store, where Gary gave the check, which was drawn on the Bank of Sawtelle for $15. Gary made every possible effort last night to get bail fixed in order to avoid going to jail, but was unsuccessful. He has offices in the Security building and is president of the Palms Land, Light and Power Company.

CLEAN UP!!!

EYESORES MUST GO IS HEALTHFUL TIP.

Many Ugly Spots in the City Beautiful Put Under Ban.

Campaign Begun by Authorities, Who Appeal to the Civic Pride of Property Owners, but Will Prosecute, If Necessary—Hundreds of Neglected Lots in Finest Parts of Los Angeles Nuisances.

LOS ANGELES, one of the world's most beautiful cities, is afflicted with a nuisance that mars her attractiveness, affects her remarkably healthful conditions, and in some instances doubtless depreciates property values—the numerous neglected lot, used as a dump, in the finest sections. The municipal authorities have awakened to the necessity of eradicating these eyesores, and are beginning a general cleaning-up campaign. They are going about it mildly, but none the less thoroughly, and if the civic pride of property owners does not prompt them to do their part, they are to be prosecuted in the Police Court.

Pictures of Disgraceful Ugliness in a City Beautiful.

A few glaring examples of the many neglected properties on the principal streets and in the most attractive localities of Los Angeles. The authorities are starting a clean-up of these eyesores. Prosecution of owners for maintaining a nuisance is possible under a municipal ordinance.

With the approach of the annual municipal house-cleaning, the city officials are prepared to make a more extensive campaign than ever before.

Last fall, more than 20,000 loads of debris, gathered from vacant lots and backyards, were carted away by city employés, working under the direction of the Board of Health.

This fall, in addition to the house-to-house canvass of the health inspectors, a direct appeal to civic pride is to be made. This will not be based on any municipal ordinance, but will be rather an appeal to the patriotism of citizens who are, or should be, anxious to make Los Angeles the cleanest city in the country. It is possible, however, that some prosecutions will be necessary, in which case it is understood they will be pressed.

In past seasons it has been a comparatively easy task to serve notices on householders to clean backyards and follow more closely the health regulations. The greatest difficulty has been to locate the owners of vacant lots and make them remove debris that has probably been dumped by neighbors.

Already hundreds of notices have been posted on vacant lots by order of Dr. L. M. Powers, health officer, which read as follows:

"The dumping or depositing of any manure or other waste material upon these lots or this alley, is forbidden. Any one found violating this notice will be prosecuted under the general sanitary laws of the city of Los Angeles."

A fine of $25 can be imposed for violation of the terms of this notice, by prosecution in the Police Court.

The law takes no cognisance of extenuating circumstances in this instance. A lot owner may plead that he was unaware that a city ordinance compels him to keep his property in sanitary condition. He may urge that because lazy neighbors found his lots a convenient receptacle for ashes, tin cans, dead branches, dead cats, dead anything else, it was not any fault of his own. This will not serve as a defense when the case comes up for trial in the Police Court.

Dr. Powers states that complaints pour into his office in reference to violations of this nature. His inspectors cover their respective districts as carefully as possible, but they assert that it is absolutely impracticable to search out all cases.

A city's cleanliness is undoubtedly one of its greatest assets, when the eastern people flock out here to pass the winter, and incidentally to invest a few millions in lots. The tourist season is fast approaching and attractive front yards and clean vacant lots go far in making a good impression upon strangers.

If cleanliness is next to godliness, Los Angeles may approximate to a condition that will give significance to its name. In some cities women arise to the occasion and armed with shovel, hoe and rake, they put to shame self-satisfied business men who close their eyes to glaring violations of the health ordinances.

There is ample opportunity here for the women's organizations to take action, and it may be that a campaign will be instituted with energetic society women at its head.

HUNDREDS OF VIOLATORS.

A hasty trip through the beautiful southwest part of the city discloses hundreds of technical violations of the law. In many instances a search of the records at the City Hall shows that the owners are non-residents. In other cases it is apparent that the owners are not entirely to blame for the condition of their premises.

The pictures taken by The Times photographer show only a few of the more glaring examples of the violation of the law. There are many other cases just as bad—and the city does not discriminate as to degrees of "iniquity." A lot owner may be really blameless, but the camera faithfully reproduces the condition of his property.

"My lot has always been a dumping-ground for the whole ward," asserted one property owner, yesterday, when asked to explain why he allowed his lot to become an eyesore to his neighbors, and the public. "I am certain that scores of persons go there in the night and leave all their debris. I have paid several times to have the lot cleaned up, but it seems to make no difference. Apparently the only way to protect my lot is to have a guard stationed there day and night.

As an instance, the three lots at the corner of Budlong avenue and Twenty-fourth street are a dumping ground for the whole neighborhood. The young colored man who mows lawns—when he is not playing ball with the kids—dumps all the grass there; men with wheelbarrows go there at dusk to deposit cans, old shoes, dead branches and other debris; if a domestic animal comes to an untimely end within ten blocks of the tract, it is taken there for disposal. The near-by residents have made many complaints, but unless they can take oath as to

HIS CHANCE.

CAPITAL FOR HOUSE COURT.

HOUSING COMMISSION GETS AN OFFER TO BUILD.

Name of Proposed Investor in Homes for Foreign Born Population in Los Angeles Kept Secret. President Coffey Chats About Benefits and Profits of Scheme.

Dr. Titian Coffey, president of the Los Angeles Housing Commission, received a letter yesterday from a prominent Los Angeles capitalist who wishes to build more model house courts for the Mexicans and other foreign elements in Los Angeles. Dr. Coffey refuses to give for publication the name of the man who makes the offer, but speaking of the matter yesterday, said:

"There is no doubt that Los Angeles is in need of hundreds of these model house courts, as they are called, that is, those neat, sanitary homes for our poorer foreign element. The Housing Commission has set the ball rolling, and the success of the Navarre house court has been a great inspiration to us. It is built strictly under the new city ordinance, and the houses are cozy and attractive in every particular. Besides, it is not a charity by any means, for it pays a fair interest on the investment.

"Los Angeles capitalists should have their attention again called to the chance for good investment by building these simple but highly important little homes for our foreign population. The plan may be said to combine 'philanthropy and 6 per cent.,' as the English would phrase it.

"It is good philanthropy, because the building of these houses contributes just so much toward increasing health, happiness and prosperity of the city, by ridding the town of its slum-shacks, and in addition it brightens the lives of the humblest members of our community.

"It is good business because it will safely pay 6 per cent., and the house courts under the new ordinance need not cost over $200 each, and eight or ten of them may be put on a comparatively small piece of ground and still fulfill all the requirements of the law.

"The rents are at least $8 a month, and the houses are never empty. As for repairs, our tenants never think of anything like that, and besides, once built under the strict provisions of the new city ordinance, there is no necessity for spending a dollar to keep up the property, at least for years to come. It is certainly an attractive investment, and there is still room for hundreds of these snug little homes in Los Angeles."

Dr. Coffey says that the local capitalist, who will build additional house-courts, chanced to have the good work of the Los Angeles Housing Commission brought more directly to his attention through a report made recently in The Times.

STRANGE.

MISSING MAN LIKELY HERE.

Mysterious Disappearance of New York Lawyer.

Thousand Dollars Reward Is Ready for Finder.

Believed Bethune Has Lost His Identity.

Faneuil Dunkin S. Bethune, well-known clubman and prominent corporation lawyer of New York, who mysteriously disappeared from his home on August 23, is believed to be in Los Angeles. Whoever finds him—either dead or alive—will receive a reward of $1000, offered by his sorrowing wife.

For some time before his disappearance in New York Mr. Bethune was engaged in a law case of great intricacy and devoted his time to his work day and night, until his colleagues warned him to take a rest and his friends begged him to "let up" for a time.

But to all warnings and pleadings he turned a deaf ear; he had a task to accomplish and he stuck to it with a dogged resolution. On the day of his disappearance, Mr. Bethune left his home at Sterlington, near New York, for his office at No. 34 Pine street, which is in the Wall street district. But he never reached his destination. It is believed that under the stress of work and the nervous strain, Mr. Bethune became temporarily deranged, possibly lost his sense of identity, and wandered off with a dim idea of proceeding to Japan.

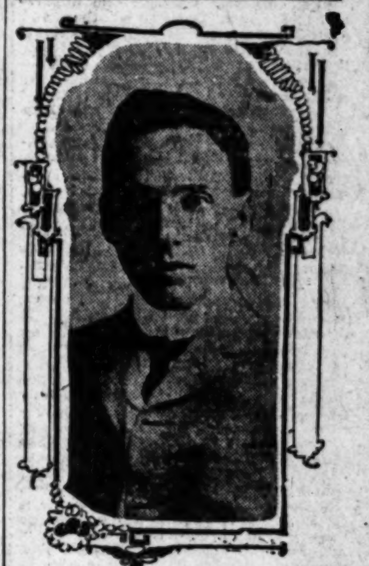
TRACED TOWARD WEST.

After some delay an alarm was sent out and the case of the missing man was placed with the Pinkertons for solution. It was found that Bethune had plenty of ready money with him and was seen in Buffalo a few days after his disappearance. From there he has been traced to Chicago, but from there all direct clues have been lost, although the indications are that he took a train direct to Los Angeles. He may be wandering about the streets of this city at present, or he may be registered at some local hotel.

Charles V. Hatter, superintendent of Pinkerton's local agency, was advised yesterday by his New York office that Mr. Bethune is supposed to be in Los Angeles, or near by. He is now making every effort to have Bethune "turned up," as the detectives say.

Henry J. Hoffman, assistant superintendent, yesterday said: "We are watching all hotels, depots and sanatoriums. We think that Bethune is here in Los Angeles, or will arrive at any moment. He was known to have left Chicago with plenty of ready money in his pockets, and was en route to Los Angeles, or vicinity. This was four days ago and he is liable to be turned up here, any hour.

"For several months Mr. Bethune has been engaged almost continuously on a case of national prominence. His health was undermined, resulting in a general breakdown of his system. He had been repeatedly warned that if he did not desist for a time he would unquestionably pay the penalty of his intense preoccupation, but he did not heed the suggestions of wife or friends and it is now believed that as the result of sudden collapse of his mind, or loss of personality, he wandered away.



Faneuil D. S. Bethune, well known New York corporation attorney, who disappeared two weeks ago, and is believed to be in Los Angeles, having left Chicago for this city.

CALL OF ORIENT.

"He was known to have spoken of Japan many times, and the inviting scenery there, and it is not improbable that he may turn up in San Francisco, by way of Los Angeles, with the idea of taking a steamer there for the Orient.

"If Bethune is not found wandering around the streets of Los Angeles, he may have met with foul play, or have gone off somewhere and died among strangers. Mrs. Bethune is strongly inclined to believe that her husband is dead, else he would have telegraphed or written to her, she says. There is a reward of $1000 to anybody who will find Bethune, dead or alive."

Following is an accurate description of the missing corporation lawyer: Age 34, but looks younger; height 5 feet 7 inches; weight, 150; complexion, medium; hair, dark brown; face, smooth, oval; the muscles of his face are said to twitch slightly, due to nervousness; eyes, dark blue and appear black at night; suit, blue cheviot or dark gray, and double-breasted coat; no jewelry except a watch, bearing the monogram F. D. S. B.

CHILD OF THREE MISSING.

Mrs. Mary Brown of San Pedro yesterday requested the Chief of Police to aid her in her search for her three-year-old daughter, whom she alleges was kidnaped last Friday afternoon.

Mrs. Brown wrote a brief note to the Chief, in which she stated that an unidentified woman picked up her little girl and boarded a Los Angeles car with her.

The police are making a careful search for the child.

Steinway Pianos

The World's Standard in Tone, Construction and Durability. The Choice of Discriminating Musicians and Music Lovers the World Over.

From its inception the Steinway Piano has held first place in the musical world—first in tone, first in construction, first in durability, first in artistic casing.

The Steinway is superior viewed from every standpoint—and because of this superiority it is the choice of true musicians the world over.

The Steinway is in the end the cheapest of all Pianos—an instrument that can be re-sold after years of use at the price of other so-called high grade instruments new.

If you are going to buy the best Piano in the world, you must buy a Steinway—from that there is no appeal.

Steinways $575 to $1650

Steinway Pianos are priced at from $575 to $1650—many styles in Vertegrands, Uprights, Parlor and Concert Grands. Special case designs made to order. Our Steinway Hall is an interesting place to visit—you are invited to come in any day.

COSTLY CARELESSNESS.

PUZZLE MAIL DUMPED HERE.

Four Million Misdirected Letters a Year.

Ten Thousand Conundrums to Solve Every Day.

No Wonder Postal Clerks Lose Hair Early.

One of the penalties that Los Angeles pays for being the most popular tourist town in America is that, incidentally, she has dumped on her, annually, the prodigious number of 4,-*82,352 misdirected letters, requiring the services of a small army of postal employés.

This astonishing fact was verified yesterday afternoon by Postmaster Motley H. Flint, who drew a long breath as he glanced at the depressing figures, and remarked:

"That is proportionately, over 10,000 a day, for every day in the year!

"Our expert, H. E. Stanley, superintendent of the Information Bureau, knows this subject from a to izzard. He sits up nights with it! His corps of assistants is busy with it twenty-three hours out of twenty-four, and still there is no let up."

"And now please, excuse me. I have to go to a bank meeting, and if I am on time, I receive a $10 gold piece. Each director has a lovely new $10 gold piece for attending
'Gold, gold, beautiful gold
Yellow and bright and hard and cold.'" he added, dropping into poetry—and thereupon "vamoosed" through the outer door.

"Those 10,000 misdirected letters a day is no joke," said Superintendent Stanley, sighing as he glanced at his "busy bees," working diligently in adjoining rooms.

"Come and we will see what we can see," he went on, briskly.

A dozing young men were poring over stacks of letters. Each "searcher" after addresses had before him a generous cloth-bound slice of the city directory—one letter only—and in instances parts of a letter, only—thus: Ba to Be; Be to Bo; Bo to By.

The superintendent grabbed a letter nervously, and began anaylzing its postal deficiencies.

"Mr. James Smith, mining engineer, city," he read. "Now what do you think of a man that will coolly and deliberately address a letter that way? Simply to make work for Uncle Sam? Well, he is one of the 10,000 idle, careless, thoughtless, thankless chaps who write any old thing on a letter and expect us to be mind readers."

DIRECTORY IN SLICES.

Glancing through a "slice" of the City Directory, the superintendent ran down Mr. Smith's name, but there was a blue pencil check behind it, indicating that Smith had moved; but on a blank inserted page, in red ink, Smith's latest address was uncovered, deftly added to the envelope, and the delayed letter started on its new voyage.

"That was an easy one," said the superintendent. "Most of them are not so much like pie, you bet your sweet life.

"Next to New York City, Los Angeles has the largest general delivery in America," he added, "and that is where the mountains of misdirected stuff eventually land on the way to the Dead Letter Office."

Superintendent Stanley took the writer carefully through one department of search work to another, and after spending a half hour in explaining the technical details of "lost letters," he led the way once more to his cozy outer office and summed up matters, somewhat in this fashion:

"In the month of August the number of misdirected letters received here was 337,696! Of this number, fully 100,-000 were carelessly addressed by dwellers in Los Angeles; the rest came from outside points.

NATIONAL CARELESSNESS.

"Oh, the national carelessness is something to drive a man to drink, no doubt; and it seems impossible to educate the public to the knowledge that we are not all mind readers, down here, who know at a glance where Col. J. J. Periwigg lives, and all his sisters, cousins and aunts; and the whole tribe of Adam and Eve, for that matter.

"Last month we solved 53,000 of these 'postal conundrums.' But this is only part of our difficulties. There are hundreds of requests to find an alleged lost letter, coming in daily, and for each inquiry we have to make a most exhaustive search through exactly twenty different departments of this office. Think of what that means! Bill Jones comes in red hot and declares solemnly that he is expecting a letter from Sarah Ann Jones in Toledo and it hasn't been delivered. Where is it? He wants to know, right away quick, if not sooner. Among the possible nesting places, in which the coy missive may be playing hide and seek, if it has been delivered, are: General delivery, newspaper delivery, unpaid desk, mail bags. Is there any record on the carriers' log? Has it been advertised? Did it go to some hotel? Was it a package of special record? Or was it a special delivery letter? Was it sent to the Dead Letter Office? Is it in the carriers' call box? Was it misdirected? Was the address insufficient? Was it unaddressed? Is it held, somewhere, for postage? Is it delayed on account of short postage, or overweight? Was it refused somewhere? Was it returned to sender? Was it, after all, unmailable?

"Getting right down to the mill in the account, the plain truth is that two-thirds of our trials are, I fear, beyond the reach of medicine. They are chargeable to the flittings of the merry, merry tourist.

PUZZLING ADDRESS CHANGES.

"There are from 17,000 to 25,000 changes of address recorded in this office each month, to say nothing of many thousands of others that we never hear of. Let me give you one typical case. Col. R. Desmond Shoreacres, having decided to come to Los Angeles, along with 250,000 other tourists from various parts of the country, arrives and rents the best room at the Van-Alex-Lank Hotel.

"He has told about forty friends at home to write to him, there. On arrival, he sends out about 100 pretty picture postal cards, to still other friends, saying 'Do write to me at the hotel,' and he names it. In about a week, he decides to go to San Diego and sends a card to the Postoffice, requesting 'Change my address to San Diego,' and we do so and the stuff trails after him down there. He comes back and goes to a less fashionable hotel, sends us word to have all his mail sent there. We try to do so, but the first correspondents are now writing to the original hotel, and others, in response to his postal cards, are now bombarding San Diego, where he was last heard from, and then he decides to economize, takes a rented room, on another street, and tells us now to send his mail there; and we start to do so, when he finds, after sending out more picture cards that he is not permanently located there, but takes a run to the beaches, for two or three weeks, and fires in a new address; comes back, gets a new room; sends in still another address; then sends out more postal picture cards, saying, 'Do not write, so and so, but write so and so,' and just about the time that his eastern friends receive the 'latest' reports he moves to the other end of the city, tells us of the change and cusses us good and plenty because he is not receiving his mail promptly. And so it goes.

HEAPING UP TROUBLE.

"There are any number of tourists who hand us, during a brief stay, as many as ten or fifteen addresses. Is it any wonder that Los Angeles has an average in excess of 10,000 misdirected letters a day? Not at all! The wonder to my mind is that the yearly total isn't 10,000,000, instead of 4,000,-000.

"As for the hundreds of thousands of misdirected newspapers—forget it. We have troubles mountains high in that department, also. But this is enough for one warm day. As a matter of cussed human nature, a man will make a bigger 'holler' about his measely little 'home paper' going astray than he will about a lost letter from his mother-in-law."

"It's all bosh for a man to expect the Postoffice to follow him around the country. Why not have his mail sent to one Los Angeles place only, and then never ask the Postoffice to forward. Let him go himself to the original place and collect his letters."

GREAT EDITORS I HAVE MET.

BY THE LANCER.

I.

E. P. (Slats) Clarke, the Riverside Wonder.

E. P. (Slats) Clarke, editor of the Riverside Press, is the greatest living expert in the use of the soft pedal. I have an instinctive feeling that he prefers silky white Angora cats with china blue eyes, to any other pets.

Theater stage managers have a device called a "dimmer" which they put over the electricity to make very pale moonlight. The Riverside Press is the newspaper equivalent of a dimmer.

For many virtuous years, it has strained and purified the news for the youth and innocence of the citrus belt. But on one shuddering occasion it ventured out on a bloody crusade into the midst of war's alarms and is now just returning from the fray. I sing of Arms and of—Slats.

It is irresistibly comparable to the crusades of Joan d'Arc. Only Slats, being a more gentle soul than the weak and timid Maid of Orleans, fought with cream puffs for bullets and cheese straws for spears.

Like her, he was leading a simple and virtuous life when he heard the "Call."

On Sunday, he was singing a tolerable basso in the Methodist choir and on the succeeding Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday was carefully watching the columns of his newspaper to see that no news burst in by any misthrow.

Of an evening, he would shyly mention to his patrons the impending meeting of the Order of Pendo and the imminent probability of a Chamber of Commerce picnic — mayhap descant coyly of the high target score made by Corp. Thomas Jackson Jones of the local militia. But all rude and jarring events of the day—ordinarily classed as "news"—were excluded.

There is a great deal of personal significance in the manner in which an editor rejects. Some do it coldly and dispassionately, some in hot disgust. Our gentle little friend Slats casts things from him in the sudden scared panic of a child pulling hot taffy off its fingers.

Not only did he dread to have any real news in his paper, but he was afraid to be seen around with it. Each one of his patrons—no matter what he did or how he acted—could be sure that his name would never be inscribed by Slats in any rude way.

In this odor of sanctity, Slats was growing old and acquiring a perfectly respectable case of dyspepsia.

The sight of his long, lank but pious figure—with the pantaloons a little too high on the shin bones and the coat a little too short—caused all the innocent joy that the passing of the village priest does in a devout Irish village.

Honest, I hate to tell the rest of this.

On a fell day, Slats, the dimmer, was drawn out of his pale moonlight and into the glare and crash of a battle.

It came about through a human jellyfish who was Governor of California before Mr. Gillett. Gov. Pardee was a timorous Uriah Heap, who always promised both sides; then when the time came for the show-down, he would rush out into the country districts and choke the small newspapers with sugar plums.

Slats, among many others, was so choked.

Pardee with his innocuous sweet stuff was naturally bundled out of office as soon as possible and Slats, among others, was in deep anguish.

You will all remember when they met to mingle their tears one day in Oakland about a year ago, when the Lincoln-Roosevelt League was born.

It is a well-known fact that when our strenuous president is in righteous wrath, he emits a strenuous roar. Gov. Pardee knew an ignorant, stupid Irishman named Heney, who could roar like Roosevelt, without knowing, of course, what he was roaring about. Pardee brought him in and made him roar in his best manner. Then Slats and the others were sent forth into the land as disciples to tell the people that it was necessary for the salvation of the republic that the opponents of the Spineless One should be crushed.

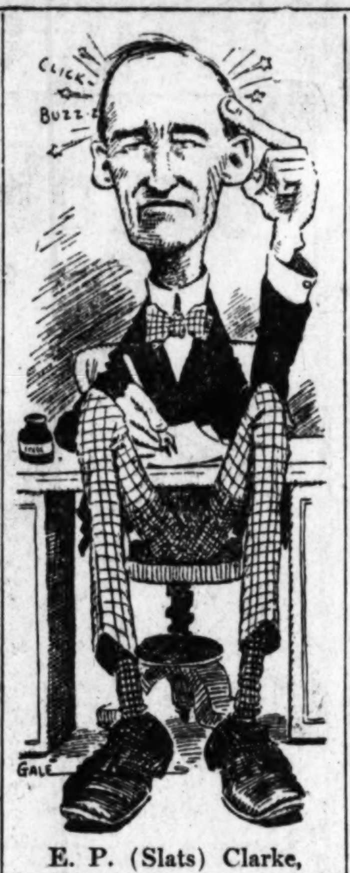
When he got back home, Slats was viewed with wonder and alarm by his fellow townspeople. Such noises never were heard before. Timidly and shyly first, but bolder and then bolder, Slats lit into the political control of Riverside by the soulless corporations. With the awful recklessness with the blind, hysterical fury of a nice girl who has been snubbed, Slats assaulted the political "gang."

There were not—and are not—any corporations in Riverside, at least that have anything to do with politics.

For the same reason, the Dimmer's mad campaign against the "gang" did not arouse the public to fury as it should have; the trouble was, there wasn't any gang. Politics—especially during the last few years—has been a pleasant family affair in Riverside.

There is no boss; by a sort of common consent, Miguel Estudillo is the political leader of the "organization." His partner and close political associate is ex-Judge French. When the Lincoln-Roosevelt League was organized by Slats, French was selected as its head. Sometimes Slats is just a little lacking in humor.

Being a decent, nice little man, Slats always carefully said he didn't mean Estudillo or anything like that when he roasted the machine.



E. P. (Slats) Clarke, the Riverside phenomenon with the soft pedal.

Slats got home from Oakland in a tremble of excitement—prepared to efface vice from the earth. Like a newly engaged girl he got all the folks he knew best over to hear all about it. A good many of them were men who, like Slats, himself, had always been sturdy workers in the ranks of the regular organization—but this is a detail.

With great excitement, he bundled them into his office and told them about "crushing corporate influence" and "graft" and "corruption."

They were a little dazed and amazed, but Slats had always been such an awfully good fellow and they liked him so much and he was so terribly respectable and all that; so they told him to "go to it" and they were with him. They said they didn't have the least idea in the world what he was talking about; but they were for it.

Lissner, who will probably be remembered in Los Angeles, told Slats that what he ought to have was a meeting. So Slats obediently called a meeting. Nobody could make out what it was he wanted to have a meeting about but, to please him, they all went.

Slats got up and spoke a piece in which he tore up Corruption something awful. They all mildly applauded and he called for officers to be elected.

Judge French, the partner and crony of Estudillo—about the nearest thing to a boss in gentle Riverside—was there, so they naturally elected him. Some other men, whose political counsels in the organization had been sane and honorable, were also there. What could be more natural than to elect them. They didn't know what Slats was driving at—nor what his organization was all about—but these were obviously the men to "officer" anything that started in Riverside.

Out of compliment to Slats, they offered to make him a vice-president. But he declined. Slats was unhappy. Things didn't seem to be going just right. He didn't know just what was the matter; but it seemed too tame. He felt as though it ought to be fiercer, somehow.

When the time came, Miguel Estudillo was quite naturally nominated for Senator. And quite as naturally, all the members of the new Lincoln-Roosevelt League rallied to the support of Estudillo, the organization "boss," if there was any.

Slats was almost discouraged. He read all the other Lincoln-Roosevelt papers and felt that he really ought to be roasting somebody, too—although he couldn't think for the life of him whom it ought to be.

He was sure that it couldn't be his friend Estudillo, whom he knew for a man of honor, energy and ability. He once went so far — to say he couldn't be for Estudillo; but he made so many apologies for it that it was one of the most cordial boosts ever given Estudillo.

About this time, Heney struck Los Angeles, frothing at the mouth and yelping out irrational, incoherent, senseless abuse. He seemed to know how to abuse pretty nearly any one.

"If I could only get him down here, he could find some one to abuse," thought poor Slats.

But when it came to inviting Heney into Riverside, the faithful friends that had been humoring old Slats firmly but politely declined.

"You can have him if you like," they said, "but we won't be here. You're a nice man, and you kept it out of the paper when anything happened to us—but there are limits."

But Slats was so unhappy about it that they compromised. They sent word to Heney saying in effect that he could come out and speak a piece if he wanted to; but that pretty near everybody happened to be out of town, etc., etc. Heney didn't come.

Election day came. All the Lincoln-Rooseveltera and all the "organization" men voted together with sweet unaninity for the same men. Nobody asked Slats to surrender even.

Slats is sadder, but it cannot be accurately said that he is wiser; he does not know exactly what has happened.

Slats has stopped talking about the gang. The name of Miguel Estudillo and the rest of the organization candidates have been restored to their accustomed place of honor on the editorial page of the Dimmer.

Occasionally he republishes some awful remarks about corruption from the Grass Valley messenger; and when the Downey Champion blows a blast about political gangs, why, Slats cautiously reprints it. He reshoots the appalling broadsides of the Salinas Times against the "machine," but his own brilliant pen rusts in the pot.

On Sunday Slats sings a tolerable basso in the Methodist choir; on the succeeding Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday he carefully watches the columns of his newspaper to see that no news bursts in by any misthrow.

He is acquiring a perfectly respectable case of dyspepsia; but he goes on no more blood-thirsty campaigns.

"LOS ANGELES DAY."

Collegiate Alumnae Will Celebrate It Here on Tuesday—Prominent Educators Expected.

The one-day session of the National Association of Collegiate Alumnae on Tuesday will bring to this city not only representatives of the women's college world, but also many of the leading educators of the country.

The association has been holding its annual meeting in San Francisco, and in compliment to the local branch, which was organized last year, set apart Tuesday as "Los Angeles Day."

All college and club women and those interested in educational work are cordially invited to attend the meeting of the alumnae, which will be held in Choral Hall, Auditorium building. The first of these will be at 10:30 o'clock in the morning, when addresses will be made upon vital subjects. The afternoon meeting will be followed by a reception.

Dean Laura Drake Gill of Barnard College, New York City, and other prominent visitors will be guests at a luncheon to be given at the California Club at noon by officers of the local branch, of which Mrs. Robert J. Burdette is president.

CRAZY NEGRO ATTACKS.

"Doc" Johnson, a negro serving a five-day sentence in the City Jail on a drunk charge, became insane yesterday morning and attacked the trusties. Screaming that those about him were trying to take his life he felled several trusties before he was finally dragged down and strapped to a bed in the Receiving Hospital. He was sent to the County Hospital for examination.

REHEARSALS RESUMED.

The Choral Club of the First Congregational Church will take up active work on next Saturday, September 12, when rehearsals will be resumed. The club will meet in the parish building at 7:30 in the evening, and a few more good voices will be welcomed. Application should be made to William H. Lott, director.

HIP DISLOCATED.

H. A. Hills, 61 years old, of No. 103½ North San Pedro street, while trying to alight from a car at Seventh street and Broadway, yesterday morning, fell and sustained a dislocation of the right hip and numerous bruises and lacerations. He was taken to the Receiving Hospital.

KANSAS BASKET PICNIC.

The Executive Committee of the Kansas Society decided yesterday to hold a basket picnic at Eastlake Park on Saturday, October 3.

"Times" Branch Office, 531 S. Spring St.

For the convenience of Times patrons, a branch office has been established at 531 S. Spring street, where advertisements and subscriptions are taken by experienced clerks.

REFINERY TO BE BUILT.

Material is on the ground for the refinery of E. B. Campbell & Sons, owners of the King-Keystone plant at Oakland, to be erected on the western end of the New Center's lands.

There is talk of the probable enlargement of the Jewett & Blodgett (Sunset Road Oil Company) refinery at Hazleton soon.

ASSOCIATED PIPE LINE.

The Associated has just contracted for the output of the Sunset Monarch. The terms and conditions or amount are not yet learned. The Combine has a loading rack at the track's end, where the Sunset Monarch has its main plant. From here it has just finished an eight-inch pipe along the Ruby's north line east and south along the east line of the Monte Cristo on section 1-12-23 to the Maricopa Road Oil Company just south of the Monte Cristo on the same section.

The Associated has erected three small and one big storage tank on the bluffs at the Sunset Monarch overlooking the railroad terminus. They are of about 6000 barrels capacity. A gauger is stationed here. The Associated is doing a growing business, both through the Independent agency and through contracts with companies not in that combine.

Locally the impression is growing that it is only a question of a short time when the Standard will extend its line from Midway here.

NEW INDUSTRY POSSIBLE.

Tobacco Grown Near Pasadena Is Pronounced by Experts Equal to Best Havana Weed.

That tobacco grown in this country is equal in every way to the finest Havana weed has been demonstrated by George Spiker, a tobacco expert living at No. 412 Vignes street. Mr. Spiker has not only succeeded in curing several specimens of locally grown tobacco, but has made them into cigars as well.

The tobacco, with which the experiments were made, was grown near Pasadena. Mr. Spiker took the green leaves, cured them, and then made them into cigars which proved to be most excellent. Two kinds of filler were tried, Havana and Cuban, and both proved exceptionally fine.

The leaves are not woody nor rank and, though the cured tobacco lacks age, the cigars made from it have been pronounced by experts to be of excellent quality and far superior to many of the high-priced imported brands.

Mr. Spiker's experiments were made with the view to ascertaining whether or not tobacco grown in Los Angeles county could be made to take the place of the Cuban-grown weed for the finest trade. He gives it as his opinion that it can, and says that, properly handled, the tobacco industry in California should reach as important a place as the wine industry.

LOCAL PRODUCTS EXHIBIT.

"Made in Southern California" Exposition to Be Inaugurated on Increased Scale.

The phenomenal success that attended the "Made in Southern California" exposition last year, has led to a movement at the present time to establish it on a more extensive basis. The number and scope of the manufacturing establishments in the city of Los Angeles at that time was a great surprise to many people who have lived here for years but who had no adekuate idea of what the city is actually doing to supply her own demands. The floor space this year will cover an area of 318 feet, between Main and Los Angeles streets, and 140 feet between Third and Fourth streets, and a thorough campaign will be inaugurated to familiarize the people of Southern California, Nevada, New Mexico and Arizona with the products of our factories.

This city ships vast quantities of goods East and throughout the world, including machinery, pianos, automobiles, silk, clothing, glass, tin cans, shoes, and many other lines. Manager Newman states that 110 lines of business have already secured space, and as any first class manufacturer in Southern California is eligible, the small amount of space left is likely to be taken very soon.

PLAYGROUND SERMONS.

Many Will Be Preached Today in the Interest of Greater Recreation Advantages.

Just preceding the meeting of the National Playground Asociation in New York, there is a concerted movement all over the country to inspire general interest in the welfare of the boys and girls. In many of the churches of this city addresses wil be delivered on the subject today. Aside from the larger cities of the country, none have taken greater forward strides for the establishing of playgrounds than Los Angeles, and if any citizen has not yet visited that at Echo Park, to see what is being done by the city's Playground Commission, the first opportunity to do so should be improved. That at Violet street is as well improved but is not so picturesque. October 8 has been set as the date for opening the big gymnasium on teh playground at Holly and St. John streets.

BACK FROM EUROPE.

Joseph Scott, accompanied by Mrs. Scott, returned home yesterday from a two-month's trip to Europe. During their visit Mr. Scott delivered the principal address at the centenary of Ushaw College in England, and Mr. and Mrs. Scott were honored with a private audience with the Pope. The Catholic Spectator of London, in speaking of the address of Mr. Scott at the centenary celebration, said: "Had the centenary given the Catholic body in England nothing else than the speech of Joseph Scott of Los Angeles it would have given us something to be devoutly grateful for."

DAY OF PRAYER.

The Evangelical Prayer Union, representing all evangelical churches and their interests, has appointed Friday, September 11, as a day of prayer. The season will be continuous, and will be observed by the local branch of the union at Central Presbyterian Church, on Hill street. The leaders announced are Rev. W. W. Logan, Rev. E. P. Ryland, Rev. John S. Ross, Rev. J. H. Stewart, Rev. Herbert J. Weaver, Rev. Dwight E. Potter, Rev. H. C. Waddell and Rev. R. A. Hadden.

RESCUE MISSION PICNIC.

The Union Rescue Missions will all unite in a picnic at Eastlake Park on Monday. There will be games and sports and plenty of everything good to eat, and all members and friends of the mission organizations are invited to attend. George W. Trotter, superintendent of the Union Rescue Mission, and E. E. Leary of the City Rescue Mission, will be active in seeing that everybody has a good time.

FORT WAYNE REUNION.

All former residents of Ft. Wayne, Ind., are invited to take part in the reunion that will be held in Hollenbeck Park on Monday. A special invitation is extended to those who have come to the city with the recent arrival of excursionists.

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE

> "I am blessed with an abundance of long hair and I use the utmost care in the preservation of it. I have never found anything that pleases me as much as Newbro's Herpicide. It keeps the scalp clean and sanitary and adds a luxurious appearance to my hair that no other preparation will give. I consider it most delightful to use and I can truly say that I prefer it above all other preparations for the hair. I like your soap also and can recommend both highly to any lady who wishes a good head of hair. (Signed) JENNIE A. ABBOTT,
> "2443 Warden Avenue,
> "CLEVELAND, OHIO."

Jennie A. Abbott

While it is not natural for every one to have extremely long hair, it is possible for every lady to have beautiful hair, for when the scalp is not diseased, the hair will grow naturally and abundantly.

The chief disease of the scalp is dandruff—which is highly contagious—and dandruff is now known to be caused by an invisible vegetable growth called the dandruff germ. Ordinarily, the first signs of scalp infection are dryness, dullness and brittleness of the hair, although the disease sometimes causes excessive oiliness. Following this, the hair loses its luster, the scalp itches more or less and dandruff appears. Falling hair and baldness represent the last stages of hair destruction.

Newbro's Herpicide—the original remedy that kills the dandruff germ—will cure any stage of this disease, except chronic baldness, which is incurable. Herpicide not only destroys the dandruff germ and stops falling hair, but it is a most exquisite hair dressing, making the hair light and fluffy and giving it a silken gloss. Almost marvelous results sometimes follow the continued use of Herpicide. It stops itching of the scalp almost instantly.

AN ACKNOWLEDGEMENT.

The Times desires to give expression to its cordial thanks to the Bartenders' Union and allied labor unions of Bakersfield and Kern county that have instituted a furious boycott against this journal on account of its hostility to lawlessness and its devotion to the cause of industrial fairness. They are adopting their usual violent and illegal tactics, abusing those who handle The Times, seeking to terrorize merchants from reading it and harassing landlords who have leased quarters for the newspaper's office.

The Times is glad to say that this brutal and lawless campaign has resulted in Bakersfield and Kern county just as it has worked out wherever it has been tried. The Times has, in this month of September, 1908, four times as many subscribers in Bakersfield and Kern county as it ever had before—and the numbers thereof are growing daily. It is an advantage, as well as a distinction, to be "boycotted" by the Bartenders' Union and allied organizations of disorder. We hear that they plan a noisy demonstration against The Times in Bakersfield on Labor Union Day (Monday.) Let the good work go on! Thank you, thank you, sirs!

EXPANSIONISMO DE T'DORE BELL.

Recently a citizen of the State of California, one Theodore A. Bell, was in Seattle at a meeting of the Eagles. This order (maintained largely by the members of the Royal Arch) is one of Mr. Bell's reasons for living. The other is Populistic politics verging very closely on socialism and marked at all points so far as Bell goes by utter insincerity. While doing the Eagles he was also doing politics. Here is the brand of Populistic labor-unionism he spread broadcast from Seattle—there saying:

"Now how were the plutocrats to break the power of the strike? It was a formidable weapon in the hands of organized labor. How could they prevent men from acting in concert? How could they prevent men from persuading their fellow-men to join in a concerted movement called a strike? . . . And there was a fellow, a bright lawyer, down in the State of Ohio, and there was a judge upon the bench placed there by Mark Hanna and the Republican machine, and he conceived the idea that if he could go into that court and get a writ of injunction that would stop these men from acting in concert, it would absolutely destroy the power of the strike, and he proceeded to do it, and he got the injunction that prevented those men from doing that which was lawful and right, and they served that injunction upon those men, and they said: 'You shall not persuade your fellow-men; you shall not have the right of peaceable assembly?' . . . And the men who disobeyed the writ were brought into court, stood up before that judge and without trial by jury were found guilty and thrown into prison, and the man who issued the writ of injunction, the man who stood ready to enforce that writ and throw them into prison without a trial, without a jury, was William H. Taft."

Needless to waste words on that appeal to the mob! Every sentiment in it bears its own condemnation. Every sentence is untrue in tone and as to fact. Some may think Mr. Bell knew these libels were gratuitous falsehoods. To us it is not clear whether they spring from gross ignorance, from twisted views, from carelessness about his utterance, or from malicious prevarication. It is enough to say that when a judge Mr. Taft never issued an injunction against anything but lawlessness (which Bell upholds,) never refused to give any accused man a square deal, never punished an offender who had not first been found guilty of violating the law—yes, violating the law, an offense which Bell (labor-union party nominee for Governor in 1906) applauds.

More recently this same Theodore Bell met one Don Adolfo Carrillo, who is described as a "distinguished Mexican writer." Bell had dropped his Eagle tail feathers on this occasion and was doing a single stunt—Populist politics. He had his eye on Mexican voters in Arizona and New Mexico. A newspaper published at Nogales in Spanish tells about the heart to heart talk between Don Carrillo and short-flight Eagle Bell. The headlines read: "Expansionismo Yankee," and proceed with an appeal to the Mexicans to be on the alert against the designs of the Yankees on Mexico. What all that has to do with the votes of loyal American citizens is a thing known only to minds with wings like Eagles or fly-by-nights. Bell may see.

The whole purpose of Theodore Bell's interview as printed in this Nogales paper, is to create Mexican sentiment against the Republican party by arousing in the Mexican mind the idea that we have designs whose ends are the absorption of Latin America. He knows how very sensitive every Mexican is on this point. He knows how Americans are handicapped in trying to build up trade with Latin America because of this impression, or he should know. One is never sure where Bell's scant information halts or comes to a dead stop.

Don Carrillo expresses with warm effusion his pleasure in being permitted to take by the hand the "distinguished Bell." He sets forth in glowing language all the political achievements of the Napa Populist. He quotes Bell as saying this:

"If the Republican party continues in power Mexico will lose not only Lower California, but also the States of Sonora and Chihuahua. . . . The Republican party has created certain conditions which are necessary to its continuance in existence. . . . First there is colonial expansion. No one is ignorant of the fact that this comes from our commercial preponderance. . . . The Republican party will open the way in Mexico with cannon balls. . . . Root is the symbol of commercial policies of the Republican party. He is the most unpopular man in the United States. . . . The insincerity of Mr. Root reflects the Jesuitism of the Republican administration. . . . In international politics Mr. Taft holds to follow the same lines as Mr. Roosevelt. It benefits the trusts to dominate the Latin American merchants. . . . The mission of Mr. Buchanan has no right to be and will establish in the future a harmful precedent. It will result in the establishment of a protectorate by the United States over the countries of Central America."

And as Cinna said to the Romans, "there was more of it"—all in Spanish.

They are sayings attributed to the "distinguished Mr. Bell" by his friend and interviewer, Don Carrillo.

Here, again, we defy any mind-reader to make a quantitive analysis of these statements and show how many of them emanate from ignorance, how many from that strange twisting awry of the mind Populism works, what proportion is deliberate lying and what honest misapprehension. Of the last the analysis might detect "a trace," as chemists say.

Here, again, too, there is no need of extended comment as to the Expansionismo politico of the "distinguished Mr. Bell." In this Eagle's flight he has achieved an expansion of misrepresentation, falsehood and ignorance quite beyond any former sailing through the air of thin thought and dubious fact known on Mr. Bell's part.

Whatever else he has done or left undone, he has shown himself as about the most despicable traitor to his country that has appeared since Mr. Davis ran away in petticoats. He has shown that, like many of his admirers, the ninth commandment has no respect at his mouth. He has further demonstrated that however limited his abilities may be otherwise, that he is fully qualified for the presidency of the Ananias Club.

Intelligent people of Spanish blood in the United States, in Mexico or elsewhere know well that neither the Republican party, nor any other party in America, has any designs on an inch of foreign territory in any part of America or elsewhere. It has no cannon balls for anybody but rascals of the Bell type.

MAKE A SWEEPING CLEAN-UP!

The Times' appeal for a general clean-up of the city streets and vacant lots struck responsive chords in the public heart. In some instances it hit the "funny bone" and hurt. We are in receipt of an unduly long effusion from the secretary of the Los Angeles Realty Board in which the course of this journal is both criticised and commended. As to the real object in view, the secretary of the Realty Board writes 1000 words to tell us what his organization attempted and how his efforts failed. The secretary comes to the impotent conclusion that "it seems that the Realty Board has done all that it can do in this matter."

So be it. Turn we then to other sources, where efficient help may be had. There are other civic bodies with other secretaries who are hereby appealed to. Will they not go to the right point, in the right way, reach the right people and get things done? The Times is glad to hear that the city authorities already have issued orders for a clean-up—that the leaven is working. No! Not all has been done that can be done. The Times proposes to keep this movement moving and to shame property owners and real estate agents and street department officials into doing the right thing.

On Friday 6000 newcomers got off overland trains in Southern California. They come from cities where the lawns are still green, from country villages where the maple leaves are turning red, from country districts where the sumac gleams like flames in the woods and where the goldenrod is like a spray of burnished gold by the wayside. They have read and heard much about the beauties of "California, where sets the sun," where the mustard spreads a golden sea over the fields, where the chalices of the poppy lift golden mouths to the sunshine, where the air is redolent of the scent of orange blossoms—in a word, "where every prospect pleases." Whatever may be the status of men, they find the streets are vile.

This is not mere sentiment. This is business and it is health. Visitors stay where they are pleased, where they find their surroundings congenial. They have nothing to do but find fault, and they are prompt to improve the opportunity. The skies are blue, the airs refreshing. There are many things here to please the senses and charm the mind. They are not of our making. Nature spread the skies for us, and sends the breezes from the seas. We made the streets and their condition depends on us. We cut the fields into building lots, and we are responsible for their condition. Nature did not shower tin cans on the lots—nor garbage. Nature does not breed malaria on the hillsides, nor strew manure (which would be valuable as fertilizer for orange groves) on the streets.

Householders do maintain pretty lawns and flower beds. They have fuchsias and bougainvilleas and climbing roses over porches, up to the eaves and away to the ridge pole. The strangers within our gates love to see these things. They marvel to see plants that they have grown in pots and never more than two feet high straggling to the housetops here. But they "do not admire" to ride amid weed-grown and stinking vacant lots and through clouds of flying filth raised by street cars, automobiles or carriages.

These are things too well known to be dwelt on. We do not enjoy painting pictures like these of the condition of our streets. Perhaps some sleepy rival, too dull to "catch on," may feel disposed "to arise and say" that these pictures are dreams of a disturbed brain. Before indulging in criticism we counsel a careful look at the pictures the daylight makes of our streets and ugly, neglected lots, which The Times has caused the truthful sunlight to transfer to the pages of this issue of the journal. In the high heavens sits a judge which the street department cannot contradict. To do so would be vain contempt of a court always right. Judge Sol tells what he sees as he looks down on this fair city, made ashamed by the gross neglect of man to keep it right. The sun is set in the heavens to burn up offal before it cumbers the earth and makes it unfit for man's abode. The decay produces very bad gases which in turn produce bad diseases. Once in the human system the sun goes on with the burning-up process, and to burn it "in our midst" causes discomfort. But death and life cannot live in so close companionship.

There is the whole business. We lose tourists and health by neglect of our duties in keeping the city clean. The work must be done. It costs no more today than tomorrow. The sooner done the fewer strangers will see it, the fewer residents will "catch cold"—catch bad air. Of all the things to be done, this is the thing to do now.

We appeal to the municipal authorities to go to it with this one motto—"thorough." We appeal to the civic organizations here to join, heart, hand and voice to get it done, at once and thoroughly.

GREATER RAWHIDE.

The destruction of the flourishing camp of Rawhide by fire will be regretted by every man who has knowledge of the almost insurmountable obstacles which are part and parcel of desert mining. Coming, as the conflagration did, at a time when the dawn of hope was just peeping over the horizon after a night of inactivity superinduced by the collapse of a furious boom, the disaster will fall with particular weight upon that dauntless body of men that has turned rout into victory and is now forcing the claims of Rawhide upon the mining world for the second time. But Rawhide is merely living over again the history of every other successful mining camp in the country and there is no reason to doubt that its citizens will be equal to the emergency, and from the ashes of a visitation that could not be avoided erect another and better civic monument to the daring men who are gradually wresting the wealth of the desert from Mother Nature in the face of obstacles that daunt all but the sturdy, self-reliant race bred in the nursery of western freedom. Los Angeles realizes the great hardships that these men have endured in their conquest and her sympathy is extended with a heartfelt hope that the Rawhide of the past was but a pocket edition of the greater Rawhide that is to be.

Real estate agents, in whose hands property is left for care and administration, are largely responsible for the shameful condition of hundreds of weedy, tin-canny, filthy vacant lots—breeding places of disease, disgust and financial loss—in the city. These men, above all others, should wake up.

LOVE'S WORLD.

[From "California: Where Sets the Sun."]

Oh, it is sweet to live and ever know
A perfect love is yours, one full of grace,
With never in its perfectness a place
For any thought but that does upward grow
To loyalty and tenderness—to know
You one true heart's most secret thoughts may share,
Doubling its joys and halving all its care.
Life is worth living when we live it so;
The world is fair, we do not see its tears,
Nor feel its griefs, nor tremble at its fears.
'Tis always morning in the heart of love;
'Tis always youth, for Love does ne'er grow old,
'Tis summer always, doubt alone is cold,
Love's world is fair as any world above.

THE LANCER.

HE hotel keepers of Oklahoma ave had a mass meeting to pro- st against the "nine-foot sheet" he wonder is, in Oklahoma, that y have sheets at all. One would pect the remarkable statesmen who ve produced Oklahoma's sagebrush ialism to sleep between blankets or the hay.

s in most of the laws of that in- t state, the meaning of the stat- e is not exactly clear. One cannot sure whether the short sheet is ob- ted to because it doesn't come up h enough at the chin and leaves Oklahoman with a mouthful of se blanket in the morning, or ether it's too brief at the bottom d leaves the sagebrush tootsies ex- ed to the storm.

n any case this legislative cry for g sheets is an impressive evidence culture. The next we hear, some lahoma statesman will learn to eat h a fork and put it in the Constitu- n.

Col. Milton G. Foreman's husky er friends in Kansas would stand t as much chance against an y of Japanese veterans as eleven Indians would in a game of against the Yale team. As a yell," the Japs are a y lot themselves. "Banzai" n't sound much more sociable on e field, I imagine, than the Rebel he Japanese are naturally a fight- race. They have an army trained the minute, officered by educated, essional officers, a reserve, an immense body of Japanese veterans, ready to rally to the colors at the drop of a hat.

The men who fought at Liao-Yang, the Sha-ho and Mukden would not be so terribly scared at the sound of the Rebel yell of Texas.

At the same time, I believe from the bottom of my soul that the United States could pound a terrific defeat into Japan—if we were reasonably scared about it long enough beforehand. We have put some raw volunteer armies in the field; but our "grand army" practiced against a Rebel army fully as green before it learned the frightful game of war.

The joint maneuvers at Atascadero this month with all the regulars and militiamen that the War Department can lay hands on, indicates that our government cherishes none of the happy little delusions of Col. Milton G. Foreman, militia colonel.

Hoch! For Emperor Bill.

The most rabid and lurid "yellow journals" of these days are the cheap monthly magazines. They are fiercer on the trail of "scoops" than the most wild-eyed little evening newspaper ever dared to be.

The latest snorter is an article on the German Emperor; it's perfectly abominable and the American Magazine, which already has Lincoln J. Steffins to answer for, ought to be ashamed. There ought to be some limits even to a magazine scoop.

It throws cheap sneers at the piety of the Empress. Even the deformed arm of the Emperor is made the topic of cruel gossip. After all, the sum of it is nothing.

Emperor William has always been one of my heroes. I object to have my illusions kicked over.

It seems to me that no young man ever came into a job facing harder circumstances. Germany is completely surrounded by enemies and eaten at the heart by socialists—like worms in the corn.

On the one hand, the young Emperor found himself facing the danger of an eager enemy at every border; he had to turn the country into a vast camp.

On the other hand, he must have realized that he would have to face the rotten degeneracy of an idle army —and he now confronts it.

In the face of these difficulties, his genius has made Germany—logically a defendant and at bay—the threat of Europe.

The great Kaiser is running amuck in the Mediterranean. His iron fist is felt in the Balkans. His domination makes the Sultan shiver. His cry of "Halt" is heard in Morocco.

The Emperor of the hemmed-in Germans is seeking an outlet—a market for the product of his factories—a feed pipe to supply his nation of soldiers.

William II may have a withered arm and his wife may insist on having nude statues draped; but all the same he is a man of daring, of imagination and of good Dutch thrift in his diplomacy.

Hoch der Kaiser—b-gosh!

Ask favors or seek counsel of the wise;
In the deep thought exceeding fortune lies.

Venus enters the sign of Gemini on this 250th day. The Moon occults Uranus. The Sun is in trine with Uranus. Mercury is in sextile with Venus. The Sun and the Moon are in benefic aspect.

For seventy-two hours to come, Mercury ruling the brain and the nerves, will exercise a powerful influence on those of changeable, impressionable temperament. Let them check their impulses, but with wisdom, for the same power that will stir them will also give them unusual quality for good.

A favorable day for asking favors of superiors, or taking short and long journeys in search of health or recreation.

Power is indicated for the thoughts and words of those having positions of moral, spiritual or intellectual authority. Good advice should come in these twenty-four hours from ministers, teachers, professors, and men of learning generally.

Students of the abstract sciences and arts may hope for exceptional light on difficult problems.

The day is good for undertaking affairs or ventures that are out of the beaten track.

New acquaintances whose influence will be important, will come into the lives of women with this birthdate. They must be very cautious about entering into factional rivalry during the twelve month.

Changes and a somewhat unsettled business year are omened for men with their birthday today. Success lies in strict avoidance of disputes. There is danger of treating as enemies those who are really friends. Young men in employment will prosper if they are ready for the coming opportunity.

Fortune in friends and patrons is a sign over children born today. Girls will marry into a good rank in society. Boys will do well in employment.

L'ITALO-AMERICANO.

The words in the headline are the fitting and suggestive name of the newest venture in the journalistic field here in Los Angeles. Anglicized, it means The Italian-American. The new newspaper bearing this name and all printed, as the name is, in Italian, made its initial bow to the public on Thursday of last week. It is, as the name and language suggest, to be the particular organ of that large and much respected portion of this community which forms the "Italian colony."

The publication is a neat, four-page affair, presenting a variety of news from many parts of the world, and manifesting a popularity at birth in the considerable advertising patronage that appears in its columns.

The Times wishes all success to this enterprise, to furnish our Italian citizens with a newspaper in their vernacular.

THE PUBLIC SERVICE.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

The Mayor yesterday declared himself in favor of open sessions of the Aqueduct Commission.

Judge Jamison handed down a decision affirming the decision of the lower court in the case of F. E. Foster of Long Beach, convicted of violating an anti-liquor ordinance and fined.

W. H. Carlson gave $10,000 additional bonds in Justice Stephens's court yesterday on complaints charging him with embezzlement in connection with the management of his Consolidated Bank of Los Angeles.

C. D. Breedlove, the laundry wagon driver accused of striking Mrs. L. Silen and dragging her about by the hair, was found not guilty in the Police Court yesterday.

AT THE CITY HALL.

OPEN SESSIONS, SAYS MAYOR.

AQUEDUCT COMMISSION FOLLOWS WRONG PRACTICE?

Visit of Ramish and Desmond on Account of Food Contract Leads the Executive to Express His Opinion—Ramish to Make Proposal to Board.

After having heard Adolph Ramish and D. J. Desmond discuss the food contract for the Owens River workmen yesterday, the Mayor emphatically expressed his belief that the Aqueduct Commission should, in the future, conduct its business in open sessions. At present, the commission meets in executive session, and much of its business is disclosed only when contracts are signed by the Board of Public Works.

"There are occasions," said the Mayor, "when executive sessions may be necessary, but they are occasions when the business in hand would be jeopardized by publicity. But, as a rule, a commission that has the expenditure of $23,000,000 of the people's money ought to transact its business publicity." The Mayor did not outline what action he may take.

This expression was the corrolary of the visits of Ramish and Desmond. Ramish expects to submit a proposal to sumbit a proposal to the Board of Public Works to build commissary houses, with toilets and reading-rooms and rest-rooms for the workmen, and give them twenty-one meals for $4.50. Desmond's contract provides for an exclusive privilege of feeding the workmen at the rate of $5 for twenty-one meals, credit accounts to be charged against the pay accounts. Ramish will ask to be put on the same footing as Desmond as to security for credit accounts. Ramish saw the Mayor first. Desmond's interview followed.

"One has the contract and the other wants a slice of it," said the Mayor, laughing. But His Honor doesn't think the contract will prove all that is expected if the Board of Public Works does the work by contract, for then the individual contractors will handle their own boarding arrangements. Before the Desmond contract, the Board of Public Works handled the feeding at a profit, it is said, but thought it best to transfer responsibility for this, so that the entire time could be given to construction matters.

What caused the Mayor to express his views as to public sessions of the Aqueduct Commission was the fact that this contract, approximating a quarter of a million a year, if outsiders' figures are correct, was executed without any publicity until the Board of Public Works put it of record. Publicity, he thinks, might have brought a different and perhaps cheaper contract, but even if it hadn't he believes the public should know what is going on at the commission sessions, he says.

Restaurant Inspector Schwegel was a caller at the Mayor's office yesterday morning. He said he believed his jurisdiction extended to the aqueduct food service, as the right of way belongs to the city and that he would investigate it is an investigation was required.

Unannounced Trip.

The Board of Public Works, Chief Engineer Mulholland and Councilmen Wallace and Dromgold left unexpectedly by automobile early yesterday morning for the Owens River district. The purpose and destination of the party was not made known, but it is understood the visit is to the new cement mills, four miles west of Tehachepi, from which a railroad to the lime quarry, seven miles distant, is to be built at a cost of $55,000. City Engineer Hamlin joined the party at San Fernando.

Liquor Zone Extension.

An echo of the past is to come before the Council Tuesday (no session will be held Monday) when the ordinance extendng the retail liquor zone so as to include all the territory bounded by Seventh and Ninth streets and San Julian street and the Los Angeles River comes up in regular order. It was postponed July 7 for sixty days. Its prospect of passage is not any brighter now than it was then.

AT THE COURTHOUSE.

FINE SUSTAINED ON AN APPEAL.

SUPPOSED TEMPERANCE DRINK COSTLY FOR SELLER.

Long Beach Man Pleads Absence of Intent to Break Law and Ignorance of Intoxicating Nature of Liquid Dispensed, but Must Pay One Hundred Dollars.

That a man who sells a beverage which he believes to be non-intoxicating may be convicted of and punished for the violation of a municipal ordinance forbidding the sale of intoxicating liquor, was Judge Jamison's decision yesterday in affirming the judgment of the Long Beach justice court in the case of F. E. Foster, who appealed after he was fined $160.

Foster was arrested for selling a beverage known as "Gold Foam." He stated that he had investigated the liquor and believed it to be non-intoxicating and introduced evidence to show an absence of intent to violate the ordinance. He was found guilty and sentenced on June 10. On his appeal, he urged the failure of the prosecution to show his intent to disobey the law.

The court holds that the question whether the beverage was intoxicating is one to be decided by the jury, which also has the right to determine the sufficiency of the evidence introduced on the issue of intent. The opinion stated, in part:

"When the act is proved to have been done by the accused, if the act be an act in itself unlawful, the law presumes it to have been intended and the proof of justification lies on the accused to overcome this legal presumption. It was for the jury to determine whether the rebuttal submitted by the defendant raised a reasonable doubt in their minds of his intent, and their verdict is conclusive on the question."

THAT OTHER WOMAN.

AGAIN IN DIVORCE SUIT.

Mrs. Nellie Rogers sought a divorce from James C. Rogers in Judge James's court yesterday on grounds of desertion and non-support, and referring to his infatuation for another woman.

"He had lived with this woman in San Francisco and we had separated for a time on that account," she said. "But I returned to him, thinking he had broken with her. In April, 1906, he went to Salt Lake City from Los Angeles to take a position. He promised to send for me, but before he left he told other people that he did not intend to do so, as he loved me no longer. I have not been supported by him since and do not know where he is."

The trial was continued for further evidence.

Mrs. Rosa Colgin, who sued Daniel Colgin for divorce on the ground of desertion, was denied a decree by Judge Bordwell because of insufficient evidence. She said that Colgin sent her to California from Kansas five years ago, promising to follow her in three months, but that he had not done so and she does not know where he is. Her sister, Mrs. Ella Converse, corroborated this testimony, and said that she herself had been sent to California by her husband in the same manner, but that Converse had died "a month or a year later, I don't remember which."

Mrs. Willieta V. Wolcott was granted a divorce from J. E. Wolcott on the ground of intemperance by Judge James. She said that from the time of her marriage to Wolcott, in 1903, he never supported her, but gave himself over to liquor. Her father and relatives were obliged to provide for both herself and her husband until she separated from him some years ago.

FINANCIAL ROPES.

MORE BONDS TIE CARLSON.

William H. Carlson appeared before Justice Stephens yesterday morning and gave bonds for $5000 on each of two embezzlement charges on which he was arrested Thursday evening, $13,000 and $19,000, respectively, being named in the complaints as the amounts he is alleged to have feloniously appropriated from the Consolidated Bank's funds.

Dr. Q. J. Rowley and J. M. Kellerman, an oil operator, qualified on the first bond, and Julius Kauffman, a commission merchant, and Warren Wilson, a publisher, on the second. It was at the request of Deputy District Attorney Blair that Justice Stephens fixed the bond at $5000 on each charge. Carlson is now under a total bond of $25,000. His examination on all the charges is set for September 15 at 10 o'clock in Justice Selph's court.

As a director of the Los Angeles Securities Company, Carlson will be required to attend Justice Stephens's court next Tuesday afternoon, when the suit of Noah Williams against the company is set for trial. Williams seeks to recover $180, being two amounts of $90 each, alleged to have been paid by J. Y. Couthers and J. H. Owens on two Redondo Villa lots purchased on contracts of sale from the securities company. The plaintiff states that the corporation has not complied with the terms of its contract.

COURTHOUSE NOTES.

BREVITIES MISCELLANEOUS.

CHECK RAISING. Fred Hout, 19 years old, was placed on one year's probation by Judge Bordwell, yesterday, when he appeared for sentence for having raised to $15 a $5 check on the First National Bank of Pomona, given him by J. H. Hornaday on July 18 in payment for a bicycle. The lad said that he left his home in Little Falls, N. Y., last April, went to Montana for a time and finally came to California in search of work last June. He said that he was friendless and destitute when he raised the check, that he had never been in trouble before, and that he would be honest in the future.

ASKS PAROLE. Attorney Stephen Sullivan pleaded guilty in Judge Bordwell's court yesterday to a charge of having passed a worthless check on the Del Rey restaurant in June. His application for parole will be heard on September 12.

AUTO OWNER SUED. Fred Horowitz filed in the Superior Court a suit against W. A. Morehouse for $50,000 damages, alleged due for personal injuries. The plaintiff says that while he was walking on Huntington boulevard, on May 3, an automobile owned by the defendant ran over him, crushing his leg and maiming him for life.

DIAMOND RING. Emil Mauler was arraigned before Justice Summerfield yesterday on a charge of having embezzled a $150 diamond ring from O. M. Harris in September, 1907. He was committed to the County Jail in default of $1000 bail, and his examination will be set later.

INCORPORATIONS. Articles of incorporation were filed with the County Clerk yesterday by the Hollywood Manufacturing Company, capital stock $4000, and the Mohawk-Sunset Oil Company, capital stock $500,000.

REAR-END COLLISION.

Automobiles in Accident on San Fernando Road and Both Disabled. Occupants Uninjured.

What might have been a serious collision took place, yesterday afternoon, on the San Fernando road, between an Oldsmobile touring car, driven by Edward D. Silent of this city, and a Franklin six-cylinder touring car, in charge of Capt. Cushman of Monte Vista. The Oldsmobile was following the Franklin, when, without warning, Cushman stopped his car. The cone of the front wheel of the Olds caught the Franklin's rear tire, putting the former's steering gear out of commission.

Two women were riding in the tonneau of the Franklin, and Mr. Silent was returning with H. O. Harrison and Frank Thomas from a visit to the Little Tejunga. Both cars were disabled. No one was injured.

BIBLE INSTITUTE.

At the Bible Institute this evening Rev. E. R. A. Hadden will speak on the theme, "What the Bible Teaches Relative to the Second Coming of the Lord Jesus Christ." Mr. Hadden will also teach the international Sunday-school lesson on Tuesdays at 12:15 p. m., to which teachers and members of classes are invited.

THE INFERIOR COURTS.

BAD YOUNGSTERS CROSS HEARTS.

MORE THAN DOZEN ARRAIGNED IN JUVENILE TRIBUNAL.

Justice Remembers Lure of Swimming Hole and Overlooks Appropriation of Bathing Suits—Leaders of Boy Gangs Are Warned—Laundry Wagon Driver Released.

More than a dozen bad little boys were before Justice Rose, yesterday morning, at the weekly session of the Juvenile Court. Most of them admitted having done wrong and were repentent. The justice put them all on probation, when they had "crossed their hearts" not to do wrong again.

Gordon Rolly and James Fischer, who tied Isadore Forman to a telegraph pole and then beat him with a rope, were put under three months' probation. The accused stated that Forman was a member of one gang of boys and that they commanded another gang. The Forman gang caught one of the Rolly gang and tied him to a post. In revenge Forman was captured and thrashed. The leaders of both gangs were warned to behave, or they would spend a long time in the Detention Home.

Two lads charged with stealing bathing suits from the Eastlake baths told the justice of a swimming hole in the Los Angeles River, near the First-street viaduct, and said they just had to go swimming there and didn't want to pose in the "all together" where people from the bridge might see them.

Whereat a far away look came into the eyes of the court. He remarked, after clearing his throat, that he knew all about the lure of a swimming hole and he allowed the culprits to go.

A youngster who stole fruit because he was hungry and several violaters of the curfew ordinance were also allowed to depart after promising better conduct in the future.

Breedlove Exonerated.

C. D. Breedlove, a driver in the employ of a local laundry, was exonerated of a charge of beating Mrs. L. Silen, after trial before Justice Frederickson in the Police Court, yesterday morning.

Mrs. Silen alleged that Breedlove came to her home, forced his way into the house, seized a package of laundry and attempted to depart; that when she objected, he struck her and dragged her about by the hiar.

The defendant and his witnesses stated on the stand that when the driver went to the house, an argument ensued during which Mrs. Silen gave Breedlove a good deal the worst of it.

After the driver had been released, Silen, the plaintiff's husband, was taken before the justice, as men said they had heard him make threats against Breedlove's life. He was warned to be careful and then released.

Goebel Case Postponed.

Fritz Goebel, charged with having stolen valuable property from the room of his sweetheart, was arraigned for the second time before Justice Austin, yesterday morning, and his examination set for September 10. He was sent to the tanks in default of bail. More than a $1000 was found on his person at the time of his arrest in Sacramento and this amount is held by the police as evidence.

MAY BE LONELY.

LOST: STREET IN WILMINGTON.

ANY ONE FINDING THE SAME IS ASKED TO RETURN IT.

Thoroughfare That Appears in Plat of Original Survey Cannot Be Discovered—Annexation of Harbor Town to Los Angeles Delayed by Its Careless Misplacement.

If anybody finds a lonely little street that seems to have lost its way and looks homeless, please send it back to Wilmington; they have lost a street in that town.

Sepulveda street, named after one of the most distinguished early-day families, has completely vanished. Surveyors have been searching vainly for some time in the vicinity where it was last seen.

A common daily inquiry made by anxious Wilmington inhabitants is: "Do you know if they have found Sepulveda street yet?"

The loss of this thoroughfare is but one of the embarrassments caused by a survey now being made in the harbor town, prior to its annexation to Los Angeles. Various old residences are found to be planted in the middle of streets.

The trouble has come about through the vanishing of an old landmark. The original survey of Wilmington was made about 1854 by Lieut. Ord of the United States Army, who also surveyed Los Angeles. As the starting point he mentions in his records Dos Barriels.

From Dos Barriels, he laid out the whole town. Most of his stakes, of course, rotted away many years ago. Various other surveys have been made and all are conflicting.

Realizing the importance of an absolutely accurate one, in view of the fierce fight for harbor prontage, the Trustees of Wilmington decided to have the whole business done over again, and made a contract with Floyd Dessery, a young Los Angeles engineer and former soldier, to do the work.

Mr. Dessery decided to go back to Ord's lines. To do so, he had to hunt up the oldest inhabitant and inquire where and what was Dos Barriles. He learned that there used to be two springs somewhere in the present townsite. In frontier fashion, they were protected by barrels lowered into the ground and came to be known as the "Two Barrels" (Dos Barriles.)

Long since the springs disappeared and no two old inhabitants could agree exactly as to their former location. The statements varied so widely that the engineer had to take a new tack and discover as many of the original stakes as possible. This has been such a slow process that the survey gangs have been at work three weeks and have only finished about a third of the townsite.

The amusing feature of last week's work was the futile search for the missing Sepulveda street. Lieut. Ord shows it in his plats but it seems to have no real existence.

In spite of the necessity of rearranging property lines and of moving houses, there seems to be no prospect of lawsuits. In the case of the old house that extends so far into the street, the owner says frankly that he could not find any street, or a sign of one, when he built it.

The new survey is the first big step toward joining Los Angeles and Wilmington.

EYESORES MUST GO.

the guilty party, there is no redress at law.

From the records, the owners are Harriet R. Price and Mrs. Jessie Voight. From an inquiry in the neighborhood it appears that none of the adjacent property owners are guilty of adding to the pile of debris. Telephone lineman leave pieces of wire and broken poles there; passing junk dealers throw away articles that appear unsalable; bits of paper, old can, branches lopped off trees on the street, all accumulate until there is an unsightly pile of rubbish.

COMPLAIN TO HEALTH OFFICE.

"That is but one instance out of hundreds," asserted one of the health inspectors. "Look at this list that came in today."

He showed a score of complaints for premises neglected by their owners and vacant lots that are a detriment to the neighborhood.

In the business district there are many unsightly structures that should be at once torn down and the ground cleared away. One of the most conspicious examples—probably the homeliest house in this city—is at Broadway and Eighth street. It is half-demolished, and a strong wind would doubtless topple it over. The walls are plastered with theatrical signs, and at one side there is a heap of rubbish. The property is owned by a syndicate, and it is the declared intention of the owners to tear the place down shortly and make the lot ready for a prospective purchaser. The neighborhood will rejoice.

At the upper ends of South Main and South Spring streets, Broadway, and Hill streets, there are several bad spots. The owners assert that the buildings will soon be wrecked and that within a few weeks, the properties will be in good condition.

UNSIGHTLY ONES.

At Tenth and Main streets is a vacant lot covered with debris. The adjacent lessees would like to see the property cleaned up. Between good business blocks, near South Main and Eleventh streets, there is a lot covered with a crop of weeds. It is unsightly, and a detriment to adjoining property.

Turning to Pico from Main, there is an unsightly corner. It is covered with weeds and utensils belonging to the city.

Along West Pico there are a number of weed-covered lots. In close view of the inmates of the Pacific Hospital, on Grand avenue, are several lots that are unkempt and liberally adorned with refuse and weeds.

At Flower and Pico is a vacant lot, said to be owned by trustees of a nearby church. It has been neglected, and is an eyesore in the neighborhood.

At Albany and Pico streets, a pile of old shoes has decorated the thoroughfare for weeks. It seems that the tenants in an adjacent apartment-house have thrown their old shoes into the street, evidently despairing of an opportunity to use them for some neighborhood wedding.

Several coal and wood dealers on Pico and adjoining streets have utilized vacant lots as a convenient place for storing their stock. While they do not violate the law, the neighbors are bitter in their complaints.

On Albany street, not far from Pico street, is a lot, owned by the genial and patriotic secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, Frank Wiggins. He is unaware of the use to which his lot is put, and he states that as far as he can prevent it, no one shall put debris or old lumber on his property. Nearby property owners do not blame him for the sorry appearance of the lot, for they assert that it has been a common receptacle for waste material for months past. It appears that the only way to bar vandals is to build a fence, and Wiggins says he will put up ramparts and a gatling gun if it is necessary; he shows the right spirit.

At Union and Ninth, Union and Valencia and Seventh and Valencia, there are a number of vacant lots which are covered with weeds. They detract from the general sightly appearance of the street and tend to depreciate property values in the neighborhood.

RELUCTANT TO TELL.

A rather curious feature in connection with these unsightly lots, is the reluctance of neighbors to enter a complaint. When asked who owned a certain lot on Union avenue, one of the property owners directly affected, replied: "I really don't know, who owns that lot. Of course we all object to its appearance. The seeds from the weeds blow onto our places, but I would suggest that you see the agents for the property." Thus it is apparent, that inspectors have a task in locating owners, although adjacent residents have made complaint.

Between Little and Beacon streets on fashionable West Seventh, is a tract that has attracted the gaze of passengers on the street cars. The three lots are grown up with weeds, and tin cans and other rubbish are piled up in the rear.

The agents for the property declined yesterday to disclose the names of the owners. The assessment rolls at the City Hall show that the lots are taxed to Annie G. Clancy, Henry Curtis (address not given,) and Helen Sanborn of South Burlington avenue.

A few dollars expended on labor would transform the appearance of this tract. The weeds could be burned and the rubbish carted away. An expenditure of possibly $50 would make the lots sightly and attractive to possible purchasers.

In the shadow of the handsome family hotels near Westlake Park are a number of vacant lots which are in a disgraceful condition. Weeds grow in profusion, and all kinds of rubbish can be seen on them. It appears that complaints have been made to the City Hall officials, but so far nothing has been done to compel the absentee owners to make a general clean-up.

Along fashionable Lake street, are a number of vacant lots that should be burned over and made presentable. The neighbors profess ignorance as to the owners, but all state that they would "like to see the city get busy."

On Washington, between Hobart boulevard and Normandie, are several lots, whose appearance could be greatly improved by the application of a match.

ON WEST ADAMS.

Along West Adams, the street, in the main, has been carefully attended to, but there are a few scattered lots on which rubbish has accumulated and weeds grown up. The splendid tract at West Adams and Figueroa, which is considered by real estate men to be one of the choicest corners in the city, has several heaps of refuse on it. The trustees of St. Vincent's College have title to it, and the price is fixed at a large sum. The agents state that it is impossible to keep persons from piling up tin cans and rubbish, but that if any one is caught in the act he will be dealt with by the law.

While the southwest of the city needs considerable work on the part of the city employés and scavengers, there are other sections in even worse condition.

If the municipal clean-up this fall hits a few property owners pretty hard they will have no one but themselves to blame. Warnings have been sent out, and where the owners could not be found, notices have been posted on the lots.

Prosecutions will be in order unless a general reform is instituted. Civic pride ought naturally to influence most of the owners more than threats of prosecutions.

ADVERTISERS' EXPANSION.

The Read Advertising Agency, which occupies offices on the fourth floor of the San Fernando building, has just taken an important step by leasing a large room on the ground floor of the same building, at the same time retaining the old offices, thus giving the agency every facility for the rapid transaction of business.

Danderin GROWS HAIR and we can PROVE IT!

A lady from Minnesota writes:
"As a result of using Danderine, my hair is close to five feet in length."

Beautiful Hair at Small Cost

HAIR troubles, like many other diseases, have been wrongly diagnosed and altogether misunderstood. The hair itself is not the thing to be treated, for the reason that it is simply a product of the scalp and wholly dependent upon its action. The scalp is the very soil in which the hair is produced, nurtured and grown, and it alone should receive the attention if results are to be expected. It would do no earthly good to treat the stem of a plant with a view of making it grow and become more beautiful—the soil in which the plant grows must be attended to. Therefore, the scalp in which the hair grows must receive the attention if you are to expect it to grow and become more beautiful.

Loss of hair is caused by the scalp drying up, or losing its supply of moisture or nutriment; when baldness occurs the scalp has simply lost all its nourishment, leaving nothing for the hair to feed upon (a plant or even a tree would die under similar conditions.)

The natural thing to do in either case, is to feed and replenish the soil or scalp as the case may be, and your crop will grow and multiply as nature intended it should.

Knowlton's Danderine has a most wonderful effect upon the hair glands and tissues of the scalp. It is the only remedy for the hair ever discovered that is similar to the natural hair foods or liquids of the scalp.

It penetrates the pores quickly and the hair soon shows the effects of its wonderfully exhilarating and life-producing qualities.

One 25-cent bottle is enough to convince you of its great worth as a hair growing and hair beautifying remedy—try it and see for yourself.

NOW at all druggists in three sizes, 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle.

OLD MEXICO.

PAN-AMERICAN AN ACTUALITY.

Culmination of Great Los Angeles Enterprise.

Social Doings of Angelenos in City of Mexico.

An Ambitious Plan for the Southern Country.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

CITY OF MEXICO, Sept. 2.—Mexico has fulfilled her part of the promise to link, with fingers of steel, the sister republic of America. The last rail has been laid of the Pan-American, and so far as this country is concerned, railway transportation is an accomplished fact, from New York, at least to the borders of Guatemala. A Californian, J. M. Neeland, vice-president of the Pan-American Railroad Company, came up from southern Mexico, and has gone to Los Angeles to confer with his associates regarding further enterprises allied to that road.

The tract completed tapping the Tehuantepec Isthmus Railway at San Geronimo runs southward to the Guatemalan frontier near Tapachula, a distance of five hundred kilometers. It is a standard gauge road, four feet, eight and a half inches wide. When ballasted as it will be at an early date, it will be one of the best bits of railroad track on the American continent.

Mr. Neeland, who commenced this work five years ago, has had valuable assistance in his unique venture from Messrs. D. P. Doak and L. M. Fletcher, and other well-known American railway experts and the company is to be congratulated on this fair accomplishment, a task whereof many a chapter of heroic history will remain forever unwritten. The system has four English locomotives and the rest are sixty-ton and eighty-ton Baldwin and Brooks engines; the cars are American, and the steel rails—were partly from Carnegie and partly Belgian. Trains now run daily from San Geronimo to the border of Guatemala, making the run in twenty-four hours. When the road is perfectly ballasted, trains will run as swiftly and smoothly as over the most privileged road beds in the United States. Much of the roadway was laid along tropical jungles, where the iron-like woods had to be blasted out by dynamite. The plucky Californians battled with swamp and savannahs peopled with fevers and the many unrecorded dangers that haunt railroad construction in the Mexican tropics.

THE SUBSIDY.

However, despite the difficulties and dangers, they have been finally and fully successful. The Mexican government was generous to the last, in aid of this enterprise. When the road was authorized five years ago, the government promised a subsidy of $12,000 Mexican silver per kilometer, and thus this addition to the Mexican system of railroads has cost the government alone $6,000,000, aside from the great expenditures by Mr. Neeland and his associates. Even during the past ten months since financial stringency set in, the government might have availed itself of the option it held, to pay Mr. Neeland in 5 per cent bonds, but with remarkable promptness and faithfulness to the spirit of its contract, has persisted in cash payments in the face of every obstacle, as far as possible. Construction subsidy and other expenses have run up the cost of the road to the Mexican government not less than $7,000,000. But the government called for no halt in the undertaking during every workable day in the five years, thus nobly redeeming its promise in connection with the all-rail route from New York to South America, inclusive.

The country travedsed by this line is perhaps the richest in the republic. It has probably the heaviest rainfall in the country, not less, in its driest portion, than sixty inches during the season; the rich vegetable that forms the subsoil meters deep in place, as yet awaiting the handicraft of the agriculturist. The line runs through the State of Chiapas, a State 70,000 square kilometers in size, with a population, however, of barely half a million people. Aside from the copper mining at Huixtla, Chiapas, where there are heavy deposits of the metal, there is practically no mining done along the line of the Pan-American.

Nature may have some surprises in store for the prospectors who will enter that now open country, but as yet these copper beds are the only mining enterprises there. It is all an agricultural section. The soil is a clayey formation, with sand as a minor element, but a calcareous formation runs into the State as far southwest as Cristobal Las Casas. Bananas, with a nutrition forty-fold in excess of the potato, grow luxuriantly. Humboldt was in Chiapas in 1803, and remarked about the banana that it would "produce more food at less cost than any other known crop." He referred to its nutritive qualities, which give rise to the adage that one banana is equal to three loaves of bread. It has been estimated that one hectare planted in these fruits, can feed more than a hundred men while the same tract planted in wheat would feed five persons. Coffee is a prodigious proposition in Chiapas. The Soconusco coffee growing was at least fifty years under way when Humboldt was there, but he praised it very highly. Moist atmosphere, chosen spots along the foothills that slope toward the Sierra Madre, and where the sun's rays are not too ardent, an exceedingly fertile vegetable soil, and abundance of rainfall, are the elementary conditions that give Chiapas coffee such advantages. This State is the home of the cacao, the first place on the American continent to produce the berry.

This "theobroma cacao" (food of the gods) is an evergreen running to a maximum of forty feet in height. From the pear-shaped pods of the tree comes the chocolate of commerce so highly prized in the American market. Nearly 80,000,000 pounds of cacao entered the American market in 1907, but the best of it came from Soconusco, Chiapas.

At Zacualpa are found the largest rubber plantations outside of Brazil. Dr. Pehr Ollson-Seffer, a noted Norwegian agriculturist, is engaged in experimenting in Chiapas with Australian cotton, from which he expects phenomenal results. Cotton has thrived in that part of Mexico wonderfully. It is said that at the time of the conquest by Cortez, in 1519, cotton was cultivated there in colors; if so, it were an open hint for the wizard of California, Prof. Burbank. At all events, cotton is indigenous in Mexico, and was cultivated for centuries prior to the days of Cortez. Fruits of all sorts, especially tropical varieties, abound in that Tierra Caliente of Mexico. Sugar, tobacco, cattle, are also raised in growing proportions. Now that the country has been opened to the world, men will go there with scientific methods to increase immeasurably the agricultural output of the country.

THE CEREMONIES.

Mr. Neeland expects this fall that the formal inauguration of the road will take place and possibly the occasion will be graced with the presence of President Diaz. It is not at all unlikely that on that occasion President Estrada Cabrera of Guatemala will meet President Diaz of Mexico at the Guatemalan frontier to congratulate him upon this new acquisition to the Mexican Railway system, and to assure him of the intention of Guatemala to proceed with her part of the contract for connecting New York and South America with all-rail route. At present there is a gap of forty-two kilometers in the republic of Guatemala on the line of the Guatemalan Central Railroad to make the complete connection to the city of Guatemala. Mr. Neeland is confident of obtaining the contract to complete this gap. It is easy work. From Tehuantepec to the Isthmus of Panama is a distance of 1700 miles as possible to railroad connection. Of this 600 miles already constructed can be utilized. Later Mr. Neeland expects to take up completing contracts with Honduras and Nicaragua in this connection. Those countries thus touched by this international route afford immense possibilities for investment, and the building of the Pan-American route through these sister republics will develop that country more than anything else.

ANOTHER PLAN.

Mr. Neeland also has another very ambitious plan in Southern Mexico. It is his intention to extend his Pan-American Railroad to some point in Yucatan, or rather to connect with the Yucatan Railroad at Campeche. This line, which will cost $50,000,000, will be about 1100 kilometers in length, with a branch of 250 kilometers to San Juan Bautista, the capital of the State of Tabasco. Four different States will then have rail connection with the city of Mexico which are now cut off from such connection and dependent entirely upon water transportation. The Mexican government will give one of the largest subsidies that has ever been given for this line, and it will run through one of the richest sections on the American continent—a section which Humboldt described as the "Paradise of America." It will take six years to complete this line to Yucatan. It will be built with English capital, and on the 17th of August Mr. Neeland received a cablegram from one of the largest banking houses in London, who expect to take up the financing of the road. While the capital invested will be English, the equipment will be American. The line will run through table lands with a maximum of 4000 feet above sea level, but there will be passes through the Sierra Madre which rise 13,000 feet above sea level. The agricultural possibilities of this as yet uninvaded territory are simply limitless, and include wheat of the finest quality, mahogany and enormous quantities of pine. climate is simply ideal along the posed line. This line will open up not only a very beautiful scenic route, but also one of the richest producing sections of the Republic of Mexico.

COMING HOME.

Hon. Ignacio Sepulveda, formerly Secretary of the American Legation, and ex-United States Chargé d'Affaires in this capital, expects to go in September to California on a brief pleasure trip. He left Los Angeles for Mexico in January, 1884, being at that time a judge of the Supreme Court of Los Angeles county. Upon his arrival in this country he quickly came to the front, not only in society politics, but also in his profession as a most excellent lawyer, and later in the diplomatic service of the United States, being appointed Secretary of the American Legation by President Cleveland in 1896. He served through the term of Minister Ransom, and finally resigned from his diplomatic post on account of the pressure of personal business. He is attorney for some of the largest corporations in Mexico which have to do with government business. ernment has given this eminent Cali- His intimate relationship with the highest officials of the Mexican gov- fornian not only prestige but high official standing.

Judge Sepulveda was born in Los Angeles, and is in the neighborhood of 65 years of age. He has had a varied and busy career in this capital. He was twice president of the American Club, and was the first president of that club eight years ago. There is no colony undertaking that seems quite complete without the genial coöperation of this high-minded, affable and talented Californian. Speaking of his trip, he told me that it was his intention to remain in California but a brief time, although Mrs. Sepulveda and the family may out-remain him. Mexico, he declares, has thrown a spell over him that is hard to break. While Mrs. Sepulveda has been in California on three different occasions since they came to Mexico, he has not had the pleasure of visiting his old home, and he looks forward with keenest anticipation, especially as when he left Los Angeles, it had a population of 15,000, and he expects to find himself a "drop in a bucket" among 250,000 people, the present population.

PERSONAL.

Ogden Hoffman of San Francisco, who has been for a year or so in Southern Mexico, has come up to this city to locate in connection with mining business. He is an enthusiastic S.P.C.A. man, and was the head of the police department of that splendid society in San Francisco, being engaged in that work for some five years; he is very actively looking around in this city to ameliorate as far as possible the condition of the dumb creation. Armed with a button of the local S.P.C.A., he goes forth on his errands of mercy, and is doing effective work in that line.

An enjoyable musical soiree was held last evening at the artistic home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas S. Gore. Mr. Gore is known in San Francisco on account of his stage connections, being a well-known baritone opera singer. His charming wife is well known also on the American stage as Pauline Johnson. Occasionally their beautiful home is thrown open to the lovers of music. On this occasion charming vocal selections were rendered by Miss Maria Murray and Miss Florence Galloway, and some fine piano renditions by Mrs. Charles Johnson. Among others who participated were two gifted California ladies from Sacramento, one Mrs. Karl Hoffman, pianist and her sister, Miss Dierssen, violinist. The sisters played exquisitely, and accompanied some of the voical talent on the occasion.

Richard Nord, a San Francisco real estate man, is here. He is interested in Cuernavaca real estate, and is erecting several houses for rental purposes at that exquisite resort.

Charles B. Pyott, a Los Angeles business man, is among the late arrivals, and is stopping at Hotel Porter.

J. O. Hayes of Chihuahua and Sacramento, representing the Hearst interests, is in the city, at Hotel St. Francis.

Ed M. Foy, a real estate man from Berkeley, has been recently in this city. His syndicate has bought a large tract of unimproved land in the State of Vera Cruz for plantation purposes. He will return to Berkeley, but expects to come back to Mexico on business.

Mrs. J. P. Hill, Mrs. J. Pilkerton of San Francisco, and Oscar Maurier and wife of Berkeley, a small tourist group of Californians, are spending some little time in Mexico and are at Porter's.

The Misses McCarthy of Los Angeles, are visiting in this city. They have made side trips to Cuernavaca and other charming Mexican resorts and expect to remain through September.

The School Board for American Children at Guanajuato has decided to open a school there, and Miss Nickels, formerly of San Francisco, has been engaged as the teacher.

Maj. R. J.. Dyer, who has for several weeks past been ill at Los Angeles, returned to this capital recently and started for a European trip.

Miss Lucia M. Kennison of Stockton, Cal., is here on a pleasure trip of a few days. She is at the St. Francis.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen of Popotla, a suburb of this city, will leave this week for a visit to friends and relatives in California.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Smith of Pasadena, Cal., are in the city and will visit in the republic for two or three months.

Mr. and Mrs. John Williamson of San Francisco, Cal., have arrived on a pleasure trip and will remain ten days or so in the country.

Mrs. Armand C. Weill, accompanied by her daughters, the Misses Pauline and Elizabeth Weill, left on the 23d inst. for Los Angeles, Cal., their future home. What is Los Angeles' gain is Mexico's loss, for these charming ladies were great favorites in social circles.

Mrs. Frederick P. Hoeck and her daughter, Jean, left on the 25th for San Francisco, Cal. They will remain indefinitely in California.

Mr. M. Elsasser is going very shortly to San Francisco to join his wife, who is visiting relatives there.

Frank Kilpatrick left last evening for Los Angeles to resume his studies there.

EDWARD C. BUTLER.

Fear Cut in Wages.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 1.—At a meeting last night of representatives of all branches of organized labor employed by railroads, a committee was appointed to visit the State Capitol and urge the Railroad Commission to desist from its efforts to prevent the railroads from raising their rates. The trainmen say they are convinced if the railroads fail in their efforts to raise their freight rates, a cut in wages will result.

FALL AND WINTER STYLES CROWD THE STOR

Every Dept. Shows a Wonderful Array of Wearables For Now

Last Friday's sale was the talk of the town. We advertised to sell every spring and summer wash suit in the house—values up to $15.00 at $1.00. This was done in order to make a clean sweep. People came from far and near. The sale was an unprecedented success. By closing time Friday there was not a single summer suit, summer waist or summer skirt in the house. This demonstrates in a forceful manner the fact that when the New York Store advertises to do a thing the people know they can count on such statements being carried out to the letter. We begin business Tuesday morning with an absolutely new stock of Fall and Winter garments. The store will be closed all day tomorrow, Monday, September 7th, Labor Day.

UNDER THE WATER WAGON.

Boy Riding Bicycle Thrown Beneath Wheels and Seriously Crushed. Tire Causes Accident.

Alexander Brown, 9 years of age, was seriously injured yesterday afternoon when he was thrown under the wheels of a city water wagon at Pico street and Grand avenue. His left arm was crushed, and he sustained numerous bruises and lacerations about the head and body.

The boy was riding a bicycle in front of the Ponet Square Hotel, where he lives. As he was passing the sprinkling cart a tire came off the rear wheel of his bicycle, and he was thrown directly beneath the heavy vehicle.

He was removed to apartments in the hotel and attended by neighborhood physicians, who stated that the boy's arm will be saved.

WHAT'S SAID IN SAN FRANCISCO.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, September 4.—At a meeting of the Laurel Hill club the other day Mrs. James W. Orr told of the discourtesy shown the delegates of the biennial convention in Boston by Mrs. George Albee Hibbard, wife of the Mayor. "At the reception," said Mrs. Orr, "we were all in our prettiest gowns, but the Mayor's wife wore a simple pongee suit and kept her hat and veil on all the time. She went through her duties in a hasty way perfunctorily shaking our hands and did not stay in the reception line more than half an hour."

Because Miss Ina Coolbrith, the poetess, insists on living here instead of with the literary colony at Carmel-by-the-Sea she is at outs with the Spinners club and her friends charge bad faith on the part of the organization in the management of the lady's trust funds.

A policeman's lot may not be a happy one if an old ballad is to be credited but that it is a desirable one cannot be denied in view of the fact that 800 stalwarts are taking civil service examinations to fill fifty vacancies.

In the Police Court Milkman Lee of the Columbia dairy convicted of selling a can of skimmed milk as the real article, pleaded absent-mindedness and the judge in view of the extenuating circumstance fined him only $25.

Capt. Solomon Avery facing a court-martial on the charge of inefficiency as an officer and inability to handle the big guns, has practically convinced his judges that the accusations are groundless. A later hearing will be given the charge of mismanaging the company's funds of the Tenth Coast artillery.

Lawyer Coghlan says that his clients, the Claudianes boys, alleged dynamiters, are eager for a speedy trial but an attack of bronchitis will prevent him from going on with the case until next week.

Merchant Arthur W. Pike, after swearing to a warrant for the arrest of Norbert E. Lloyd, his clerk, on the charge of felony embezzlement forgot to appear in court to press the case. The defendant was discharged by the judge who characteruzed the arrest as an outrage and the heedless employer will have to face a damage suit for malicious arrest.

Kate Field used to eloquently preach the gospel of the grape, but that was when the grape was some pumpkins. Now it is nothing with Andrea Sbarboro insisting that it is both food and drink. Italy's King insists on Italian wine at court functions, Germany's Emperor drinks only his country's vintages and now our California grape growers spread the doctrine of "American wines for Americans."

Joseph Corrigan, a former sergeant of the Twenty-ninth infantry, has given a tough problem to our police. After several drinks with friends on the water front he went to sleep and on awakening he found a paste diamond in his pocket in place of a $200 check and now he demands an explanation.

Captious citizens of finicky palate will approve the crusade for pure foods started by the State Board of Health. Inspector Robbins has arrested a dealer for selling Worcestershire sauce conaining benzoic acid and a confectioner for selling candy made of paraffin.

James Clay Dunphy, sued for a divorce and unjustly termed a millionaire by the newspapers at the critical period of having the alimony fixed, has been beautifully vindicated by his lawyer who says: "In the light of the evidence my client is a poor, wretched, unfortunate man, broken in health, alone in the world, and called upon to face extremest difficulties."

ADMISSION DAY CELEBRATION.

NATIVE SONS AND DAUGHTERS AND PIONEERS TOGETHER.

Beginning of Annual Demonstrations on a Large Scale to Be Held in Santa Monica Canyon, With Added Feature of a Grotesque Midway and Barbecue.

Commemorating the admission of California into the Union, Native Sons, Native Daughters and Pioneers will meet in Santa Monica Cañon on Wednesday in a picnic and general celebration. That day will be the fifty-eighth anniversary of the great event and the celebration is planned on a large scale and is to be the forerunner of like celebrations to be held each year in cities of Southern California.

Special trains will be run from San Bernardino, Ventura, Santa Barbara and other points and the inquiry indicates that they will bring thousands to the celebration.

In addition to the regulation old-time Spanish barbecue, which is a feature of Native Son picnics, a diversion is offered this year in "Native Son Midway," in which prominent members of the order will caricature dime museum celebrities. Snively, the skeleton dude, Omhah, the wild man; Mrs. Bewley, the bearded woman, and Thatcher Bros., the Siamese twins, will all pale into insignificance when compared with the aggregation of Native Son "wonders."

Frank Lawton has been engaged to superintend the barbecue tables and Señor Ramon Felipe, famous throughout Mexico for his skill in barbecueing meats, will preside at the pits.

The committee in charge of the celebration is: Chairman, Bert Farmer; treasurer, Ed. B. Lovie; secretary, H. N. Ireland; G. H. Burkhardt, J. T. Newell, F. D. Elder, William F. Bryant, Ruben S. Schmidt, A. A. Schmidt, Ray Howard, P. B. Dougherty, W. L. Wiggens, Louis Neitz, J. H. Bellue, C. E. McDonnell, Miss C. Katze, Mrs. Diller, Mrs. J. B. Solomon, Mrs. Don Clampite, Mrs. W. H. Foster, Miss Grace Culbert.

Twelve parlors of Native Sons and seven parlors of Native Daughters will have part in the celebration. They are: Arrowhead, San Bernardino; Cabrillo, Ventura; Santa Barbara, Santa Barbara; Santiago, Santa Ana; Grizzly Bear, Long Beach; Santa Monica, Santa Monica; Ramona, Corona, Los Angeles, La Fiesta and Sierra Madre of Los Angeles.

The N.D.G.W. parlors will be Los Angeles and La Esperanza of Los Angeles, San Bernardino, Long Beach, Ventura, Santa Paula and Santa Barbara.

The programme of speeches includes Chairman of the Day Grand Third Vice-President H. C. Lichtenberger; welcoming address, Hon. A. C. Harper; "The Freedom of California," Frank G. Tyrrell; "The Day We Celebrate," R. M. Clark; "Criticisms," Calvert Wilson; "The Pioneers," former Senator Cornelius C...

MINES AND THE MINING INDUSTRY.

IN THE EARTH.

RARE MINERALS, METALLURGY AND CHEMISTRY.

To Correspondents:

This department is not conducted for pay. Its object is to convey reliable information of interest and value to the public, and it is not for the private benefit of any miner, collector, speculator or prospector. Correspondents are particularly cautioned to take careful note of the statements and injunctions contained in the paragraphs below.

(1.) Specimens must be small and bear a tag giving name and address of sender, and the general—not exact—locality from whence the specimen was taken, also the name of it as nearly as the sender knows. Send, also, with the specimen a clearly-written letter briefly describing the find and what the finder wishes done with it. The letter must be properly dated and plainly signed.

Letter and specimen must be in one package, not in separate enclosures.

(2.) No attention will be paid to anonymous letters or to letters signed merely with initials.

(3.) No examination of samples or specimens will be made in cases where The Times may decide that the specimen and inquiry are not of public interest. This office does not undertake to perform the work of an assay office.

(4.) Inquiries relative to matters of purely personal interests will not be answered.

(5.) When no response to an inquiry made or specimens sent appears in these columns, the inquirer will understand that his inquiry does not come within the purview of this department.

(6.) It is impossible to return specimens, as they must necessarily be destroyed or impaired in the process of analysis.

Address invariably, The Times.

Bismuth Traces.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 1.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I beg to enclose you herewith a sample of ore that comes from Lower California, and which I believe contains uranium. This sample is from the surface and I believe there is a large body of this ore.

I beg to thank you in advance for your opinion, which I will look for in your columns.

Yours sincerely, G. W. T.

ANSWER: The sample is very low grade Vanadate, with bismuth traces. It appears, also, on analysis, that phosphate of copper is present one-tenth of one per cent. only.

Iron Oxides.

ARROYO GRANDE, Aug. 1.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Under separate package I enclose a sample of rock. I note your "In the Earth" department makes analysis of unclassified ore specimens and publishes the results in your valuable paper. If convenient would ask you to make an analysis of mine and publish same. Thanking you in advance, I am respectfully yours, J. E. A.

ANSWER: Sample turned up O. K. It is quartzitic, banded with iron oxides, and mixed with jasper-iron ore. Calcite present.

Conglomerate.

YUMA (Ariz.) Aug. 12.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Will you kindly inform me what the nature and indications are of the piece of black substance which I enclose to you under separate cover. It is a Yuma county, Arizona, product and I have some curiosity as to the nature of it. A reply in your "In the Earth" columns will be appreciated.

Respectfully yours, J. W.

ANSWER: The "nature" of your sample is set forth at subheading. The "indications" point to the fact that the sample belongs to a questionable iron ore deposit.

The specimen is a typical conglomerate or "pudding stone" consisting of microscopical grains of quartz, magnetite, ilmenite and hematite. Bog iron and manganese dioxide present.

Favorable for Beryl.

SAN BERNARDINO, Aug. 12.—[To the Editor of The Times:] By express I ship specimens found in a quartz ledge in this county.

What are the different kinds of rock formation?

What can we expect to find in such formations, as to gems, etc.?

Yours truly, E. D. P.

ANSWER: The large specimen carries white mica, quartz, and kaolin. The white (on one side) is fine silica mixed with albite and microscopical beryl.

The purplish sample (dry) resembles amethystine quartz. Wet, it shows up as impure quartz only.

The three porphyritic samples are mixed with mica. One of the samples show two casts of lost crystals (probably beryl) from which the crystals were "dropped" before submitting to this department of The Times.

The gray-white sample is quartz, with ortho-silicate of beryllium present.

Anthraconite.

CASA GRANDE (Ariz.) Aug. 12.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am sending you a piece of rock for examination and classification, it comes from the vicinity of Tucson, Pima county, Arizona.

There is a blue lime formation 1000 feet wide, with a ledge of the inclosed rock 8 feet wide standing up 8 or 10 feet above the lime, and traceable the length of two claims. By striking two pieces of this rock together it gives off a strong sulphur smell, and after night leaves a phosphorescent streak on the rock. Simple tests do not show sulphur. What is the name of the rock and has it any commercial value.

Yours truly, C. F. B.

ANSWER: Stinkstone (mineralogical name at sub-heading,) is known as the skunkfoot of mineralogy. When pure it can be used in ornamental architecture and takes a good polish. Your specimen is very impure.

The sample is fetid calcite with baryte intermixed.

A wagon road made of the material would create—from the friction of wheels passing over it—a decidedly more unpleasant "whiff" than exploding gasoline.

A low per cent. of zinc sulphide is present in the sample, and yet it is not the variety of sphalerite "carried" by many Salt Lake Railroad officials, and possesing the little understood property of tribo-luminescence" (becoming luminous when scratched with steel.) This variety can be obtained at the mines near, Frisco, Utah.

It would be well for you to prospect the 1000-foot limestone ledge for phosphate rock, as traces of phosphoric acid appear on analysis in the sample.

A Mechanical Mixture.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 17.—[To the Editor of The Times] There is some aneged graphite (in this container) a friend of mine has turned up in Utah. It may be all right. Will you kindly let me know if worth while to locate it.

Cordially yours, D.

ANSWER: The material is a mechanical mixture of a low per cent. graphite with flaky mica and traces of molybdenite. Properly treated it would make fine axle grease and other lubricants. It is well to locate the deposit, especially so if water is near, and your friend a reliable one.

Calcite.

CORONA, Aug. 1.—[To the Editor of The Times:] The inclosed samples are from ledges located within six miles of Corona, and about four miles from Santa Fé switch. We believe them to be good cement materials. No. 1 is shale, exposed for hundreds of feet in thickness and covering 100 to 200 acres. No. 2 fossilliferous lime, cropping out in places 500 feet apart. No. 3 and 4 are supposed to be good limestone from ledges aggregating over 200 feet in thickness.

We would like to have your opinion as to their values and uses.

Very truly, H. A. P.

ANSWER: If samples submitted by you represent the average of deposits outlined, a cement plant can be successfully established at locality stated.

Sample No. 1 is calcite (fossiliferous limestone,) with phosphoric acid present. Probably, by prospecting, phosphate rock of percentage sufficient for commercial phosphoric acid could be obtained.

No. 2 is limestone, somewhat dolomitic.

No. 3 is bluish impure limestone (cement rock.) No. 4 is impure limestone with iron oxides in the mass.

The property referred to should be carefully examined and tested for cement values.

Quartz.

CRACKERJACK, Aug. 13.—[To the Editor of The Times:] The bearer will hand you sample of ore from Crackerjack district, known as "More Mina."

The large piece is from lead, and the small piece from foot-wall, which I have reason to believe is ore. Yours truly,

W. J. G. (Prospector.)

ANSWER. But one sample from you came to The Times business office. It is quartz, spotted with low per cent. of copper values. On one side is finely oxydized ore. Pyrite and decomposed (pseudomorphic after pyrite) pyrite is in the mass, with traces of vanadic acid.

Soda and Iron Oxides.

DAGGETT, Aug. 10.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I send you two samples from the desert.

Is the yellow-colored ore stained by iron?

Is the red stuff cinnabar? I will thank you for a reply in your "In the Earth" columns. It has been of great service to me.

Yours sincerely, J. T. B.

ANSWER. Red-yellow coloring matter is from iron oxides and soda. The red "stuff" is hematite (iron peroxide) "Indian war paint" variety.

Ores of Tungsten.

MILFORD (Utah) Aug. 8.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am a stranger in this locality, seeking ores of tungsten for New York and Liverpool customers.

The hotel-keeper referred me to your great paper, and especially to your "In the Earth" department.

I respectfully request that you publish the localities of the three chief ores of tungsten—in the United States.

Yours cordially, DR. G. T. B.

ANSWER: The more important localities of ores of tungsten are west of the Missouri River.

This department of The Times (now in its fifth year) has led prospectors to several localities, notably that of the scheelite (calcium tungstate) near Johannesburg, Cal., as, likewise, that of Arrastra Smith, near Wallace, Idaho.

The Boulder county, Colo., wolframite was first located and worked into concentrates by the writer in 1899. The concentrates referred to are the purest known—containing no sulphur or arsenic and but .049 per cent. phosphorus. Excepting the leads of wolframite and hubnerite of near Eldora, Caribou and Nederland—other Boulder county ores of tungsten call for this passing notice only.

The finest massive acicular and other forms of wolframite and hubnerite are obtainable in the Little Dragoon Mountains, Cochise county, Ariz.

In the San Juan district of Colorado some scheelite and hubnerite is located.

In South Dakota, east of the Minnie mine, and near the Burlington Railroad, wolframite occurs sparingly in an impure dolomite matrix.

Wolframite is "shot up" in a 2 per cent. quartz and quartzite at many localities in Idaho, especially south of Napa and west of Flint.

In the Venture district of Oregon scheelite is sparingly located, as, also, near "Dead Indian" and close to Harriman's "ranch."

East of the Yellowstone Park in Montana scheelite (of low per cent.) occurs in commercial quantities.

Nevada possesses many deposits of Wolframite and hubnerite. Maarriot's and Fox's, near Osceola, being the most notable ones. At Battle Mountain, in the Shell Range, near Ely and Elko, wolframite and scheelite are in place.

At Twin Buttes, fourteen miles east of Black Rock on the Salt Lake route, is a lead of hematite mixed with ilmenite and crystals of pyroxanite that has caused the purchase of many railway tickets. The natives of that locality frequently send samples of the material to metallurgists and chemists prepaid, and it requires a skilled mineralogist—on some samples—to detect the spurious stuff.

Near Salome and adjacent points along the Santa Fé wolframite and hubnerite occur sparingly.

Wolframite has been reported from near San Bernardino, Cajon and from many points in San Diego county, but a trip to the localities named failed to show evidences of the mineral. (Hall's Catalogue of Minerals West of the Missouri River.)

RICH HILL IS WELL NAMED.

SEARCHLIGHT PROPERTY SHOWING UP GOOD VALUES.

High-Grade at Several Points With Average of Thirty Dollars—Mining Minister Meets Encouragement. Nob Hill District Uncovers Sulphide Ore.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SEARCHLIGHT (Nev.) Sept. 4.—Your correspondent this week visited the well-known Rich Hill property at Nob Hill. In the party was a reputable mining engineer, whose general opinion coincided with all who recently have been shown, namely, that according to appearances and assuming the correctness of published assays—which no one has reason to question—the showing is extraordinary both for richness and quantity. The tunnel, probably 300 feet in length, except for a short distance at the entrance, is practically all in ore. It is a sulphide, remarkably uniform in coloring and texture, also in values in the mass. The company is building an oil-burning smelter which will be blown in about November 1. The material is all at the site, situated a half mile below Nelson, and two miles from the mine.

Two winzes are being sunk, and in the most forward there is a varying pay streak, up to several inches in width, that assays around $2000 to the ton. The general ore from this winz is dumped separately and two assays taken the other day, across all gave, respectively, $142 and $184. Of still greater importance is a statement from one of the higher officials of the company that, for the past three months all of the ore has averaged better than $30. This is of added force when it is understood that the ore is ideal for concentrating, going according to high authority, twenty or thirty to one.

MINING MINISTER.

A visit to the Mizpah, operated by the miner-preacher, A. K. Wright, and situated one mile south of Rich Hill, is equally inspiring. Here the best class of development is going on and the best kind of results being obtained. Quantities of the same fine-grained, grayish sulphide is being obtained. There have been hair-raising assays, such as $50 and $100, across ten feet, at the 100-foot level. But, for the whole body $15 is claimed and this, if the ore is continuous, as there is every reason to expect, will make a great mine. The 200-foot level has just been reached where it was planned to crosscut for the ore, from the vertical shaft, but here a blind lead has been tapped that is improving with each set of shots.

Between the Mizpah and Rich Hill are such famous old chloride producers as the Sphinx, Silver Legion and Uncle Sam groups. Adjoining are the Mineral Farm, Combination and Silver legion.

There is the best of authority for believing that the heart of Nob Hill—two miles square—will soon be one of the great sulphide camps of the entire country. This is based on the number of high-class showings in a dozen closely-connected properties. The chloriders took out their fortunes forty years back, and at depths extending to sixty feet, leaving the homely sulphides that were of no use to anybody at the time. The rank and file of mine investors do not enthuse over base ore; the real mine backers said "get depth." The Rich Hill was bought some nine months ago for $7500. It has gained some depth and there is not a dollar of its stock now for sale.

SILVER LEGION IDLE.

The Silver Legion, one of the pioneers, is idle. Its scattered stockholders cannot understand why, with a 150-foot drift on the 100 level that averages $23 and up, there should be any call for more money. But concentrators or smelters on the ground are a necessity, and these are coming.

Wright's Mizpah was bought about the same time as the above, for the same price. Its 200 feet of shaft has made it easily worth big money. This, too, is a close company, with nothing for sale, hence there is no buncombe in their statements.

The elevation of Nob Hill is 4000 to 5000 feet. The climate is ideal. It is tributary to Los Angeles. Millions of dollars, in the aggregate, have been taken from near the surface of this and the Eldorado Cañon section, adjoining, but this was but the scratching.

SOLID BASIS.

SECOND BOOM FOR RAWHIDE.

LAST WEEK'S SHIPMENTS REACH LARGE TOTAL.

Grutt Hill Coalition Still Holds the High-Grade Stage—Mint Comes Close Second—Rawhide Mining Exchange Has Been Launched in a Hurry.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

RAWHIDE, Sept. 1.—Rawhide is again in the throes of a boom, and this time it is a real mining boom. Regular shipments are now going forward every week, and the improvements in the properties are more marked, for they have reached that stage of development where each improvement is a permanent one. The shipments for the week that has just passed were as follows:

Grutt Hill Mint, Mining and Leasing, to smelter, 42 tons, $9450; Kearns No. 2, to smelter, 48 tons, $10,800; Putnam lease, to smelter, 32 tons, $3360; Miller lease, to mill, 22 tons, $1630; Truett lease, to smelter, 20 tons, $1400; Truett lease, to mill, 18 tons, $900. Total tons, 182; total value, $27,540.

More inquiries are coming in from the outside, from the East, West, North and South, and there are more people coming here from all quarters; coming here to invest, to get what properties they may, and to buy the stocks of the properties that are being developed.

STILL THE LEADER.

The Grutt Hill Coalition still continues to be the favorite, and from the showing at the mine it will be many a day before the popular idol will be shattered, for the deeper they go in the shaft and the further into the drifts, the better is the showing, the more gold is brought to the surface. Everything in connection with the machinery is working smoothly, an extra shift has been added, and work has been resumed on the two drifts, the first round of shots in both drifts revealing the twelve-inch seam of very high-grade ore. Sinking has been resumed, and they are going to the 250-foot level, from where they will crosscut and again catch the rich ledge, which, at the present time, is averaging $600 a ton across the face of the drift.

MINT SHIPPING.

The Grutt Hill Mint, the neighbor of the Grutt Hill Coalition, sent out its regular shipment to the smelter this week, a full carload, the returns from which will come near the $10,000 mark. They are now down to the 200-foot level, and the rich streak which brought fortune to Newt Shaffer and Frank Channing and their associates, is still with them, and the rock is richer than it has been at any point in the mine. An extra force of men has been put to work, and the mine is being operated night and day.

Within a few days the crosscut at the 200-foot level of the Big Four lease of the Rawhide Mining and Leasing Company should cut the two ledges opened up at the 100. One of these is a high-grade vein and the other has developed twelve feet of ore going from $20 to $25 a ton. In the high-grade vein four feet of ore outside the rich streak goes $233 a ton.

The Regent district is showing up better all the time, there being three regular shippers there, and now the McKinley-Hawkins lease has crosscut its $300 vein at the fifty-foot level, and there has been a big strike in the Starkey lease adjoining.

STOCK EXCHANGE FORMED.

To show how things are going in the camp, no better illustration could be given than the formation of the Rawhide Mining Exchange. We had a curb association here, and it became evident that an exchange was needed. Some were in doubt as to the expediency of promoting an exchange at this time, but that question was answered by the way in which the people rallied to the new idea.

The idea was broached two weeks ago, the first meeting was held a week ago last night; last night the exchange was organized, and the directors elected. There was reason for hurry, maybe. The curb association, learning of the movement, hastened to resolve itself into an exchange, and vainly endeavored to pulla way the members of the regular exchange-to-be. At the meeting last night there was discussion as to how to proceed in getting a charter. Hugh H. Sutherland, president and general manager of the Grutt Hill Coalition, stated that he and some of his associates had foreseen the necessity of getting a charter for an exchange, and while the exchange was being formed, they had "gone and got it." The charter, he said, had come back from the Secretary of State that morning, and it was the property of the exchange free of charge, save for the expense of securing it. The charter was accepted with a whoop and a hurrah, and a vote of thanks given to the donors. Then organization went ahead with a vengeance. Before adjournment, everything had been agreed upon, save the by-laws, on which a committee is now at work, and the exchange will be running in full blast before the week to come has well entered into existence. This is the Rawhide way of doing things, and this is the way that things are to be done in this camp in the future.

VULTURE IS SOLD AGAIN.

FAMOUS OLD MINE COMMANDS HIGH FIGURES.

Electric Plant on Hassayampa River Mooted—Bulldog Will Be Reopened—Espinoza Fetches Good Price—Cananea Produces Five Million Pounds in August.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Sept. 4.—The famous old Vulture mine has been sold again to "The Vulture Mines Company." The question now is whether the mine is to be operated on its merits or for the dollars of eastern investors, as has been its unhappy history for the past ten years or so. It is told that the sale has been for $270,000, through D. J. Curry of Wickenburg, and that $500,000 more will be available for the development of the property and for a proper mechanical plant. The cash payment was $15,000. It is even suggested that the new company will install an electric-power plant on the Hassayampa River at Wickenburg and build an electric railroad to the Vulture, about fifteen miles distant, but no details are to be had concerning the character of the purchasers or their desire to work the mine rather than the pockets of eastern purchasers. It is told that there is a line of villages along the Hudson River that put several hundred thousand dollars into the hands of the men who manipulated the last Vulture company; yet little, if anything, was ever done at the mine with any of the proceeds. The mine is developed by inclined shafts to a depth of about 350 feet, with 280 feet of perpendicular depth. Great stopes in the eastern part of the property, from which millions of dollars were taken in the early days, have caved in, making the interior easy of access by trail. All the old workings have absolutely been worked out, according to miners who have tried to profit by leases, but there is a chance, and an excellent one at that, for the striking of the ore body on the dip by the sinking of a deep shaft to the northward of the useless present workings. It is believed that such a shaft will strike the ledge in a zone of redeposition, where the values would be good, and where, with modern methods of operation, large profit could be secured. Tom Farish, who held the last lease of any importance on the property, abandoned the mine as a source of ore supply, and ran through his mill the buildings of the old town of Vulture, realizing at least $20 a ton from the rock thus obtained.

Nineteen miles north of Phoenix is the property of the Arizona Gold and Copper Hill Company, better known as the Plank mine. It has been held by L. L. Plank of Phoenix for fifteen years, but is now being developed properly for the first time in its history. A considerable force of men is sinking a shaft and drifting, with the intention of shipping ore within a short time. Much of the ore taken out will run as high as 50 per cent. copper and $20 a ton in gold.

BULLDOG WILL WORK.

The old Bulldog mine at Goldfield, twenty miles east of Mesa, is to be worked again. A force of men is putting the machinery in order and pumping will be begun on the shaft as soon as repair work is completed. The mine has not been worked for years, though it has been a heavy producer of good gold ore, found in a curious form between granite walls. It is only a stone's throw from the famous Mammoth mine, from which millions in gold were taken.

It is locally believed that the Phoenix mine has been closed down for an indefinite period of time. There appears to have been disagreement between Charles P. Lockhart and G. F. Goerner, who had been managing the property. Mr. Lockhart has disappeared. The company operating this mine was at one time listed on the New York Stock board. The mine has a very large body of low-grade ore, and the question before its operators appears to be merely one of economy in extraction and milling.

The report of an exceptionally rich strike at the Twin Buttes mine in Tucson has been definitely denied by Capt. William McDermott, superintendent of the property.

Horace Pomeroy has resigned as superintendent of the King of Arizona mine and has gone to a new position in charge of the Black Hills mine at Magdalen, Mex. He has been succeeded by M. M. Mendenhall.

ESPINOZA SOLD.

The Espinoza mine, considered one of the best in Pima county, has been sold by Capt. Roberts and associates to a New York company, represented by James A. Hammond of New York a lawyer who has been in Tucson for some time. The price said to have been received is $125,000 cash.

A large deposit of very desirable sulphide ore, sixteen feet wide, has been cut on the 1100-foot level of the Gem shaft of the Globe Consolidated Company near Globe. Sulphur and iron together constitute over half the mineral constituents of the ore, rendering it extremely desirable for smelting, though it carries less than 3 per cent. copper.

The sale has just been completed in the Pilares district, near Nacozari, of 243 pertenencias, lying very near the famous Pilares mine of the Moctezuma company, originally known as the Caridad. The purchaser is the Harris Copper Company, an Arizona corporation with English capital, represented by Fritz Werner of Los Angeles. The price paid is not given, though the purchasing company has incorporated for $5,000,000. The sale was made by Frank Watts of the Nacozari district and A. J. Ackerman of Opurto, Sonora.

Ore that runs $1 a pound without sorting, with much that runs 200 to 500 ounces of silver to the ton, is being hoisted from the Noche Buena mine in Ures mining district, Sonora.

A bond on the Etta mine, fifteen miles south of Jerome, has just been transferred by A. J. Doran and associates to H. H. Keays and Richard J. Lynch. The mine has a production record of $200,000 in gold, though opened only to the depth of 250 feet. It is to be developed deeper and equipped with heavy hoisting machinery and a large sum of money will be spent in repairs needed after a late cloudburst, which carried away much of the machinery, a large portion of the ore dump and all of the mining timber and cord wood on hand.

Three tons of gold ore from Bill Williams Fork district has been shipped to El Paso for reduction. The ore is valued at $1700 to the ton. It comes from the Rogers Brothers' mine near the Old Rawhide mine, where a silver strike caused great excitement about 1872. The last strike was made in a vein hardly twelve inches wide.

TOM REED'S BRICK.

Gold bullion worth $40,000 was the result of a thirteen days' run of the ten-stamp mill of the Tom Reed mine near Kingman, Mohave county, much of the ore running more than $100 to the ton. In June the mill produced $15,000; in July, $34,000, and the first half of August, $40,000.

Most hopeful interest is being taken in Tucson in the reorganization plans announced by Col. Epes Randolph, concerning the Llanos de Oro Mining and Milling Company. A large amount of stock in the ill-fated company is held in Tucson. Indeed scores of railroad men throughout the Southwest are holding certificates, which they once imagined, would make them independently rich. Col. Randolph will be assisted in every way possible by the Arizona stockholders, in his proposed rehabilitation of the company.

FOUR MILLION POUNDS.

Greene-Cananea's production for the month of August was about 4,000,000 pounds of copper, most of the ore coming from the Puerto-citos, Elisa and Cananea-Duluth mines of the company. Most of the ore formerly came from the Capote, which now is understood to be deep under water, which had been turned in to stifle fire in the lower sulphide stopes. It is understood that the company is preparing to run the old concentrator tailings through the reverberatory furnace.

E. A. Clark and John Scanlon have just received $67,500 from the Calumet and Arizona Company, as part payment on their copper mines in Parker Cañon, ten miles from Mammoth. They have held the property for twenty-seven years.

CENTRAL REORGANIZED.

There has been a reorganization of the Central Mining and Development Company, which has been operating the Two Queens' mine near Winkelman. This mine was very extensively exploited by flamboyant advertising in the eastern press, but despite this, it is said to have some real value. The management states that a considerable sum realized from the sale of stock was lost in a Kansas City bank failure. Irvin Jordon of Kansas City, who has been elected president and treasurer, states that the mine is to be worked on very different lines, and is to be put into the hands of an experienced miner. Very little has been doing on the property for several months.

Prospecting in the workings of the Old Guard mine at Tombstone has developed the presence of a large body of black manganese ore, running high in silver. So there is a probability that the old mine will be worked again, following the example that has been set by the Tombstone Consolidated Mines Company.

Near Parker, in Northern Yuma county, in the Dunkirk mine, at the depth of eighty-four feet, ore is being taken out running 3 per cent. in copper and $76 to the ton in gold.

A sale for $50,000 has just been negotiated on the McNeill-Wilkett group of five claims, southwest of the Vulture mine. The property carries high values in silver and lead.

BLOOMS OF THE DESERT.

ORANGE BLOSSOM DISTRICT GIVES GOLDEN PROMISE.

Extension Mill Already in Operation—Twenty-stamp Plant of Premier Mine About Completed—Other Properties Proceed With Development—Prospecting Move Due.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

BAGDAD (Cal.) Sept. 3.—With the approach of cool weather, it is the consensus of opinion in this part of the country, that there will be much activity in the Orange Blossom mining district, located around Bagdad, Cal., on the Santa Fé, in San Bernardino county, 218 miles east of Los Angeles, and that capital will be attracted to the district.

We have two well-developed properties, which have long ago passed the prospect stage, viz., the Orange Blossom and the Orange Blossom Extension. The former has about 3000 feet of underground work, all of which exposes large bodies of ore of a good, free-milling grade, and some of it exceptionally high grade, as is evidenced by the assays, which range from $10 to $1500 per ton in gold. Development work consists of a shaft 535 feet in depth, and drifts and crosscuts of approximately 2500 feet. The ore is a gold-copper quartz, with gold largely predominating. The ledges are well defined, and the vein has gradually widened from seven feet on the surface to twenty-four feet on the 400-foot level. The company has sufficient ore blocked out in the mine, and on the dumps to operate a twenty-stamp mill for several years at least, and there is no evidence that the ledge does not continue with depth. It may be traced on the surface for the full length of three claims, or approximately 5000 feet.

Last February the company let a contract to the Tracy Engineering Company of New York (now the Blythe-Tracy Company of Los Angeles) for the erection of a twenty-stamp mill and concentrating plant at the mine and a 200-horse-power electric-power plant at Bagdad station to operate the mill and the mine, the mill and power plant being connected with a three-phase transmission line. The plant has been completed, with the exception of installing the engine, which is expected at any time. The mill will have a capacity of about eighty tons daily, and is the finest plant of its size ever California. The company put in additional stamps next year or two. "Chicago Jewel" Gas Stove

The Key to Economy

The Chicago Jewel Gas Range is the most economical the world has ever known. It saves labor and gas. It does away with kitchen drudgery, no coal to carry, no ashes to sift, no slow ovens, no failures in cooking. It is the easiest to clean—all Chicago Jewel Gas Ranges are finished in a dull, dead black. The air regulator allows a maximum of oxygen to be consumed, thus saving gas expense. All Chicago Jewel Ranges are teed by us to give entire satisfaction. We will install one in your home. If you it after thirty days, your money will be refunded. We urge you to consider the of guarantee when you buy your Range.

GEOGRAPHICAL POSITION.

Parker is the point on the Colorado where the railroad crosses to California. The great bridge is nearing completion. It is about 100 miles north of Yuma, where the Southern Pacific crosses the river, and about seventy miles south of the Needles where the main line of the Santa Fé crosses. The name of the new line is the Arizona and California Railroad, but it belongs to the Santa Fé system—which fact assures it all terminal advantages on the Coast. Parker (both sides of the river) is on the Indian reservation, consequently no town is possible there till the government takes the matter in hand. When the line is finished westward to its connection with the main stem, passengers from Los Angeles can take the train in the evening and be in Bouse in the morning. That will makes it the handiest of all big mining camps to Los Angeles and the easiest to do business in.

LOS ANGELES HAS CALL.

Los Angeles operators appear to be alive and alert to this fact, for already they have thrown their hooks into many of the best things in this field and one may say it belongs to Los Angeles. Such well-known mining men of the city as J. C. Denton, formerly operating in Colorado, Nevada and Sonora; G. M. Ottis, formerly a heavy operator in the Bullfrog country, and the man who sold the big Skidoo mine to Bob Montgomery; Russ Avery of Avery & French, lawyers; F. J. Johnson, Col. J. Stanley Jones (Ocean Park,) who made a big fortune operating in Cripple Creek, and his brother, Judge Albert Jones, formerly of Aspen, Colo. (both old Leadville operators;) C. A. Markwell, one of the millionaire owners of the great Hercules mine of the Coeur d'Alene; James A. Ottis, formerly operating in Goldfield and Tonopah; S. T. Godbe, mining engineer and economic geologist; Henry Mitchell, E. D. Elson, T. J. Carrigan and George Mitchell, an old and experienced operators in Arizona and Mexico; Sam E. Vermilyea, a Goldfield and Manhattan operator, who pulled a bonanza fortune out of those two Nevada camps and settled down in a beautiful home in Los Angeles to enjoy it. After a month's study of the Bouse field, he has lately bought a large interest with J. C. Denton in forty-five claims that cover some of the best ground in Bouse camp and is throwing in money to rush development in the rushing Nevada style.

All the above are well known Los Angeles people, but they are not half of the Los Angeles people already interested in this great new copper field that will soon be within twelve hours of the city, and the active development of which will call for the establishment of a big smelting plant somewhere along the southern coast as soon as the railroad is finished.

THE TOWN OF BOUSE.

Bouse is twenty-six miles east of Parker, and a broad, semi-arid desert stretches between. That desert is an ancient seabottom, and in the yesterday of geological time constituted an arm of the Gulf of California.

The town of Bouse lies on the railroad near the north end of the great Plumosa Range, and just where the broad Plumosa wash from the south, fifty miles long, joins the broad Butler wash from the east, ninety miles long. These "washes" drain broad synclinal valleys of the same names. After long and heavy rains, which occasionally occur, both carry torrential surface streams, but at all times they carry an underground current of large volume—an inexhaustible supply—a little below the surface.

Bouse, still a small place, contains a quite unusually respectable and comfortable hotel for a new camp. It possesses also two mercantile companies that have erected substantial and commodious buildings of their own and carry large stocks to supply the outlying camps for fifty miles around. There are a few substantial residences and the usual array of saloons, corrals, livery stables and blacksmith shops. It is not a big place yet, but it is permanent, and it is bound to grow as the mines are developed.

EARLY HISTORY.

The water so abundant and so close to the surface made Bouse the Mecca of that great north Yuma county desert region in the early days of Arizona's history (1857 to 1867) when all mails and supplies for the Territory came around to the Gulf from San Francisco by steamer, thence up the Colorado by river boat to old La Paz or Ehrenburg and thence by a government camel train (a forgotten episode of western history) to Prescott, the capital, and the various flourishing dry placer and lode camps lying between the Colorado River and the Bradshaw Mountains, 120 miles to the eastward. The miners and the freighters and the government officers hurrying across the hot desert in those days all saw Bouse's Well and drank of its waters and filled their vessels at its curb while the weary camels sprawled about.

There was a little placering nearby, but it was all "dry washing," and two small, old arastras near the wells attest some early efforts to work the gold lodes. The region is all mineralized, but just around Bouse copper is the principal metal—copper carrying gold, and often running quite high in gold, not a combination that can be worked in an arastra.

ITS MINERALOGY.

It is primarily a copper camp and the evidences of copper mineralization over the whole field are numerous and at several widely separated points very strong, but it was originally prospected as a gold camp, and at the surface the gold values in many cases predominate, the copper having leached. But in all cases the ore runs high in gold, while in a few, free gold, visible to the eye, is the only value contained at the surface. The gold has in some cases exceeded $100 the ton, but the average will probably not exceed ten or twelve dollars. The surface rock being limestone the copper, of course, is in the carbonate condition mainly, and the average tenor of the ore is high. Any competent judge of copper ground would pronounce the indications for large ore bodies at reasonable depth very strong throughout the camp. They are immensely [illegible] at some points.

There is a great development of specular iron (black hematite) all over the camp. Massive bodies of it have developed in all the fault and shrinkage planes and contortted bunches of it occur in the limestones by replacement. There is some evidence, but as yet rather incomplete, that the same solution that brought this iron to the surface brought also the copper with it. The camp is rich in copper; it is also enormously rich in this specular hematite. Theoretically both [illegible] derived from their yellow sulphides at depth reduced to an aqueous solution. Both these yellow sulphides commonly occur together and in nearly all secondary copper deposits the evidence is clear that both metals were deposited from the same solution. In this field both metals were unquestionably brought from the depths in solution—but whether in the same solution or not, is the problem.

I think the geology of the camp is probably extremely simple fundamentally, but, as usual, faulting and erosion have masked and confused it just around the mines. I do not doubt, however, that it can be very readily studied out on the flanks of the Plumosa range just south of the camp and I shall present the geological study in my next paper. For the present I will only remark that the surface rock is limestone. This is intruded and penetrated by stocks, dikes and intercalated beds of different eruptives which for the greater part are of a medium character between the acid and basic extremes.

The camp is still in the prospect stage and the developments are yet too superficial to enable the mining geologist to determine which eruptive most influenced the mineralization of the field. I am myself most anxious to make the geological and mineralogical study of the field because I fancy the Plumosa range will prove to be a geological type of the ranges of the region, but a mine geologist is bound to think twice before he launches upon a scheme of field study on the bald flanks of one of these desert ranges in midsummer with the sun beating down on his back with the force of a red-hot pile driver. Solomon, or whoever it was, that said there's time for all things, would not have suggested midsummer as the time to make a geological study of one of these desert ranges in the greater Parker country. But I shall presently give The Times a paper on the geology and mineralogy of this great, young Bouse camp, and later of the surrounding camps and of the ranges on the California side of the river, all of which are part of the great, new "Parker country," the biggest and richest mineral field in the United States still remaining unprospected.

FITZ-MAC.

MINES AND MEN.

BY SIDNEY NORMAN.

Mining Editor of The Times.

The Truth About Yukon Gold.

T. A. Rickard, of the Mining & Scientific Press, and one of the most fully equipped technical mining men of the day, has been making a thorough investigation of Lawson's Yukon Gold and is now giving the results in serial form. It is evident that he sympathizes thoroughly with the efforts of those practical men who are trying to rescue gold from the northern field and he is of the opinion that, apart from the stock feature of the matter, they are entitled to show what they can do without more adverse criticism. Seven dredges will be at work before the close of the present season, a full year's run covering about five months with the aid of the artificial thawing that is part of the work. What people would like to know is whether or not the stock of Yukon Gold is worth the money the widows and orphans paid for it as a direct result of Lawson's frienzied appeal. There never has been much doubt about the wealth in the ground if it could be extracted. No doubt this information will come in later installments of the serial and will help stockholders to bear with equanimity the loss of nearly fifty per cent. of their investment.

Impresario to Magnate.

In San Francisco mining gossip of the week I noticed that one Cal Brougher had got under the Belmont market and was buying large blocks of this Tonopah security for his own account. He was also quoted as saying that developments at the 1100-foot level would soon result in the opening up of a large body of good ore. The name is not a common one and carried me back to the wild and woolly days preceding the great fire in Spokane, when a Cal Brougher was the owner of the Bella Union Variety Theater on Main street at a time when things were wide open and when these dens brought in streams of useful, if tainted, gold. A wave of morality overtook the little town soon afterwards, and, among others, the Bella Union, with its painted women and discordant band, passed into the realm of has-been. Since then I have lost track of Brougher, but understand that he journeyed with other gold-seekers to Tonopah in the first days of the excitement and made a fortune from successful leases on the great Mizpah mine. I heard of him once in those days, when I approached to within thirty miles of Tonopah myself and then turned tail with the one idea of again scenting the pungent pines of the great Northwest. But Cal is evidently a magnate now and the mining world hangs upon his word with the same respect previously accorded to it by his corypheés in the old, stuffy den of the early days. It all goes to show what changes take place in this western world of ours, and since an impresario has become a magnate, there is yet hope that a first-class millionaire may be made out of an indifferent journalist. Cal's success seems to suggest that lightning may strike almost anywhere.

Recognition Is Welcome.

The announcement that a local bank of primary standing would inaugurate a policy of recognition of standard mining stocks as legitimate collateral on call loans up to 40 per cent. of their market value, is really the most cheering news in the local mining world of the past six months and is fraught with the utmost importance to the legitimate mining business. The new regime is really due to the influence of one of Nevada's fortunate argonauts, who, after digging a large fortune from the ground, has removed here to make his permanent home and who has not yet forgotten that all mines are not merely holes in the ground owned by liars and that all mining men are not necessarily disciples of Ananias. The exact magnitude of the debt which the industry owes to him can only be gauged correctly by the local broker who has struggled along in an effort to do business against the thinly-veiled suspicions of the financial world. It really seems as if the local banking fraternity had something to learn regarding the true value of mining securities and, at the risk of indictment for high treason, I should like to tell a little story which emphasizes my point. A well-known man in this city, whose family has been connected for many years with the Homestake mine, the greatest gold producer in the world, wished to borrow a few thousand dollars some months ago and approached a local bank with the abject mien which is usual in such cases. He proffered a generous block of Homestake as collateral and apologetically offered, at the same time, bonds of Pittsburgh Gas which had been delinquent in interest for at least three years. The banker made the loan and selected the gas bonds as collateral. As a matter of fact, Homestake stock is recognized as gilt-edged collateral for up to 90 per cent. of the market in any bank of the Middle West.

Still Running.

Those Tonopah and Goldfield pioneers who remember the spectacularly meteoric and gilded way of John McKane (and most of them do) will be interested to learn that he still is fired with an unquenchable ambition—this time to represent downtrodden people—and is now running for the British Parliament as candidate from Dumfriesshire, the bailiwick of Andrew Carnegie, laird of Skiboo and author of that screaming jest about the unforgiveable sin of a man dying rich. McKane is said to have the support of his "hoot-mon" compatriot and, after all, may realize his ambition.

When I first knew McKane he was running for the Mayoralty of Rossland, B. C. That was in the boom days of that northern ice carnival city, just after the great Le Roi mine had been sold to the British company that now owns it and before the promoter, Whittaker Wright, had committed suicide in the Law Courts of London.

Mac did not run well in those days and I well remember that he was burried under about twenty feet of ice-cold votes. Soon afterward he departed for the south and subsequently landed on both feet as the representative of Charlie Schwab in the Nevada fields. It is said he invested $6,000,000 derived from that source and made a cool million for himself. That looks like a fairy good average for Mac.

By losing the race for the Mayoraty of Rossland McKane won a cool million for himsef and undisputed place in the Hall of Fame with the Coal Oil Johnnies, Gold Dust Arthurs and Death Valley Scotties of the day. Had he won he might now be opening bazaars and attending pink teas as the official head of now-sleepy Rossland, or playing ping pong with the younger sons who are banished to the Le Roi in untold numbers each year by their British papas who are also stockholders of the company. Instead of that, McKane has earned lasting distinction as the man who paid $2.50 for a hack to cross the street from the old Palace Hotel in San Francisco; who tipped bootblacks with $10 bills, and who is now knocking on the somber doors of the staid old British House of Commons with a battering ram of Tonopah gold.

Clouds Are Lifting.

He who runs may read, and no matter how fast one runs nowadays or how little he reads he cannot help noticing that every sign points to a sharp and sustained improvement in the mining industry in this the greatest mining territory on the continent. The uplift seems to include all kinds of property, from the gold producers, always popular, to lead, silver and copper mines. Silver is, perhaps, a litttle less sought after than the others for the moment, but signs are not wanting that even the now despised white metal, selling at the lowest price in five years and within four points of the lowest on record, will join in the general strengthening of the metal market before the winter has passed.

Looking around us it will be noticed that Arizona has practically returned to a normal basis so far as the old producers are concerned, while several deals made within the past two weeks give evidence of a general awakening to the Territory's unparalleled richness. The Calumet and Arizona is about to increase its product twofold, the Ray Consolidated has made arrangements for sufficient capital to permit of development upon a gigantic scale; the Mascot at Dos Cabezos is closing similar arrangements while, just across the Mexican line, the great Cananea is forging to the front under a new régime which insures the manufacture of copper at a low figure.

Emerging triumphant from a blighting period of disaffection, caused by the domination of criminal labor organizations, Goldfield is again forcing her claims upon the speculative world and there is little reason to doubt that the coming winter will be one of the best in her history and but a forerunner of many similar years to come. At the present time the production is well over $200,000 a week, while the new mills of the Florence and Consolidated will augment those figures very considerably before the present year passes over the horizon of time.

Rawhide, too, after a period of post-boom neglect, is again arrogating to itself a share of the mining spotlight and, if half the stories of its richness are true, there will be another movement in that direction equaled only by the first mad rush. In spite of serious setbacks the Bullfrog district is still maintaining a fair production record and there is reason to hope that the official reports condemnatory of the leading mine, the Montgomery and Shoshone, were at least premature. The Tecoba mines are taking advantage of the satisfactory price of lead and have reopened with a large force, while all the other prominent camps of merit are returning to the normal level which prevailed before the panic of last fall.

Altogether the outlook is one which should satisfy the most exacting optimist and there is no reason why Los Angeles should not benefit from the coming revival to a greater extent than during any former phase of her Alladin-like rise to metropolitan power.

Parental Economics.

Two prominent Wall street brokers, while at luncheon one day last week, indulged in a series of recriminations about the tendencies of each to refrain from spending money. One said: "I don't blame you for being close. It is in the family. Why, I remember your father when he ran a grocery store. He was so close that if a fly settled in the sugar barrel he used to catch the fly, dust its feet off with a broom, and let it go."

"So?" said the other. "I remember when your father was a farmer and raised bees. He made those bees work hard all day, and, not satisfied with that, he crossed them with lightning bugs and made them work nights."

"That's right," said the first, good-humoredly. "Father was a thrifty chap. I recall when he crossed strawberry plants with milkweed and got strawberries and cream."—[What-to-Eat.

His Wife's Disposition.

At the time of the Cherry Creek flood, which played havoc with the then struggling village of Denver, upon the outskirts of the settlement lived, in a cabin, an old character known as Beaver Bill, and his wife. The freshet carried away everything, save Bill himself, upon the premises, including his spouse. The loss of her seemed to impress Beaver Bill less than the loss of other things; but a volunteer party worked valiantly to find her for him.

At last, wet and weary, they must fain report to him failure.

"Where'd ye search?" he demanded.

"All the way downstream for two miles, Bill," they asserted.

"Oh, hell" he drawled, disgusted. "You want to do your searchin' upstream. She's too damned contrary ever to float down."—[Bohemian.

Set His Own Dislocated Neck.

Setting his own partly dislocated neck before the strain upon the spinal cord could result fatally, Edward Brooks, a farmer, near Paradise, Pa., will probably recover.

Mr. Brooks was alone, picking cherries, when he fell out of the tree, a distance of twelve feet. He struck upon the side of his head, and when he recovered consciousness realized the serious nature of his injury. Calling for help, he adjusted the vertebrae with his own hands before he was carried to the house

CHAPTER XVIII.

It is, on the whole, a merciful provision of nature that "custom stales;" for if it limits our joys, it equally minimizes our griefs. A cannon, fired near our beds, makes us jump out of them, hair on end with consternation; but after a few mornings it does not even waken us. Yes, we should really be thankful that our nerves can get tired. Fabian Dare was very thankful.

That first morning, when he awoke at Oxford after a night of dreams, and saw something in his face which made him smash the mirror, seemed so unbearable that he only did not kill himself because he thought he was going to die. There were moments when he believed himself dead, and that the soul he had bartered was in some torture chamber, already tasting the second death. He had read of nothing in all Dante's Inferno which compared with the poignant anguish of that day.

He could not help connecting his terrible experiences with Abdul von Tarsenheim, though he was utterly in the dark as to what that sombre being had done to him. He read every work he could get hold of which bore on the subject of possession by devils; there were many references to it in the Bible itself. He read medieval works, by monkish authors, about men who had made bargains with powers of darkness, and in them saw a ray of light, for even in such cases the church had sometimes intervened to cheat the devil of his due.

When he felt he could bear life no more, and must kill himself, he was confronted by such awful possibilities that he knew he would rather face any life than pass through the gates of terror. But at last his tortured, tired nerves refused to carry any more messages, and he fell asleep. He had not dared to write in his diary that day. He knew he would have written words which, if read, would send him to an insane asylum, if, indeed, they did not whirl him away in a brainstorm which would never end.

Abdul von Tarsenheim's devilish cunning had made no mistake in selecting his man. Of all the broken men he had watched, in their places of assembly, in Fabian Dare alone he had seen the look of race, the sporting blood which will fight a losing fight, the finely-tempered bit of steel which can be bent in two and spring back. With commoner clay to work on the operation would have failed. And it was to a tremendous fight that Fabian nerved himself. Temptations, such as no man had known before, assailed him; and, what was worse, the delusion that he had yielded to them was often on the point of conquering, so accusingly would his conscience call to him. There was one temptation he knew he would never resist. When he met the man in the motor mask he would kill him. He would torture him, and extract the secret of the operation, then he would kill him. Von Tarsenheim he regarded as a devil, who could not be killed. Every day he began his diary with the words, "I must not grow morbid, or I shall lose the fight."

The feeling that his personality did not fit him irritated him, as clothes they dislike irritate children. He worked hard for his divinity examination; he had much lost time to make up. His sense of humor, which went far to save him in those days, was often touched by the lectures he heard on the nature of sin, and he used to wonder what the harmless old lecturers, who had spent their sheltered lives in cloistered security, would say if they could look into his mind and see the visions of sin which were recorded there—the echoes of the life of Vandraken, the accusing faces and imploring hands of the young girls offered up by that high priestess, the Cobra, on the altars of his carefully encouraged depravity.

But he kept his knowledge to himself, and was duly ordained a clergyman.

Something in his face had caused the bishop to look at him curiously, and ask him if he was sure he had a vocation; if he felt strong enough. And he had asked the bishop whether to have resisted such temptations as had assailed no man before did not make him more fit than the untried, untempted youths who had gone up with him. And the bishop looked at the intellectual, but, to his eyes, dissipated, face, and thought to himself, "That young man will be either a disgrace to the church or a great preacher."

The Donoyle chaplaincy had been founded by an ancester of the family two hundred years before, and the maintenance of a chaplain to conduct services in the chapel of the castle was an act of compulsory virtue entailed by the ownership of the estates. The post appealed to Fabian because it was in Ireland, in the country, and offered the only means of escape from being a curate. Also, it was not far away from a town where there was a large church, in which he would occasionally be allowed to preach.

Fabian's Irish blood revelled in the Irish atmosphere for the first time. The scenery awoke his poet's soul to rapture, and helped his tortured nerves to bear their burden.

Looking out of the window of his study, in the little house in the park, he gazed on a range of violet-hued mountains, from whose lap fell a wooded glen, a river of foliage winding down, mile after mile, to the river itself, disclosing in its last bend a mountain torrent overcoming the last obstacles of moss-grown rocks in an effort to reach the great stream which would bear it to the sea.

"What is this atmosphere," he confided to his diary, "which seems sacred to the south of Ireland? It is not mist of fog, nor haze of heat, but some strange breath of mystery, which softens and idealizes all it touches. Perhaps it is the breath of the fairies, whose presence the dear, delightful peasants seem to feel all about them. Has the landscape been dipped in an ocean of melted opals? For mountains, fields and woods, all seem to be dripping with a dew of liquid gems. It is my true environment, and in it I shall win—I shall win!"

CHAPTER XIX.

Lady Donoyle was quite satisfied in her choice of a chaplain. She was talking about him to her daughter one Sunday, at luncheon, about three months after his arrival at the castle.

"Do you know, Kitty," she observed, using an American expression which she had recently got hold of, "that young man is the real thing in chaplains. I am beginning to be worried. I am afraid those sermons of his may make me see the error of my ways."

"He has a wonderful voice," assented Lady Kitty. "It would be impossible not to listen to it, and yet one can't help feeling a terrible note of tragedy in all he says, and the way he says it."

"He is the first parson, my dear, who ever painted Heaven in such attractive colors that I can contemplate it with equanimity. I used to feel that I would rather play bridge down below than a harp up above; but Mr. Dare's unorthodox pictures of a future life are slowly reconciling me to an eternity of bridgelessness. The man's a poet."

"Yes," answered Lady Kitty, earnestly, ignoring the light note in her mother's voice, "but it is not the triumphant guide who speaks, showing us the wonderful country he has discovered, but a lost soul, warning us away from some other country he has wandered into. How he has changed since I first met him! He was the most light-hearted of boys then."

"Well, he does look as if he had been going it a bit," murmured Lady Donoyle.

"Oh, mamma! I didn't mean that he was dissipated One oughtn't to say such things about——"

"The artistic temperament covers a multitude of sins, my dear; and really, Kitty, if a man must preach to me about my sins, I like to feel that he knows what he is talking about. That dear Mr. Strayne, over at Clonboyne, with all his earnestness, and his tragic belief in the certainty of a real hell, with real flames, and his face of a tortured saint, always impressed me as amateurish. He is not convincing."

Lady Kitty had been thinking deeply. "Of course, Mr. Dare hunts, shoots and plays games, buttons his collar in front, and does not seem to be a clergyman at all on week-days, but, some way, I can't believe he leads a dissipated life." Yet she looked troubled as she said it.

"Well, as you haven't got to marry the man, and as he is clever enough not to be found out, I am not going to worry about Mr. Dare's morals. He seems to have money of his own, or he couldn't afford to keep a hunter. One of the unappropriated beauties in the neighborhood will marry him, and it will be well. Personally, I shall be sorry when he marries. It is no end of a convenience to have a young man on the premises that one can ask to dinner at the last moment, and who doesn't slang you afterwards for sending him in with any one. Do you know, Lady Runington quite fell in love with him last week—thought he was a distinguished actor, and started a flirtation. I don't know what the woman said to him, but I thought Mr. Dare was going to leave the table. You ought to have seen her face when I told her the young man was a parson."

"I can't imagine why you have a woman like Lady Runington to stay at Donoyle. She looks like an advertisement for a beauty parlor."

"Why? Oh, because she cheats at bridge, Kitty."

"What a reason!"

"Well, you see, dear, there were three other very nice people staying in the house—I won't tell you which. I found they all cheated, so I got Lady Runington to make up a fourth, and always made them play together. They rooked one another horribly, but it was the same for all."

"I thought the way she tried to flirt with Mr. Dare was perfectly scandalous!" said Lady Kitty, flushing so imperceptibly that her mother, who was busy with a peach, failed to notice it. "Even after she knew he was a clergyman, I overheard her saying to Mrs. Ashton, 'I'd leave my happy home for him.' I believe it's one of those Americanisms you are so fond of, mamma."

"It's quite expressive enough to be one," answered her mother, getting up from the table. "What are you going to do this afternoon, dear?"

"I think—I'll go for a long walk," replied Lady Kitty, rather hesitatingly.

"What energy!" yawned Lady Donoyle; but she did not know that the walk was to be walked with Fabian Dare.

Lady Donoyle, secure in her belief that the young chaplain was not of their world, had not troubled to notice that her daughter was thrown a good deal into his society.

Fabian Dare's personality, and its effect on her, had been a great puzzle to the girl from the start. Instead of conflicting with her feeling for Vandraken, it seemed to harmonize with it. The day the millionaire had called, her sentiment about the young poet had, as she thought, sung its swan song. Then Vandraken had come, and she had felt toward him all that she had ever felt toward Dare, and much more, because to the spiritual attraction of Dare he had added a certain physical magnetism which rounded out the complete sex attraction. Now, after a year, meeting Dare again, she felt in him that same magnetic attraction, while the mysterious spiritual affinity still remained stronger than ever. She could not fail to note the change in his appearance, but it had not reached a point where it seriously detracted. He simply looked older, more material—a man of the world who had seen the many sides of it. She had not moved in a milieu of saints, and though the record of a depraved life was being gradually written on Fabian's face, it had to battle with a life of pure asceticism. Moreover, on a blank page planned to be filled with a story of lofty ideals lived out to their logical conclusion, the story of Vandraken's life was written more slowly than it would have been penned on a face of coarser clay. It was a very interesting, attractive face, in spite of the suggestion of dissipation which was only just beginning to coarsen it; clean-shaven, oval in contour, hair waving back from a high, intellectual forehead, eyes deep set and dreamy by nature, but beginning to show the effects of torment and conflict; a finely-modeled mouth, showing signs of deterioration. He had all the shyness of highly-strung natures, but the poetry and mystery in his expression, which was almost feminine, was negatived by a well-developed, athletic figure.

Lady Kitty, who found young men very scarce about Donoyle, had been unable to resist being what she called kind to the poor young man. Some people would have called it flirting; but, as Lady Kitty told herself, of course he will understand from the beginning that nothing can ever come of it, and so he won't do or think anything foolish. Therefore, she argued, it is quite safe for me to be kind to him and allow him to read me his poetry, and show him the most beautiful walks, and let him row me on the river. She further excused herself on the ground that she simply must solve the puzzle as to whether it was Vandraken she liked in Dare, or Dare in Vandraken. She never used the name love even to herself, which is the masquerading way of Western women; whereas, in the East, they veil their faces and let their souls go naked and unashamed.

On this particular Sunday the excuse Kitty made to herself was that she wanted to ask him about the sermon; so she took him for a walk along a terraced path that ran through the forest, by the side of the river.

The mere fact that they walked so long in silence, without noticing it, should have warned them that among the dappled sunshine of the autumn woods they walked on dangerour ground. Of course, it was the girl who broke the silence.

"I wish you wouldn't preach such sad sermons, Mr. Dare. It was very beautiful, but surely life is not so full of trouble as all that; and I wish—I wish you would not look at me so much when you are preaching. Why do you look at me so much?" She looked up at him as she asked, her royal-blue eyes full of other questions.

THE TINY TADS

We have secured the service of Mr. Gustave Verbeek, artist, author and creator of the Tiny Tads, now appearing in the New York Herald and Los Angeles Sunday Times. Perhaps you wonder how we did it—but we'll not tell. It is was at a very great expense, however, for we wanted the comical little fellows—wanted 'em badly.

Mr. Verbeek has promised us a series of sketches which will appear regularly on this page in our Sunday advertisement. We invite you, one and all, to notice and enjoy the frolics of the Tiny Tads.

COPYRIGHT 1907 BY TINY TADS CO N.Y.
Gustave Verbeek

The Tiny Tads of great renown
Have come to visit in our town,
And every week they will appear
Upon this space that we have here,
To do their clever little stunts
With Boojums and Umbrellaphants
And Kangaroosters and Kaboks
And strange Bazooks and Jabberwock:
And all that weird and jumbled mess
Of beasts from the Bewilderness.

You ask us why we get these Tads
To do their frolics in our ads?
Well, first of all they catch your eye,
And next our offerings you spy,
Then, just to try us once, you come—
(The rest is simple as a sum)
Once come, you'll ten times come again,
Small profits multiplied by ten,
Good deals which bring you o'er and o'er,
To help yourself and help our store.

And now, we pray you, watch this space
With pleasure written on your face,
So we may know that goodly check
Demanded by Gustave Verbeek
Has not been altogether lost—
A SMILE FROM YOU—repays our cost!

The Drama—Players, Payhouses, Gossip of the Stage.

TOPICS OF THE STAGE.

The most valuable contribution to the dramatic literature of the year is Paul Wilstach's just-completed "Life of Richard Mansfield," some extracts from the opening chapters of which appear in the September Scribner's.

Mr. Wilstach, who is well known to Los Angeles newspaper men and to many others here, from his many visits, was Mansfield's closest and most congenial associate during the last years of his active life. Mr. Mansfield trusted him with far more than business details, and in a sense he was an artistic adviser as well as tour-manager.

Mr. Wilstach has gained considerable repute as an author and has a number of successful plays.

The interesting and valuable part of his new work is its richness in hitherto unpublished anecdote, and the rare personal and intimate touch it gives to the foremost figure of the American stage in the past quarter-century.

"Richard Mansfield was born, May 24, 1857, in Berlin," says Mr. Wilstach, "whither his mother had come from her London home to sing in opera. His father was Maurice Mansfield, a wine merchant in Lime street, and his mother was Erminia Rudersdorff, celebrated prima-donna. Richard was the third of four children.

"When he was four years old his father died, and as his mother's engagements in the various operahouses of Europe precluded her giving personal attention to the children's education, he and his sister and his two brothers were sent to private school on the continent—at first to Jena, then to Yvredon in Switzerland, and finally to Bourbourg, in France. Thereafter the children separated, and Richard was sent to Derby, England.

"At Derby school he was conspicuous in Speech Day theatricals and in athletic work. After two years in the midlands, however, his impatience with routine fretted him out of endurance with further schooling, and he returned home to London and began preparations for the Indian Civil Service. At this time his mother's triumph as prima-donna of the Boston Peace Jubilee of 1872 determined her to remain and make her home in America, and Richard, ever ready for a change, joined her.

"He spent four years in Boston, during which time he made various experiments in the process of finding himself. Among the boy's friends were Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, Julia Ward Howe and Eben Jordan, the merchant. Mr. Jordan gave Richard a desk in his private office as foreign correspondence clerk, and the young man's wide acquaintance with the continental languages stood him in good stead.

"But even at this time his character had so far formed itself that he found it impossible to work for another, or to live in a home which he could not dominate. So he withdrew from his mother's house and the Jordan store to the frail independence of a career as a painter, in a room in the mansard of a boarding-house in the elegant purlieus of Beacon street. Some pittance picked up as dramatic and musical critic of the precarious Daily News helped to keep out the wolf which his own extravagance was continually coaxing to the door. But an allowance from his mother was his real support.

"In Boston he made two public appearances on the stage. The first was with the Buskin Club, a group of artistic amateurs, which he helped organize, and with them he acted Beau Farintosh in Tom Robertson's "School." The second appearance revealed him as the modest incognito behind "Vincent Crummle's Entertainment," given in Union Hall in June, 1876. Herein he gave first evidence of his mimetic cleverness in a programme which included imitations and burlesque of most of the conspicuous actors and operatic singers of the day."

And almost immediately thereafter young Mansfield returned to England, with an allowance of $100 per month from his mother. He was to study art, but the study of art was a mask for the real pursuit of the stage, and Mr. Wilstach describes his little extravagances, his inattention to the art whose doors were open for him, and his strenuous attention to the drama, which would have none of him, until, heavily in debt and with his clothes threadbare and patched, he was given a position as an actor in "German Reed's Entertainments," a polite theater which lightly side-stepped the name of theater and thereby, with its refined plays, reached successfully for the inner circle of patronage. But the young player, half-starved and extremely nervous, collapsed on the stage the night of the performance, and was discharged ignominiously.

"The night of his disastrous début," continued Mr. Wilstach, "he dragged himself home to his lodgings discouraged and disconsolate, alone, ill and penniless, but the cup of his bitterness overflowed the next morning. The American mail brought him a letter which was the sequel of a scene which must be recited.

"One day Mme. Rudersdorff stormed into George Munzig's studio. In her outstretched hand she carried the fluttering sheets of Richard's latest letter. She was superbly dramatic in her wrath, and paced the long room with the air of a tragedy queen.

"'George Munzig,' she exclaimed, in tones of trenchant irony, 'do you know what your friend is doing in London—your friend, Dick Mansfield? He is giving entertainments—he's an entertainer! He accepts week-end invitations from school friends like Lady Cardigan's son and others, and plays and sings for them, and takes five pounds for it! He's no son of mine! I'm going right down to State street and cut off every penny of his allowance!'"

And she did, and thereafter Mr. Mansfield entered his darkest period—a period which Mr. Wilstach touches simply and briefly, as it has already been a favorite topic with the "How to Succeed" writers for many years. He seldom had enough to eat—frequently nothing to eatand he worked at such odd jobbing as he could find, almost always losing a position as soon as he won it.

"Nothing in Mr. Mansfield's anecdotes," writes Mr. Wilstach, "ever equaled his recital of the night upon which he descended to the role of waiter and wore an apron. His whole 'business' was to draw a cork, but he took pains to drive that cork home before coming on the stage. When his cue came to draw the cork he tugged and tugged in vain. His face grew scarlet and perspiration dropped from his forehead. Then he handed the bottle to another waiter, who struggled with all his strength without budging the cork. Mansfield turned a deaf ear to the voices in the wings shouting for him to leave the stage. He took the bottle back again and with renewed effort finally dislodged the cork. The insignificant pop it gave after those Titanic efforts again brought down the house. His hit meant his dismissal, as usual."

But Wilstach makes Mansfield himself recount an even funner story.

"I can remember one evening in London," narrates the actor, "when I had reached the pleasant condition of having had nothing to eat all day. I had just one shilling, my last, in my pocket. I was walking along looking somewhat covetously into the pastry shops I passed, wondering how on my pittance I could dissipate the carking hunger to the best advantage. Suddenly I came upon a friend of mine, a vagabond like myself, but apparently in much better luck. He was gorgeously arrayed in all the black-and-white splendor of evening clothes. He had a dinner invitation, he explained, at Lord Cavendish's, or some other such great house; we'd go in somewhere and have something on the strength of it.

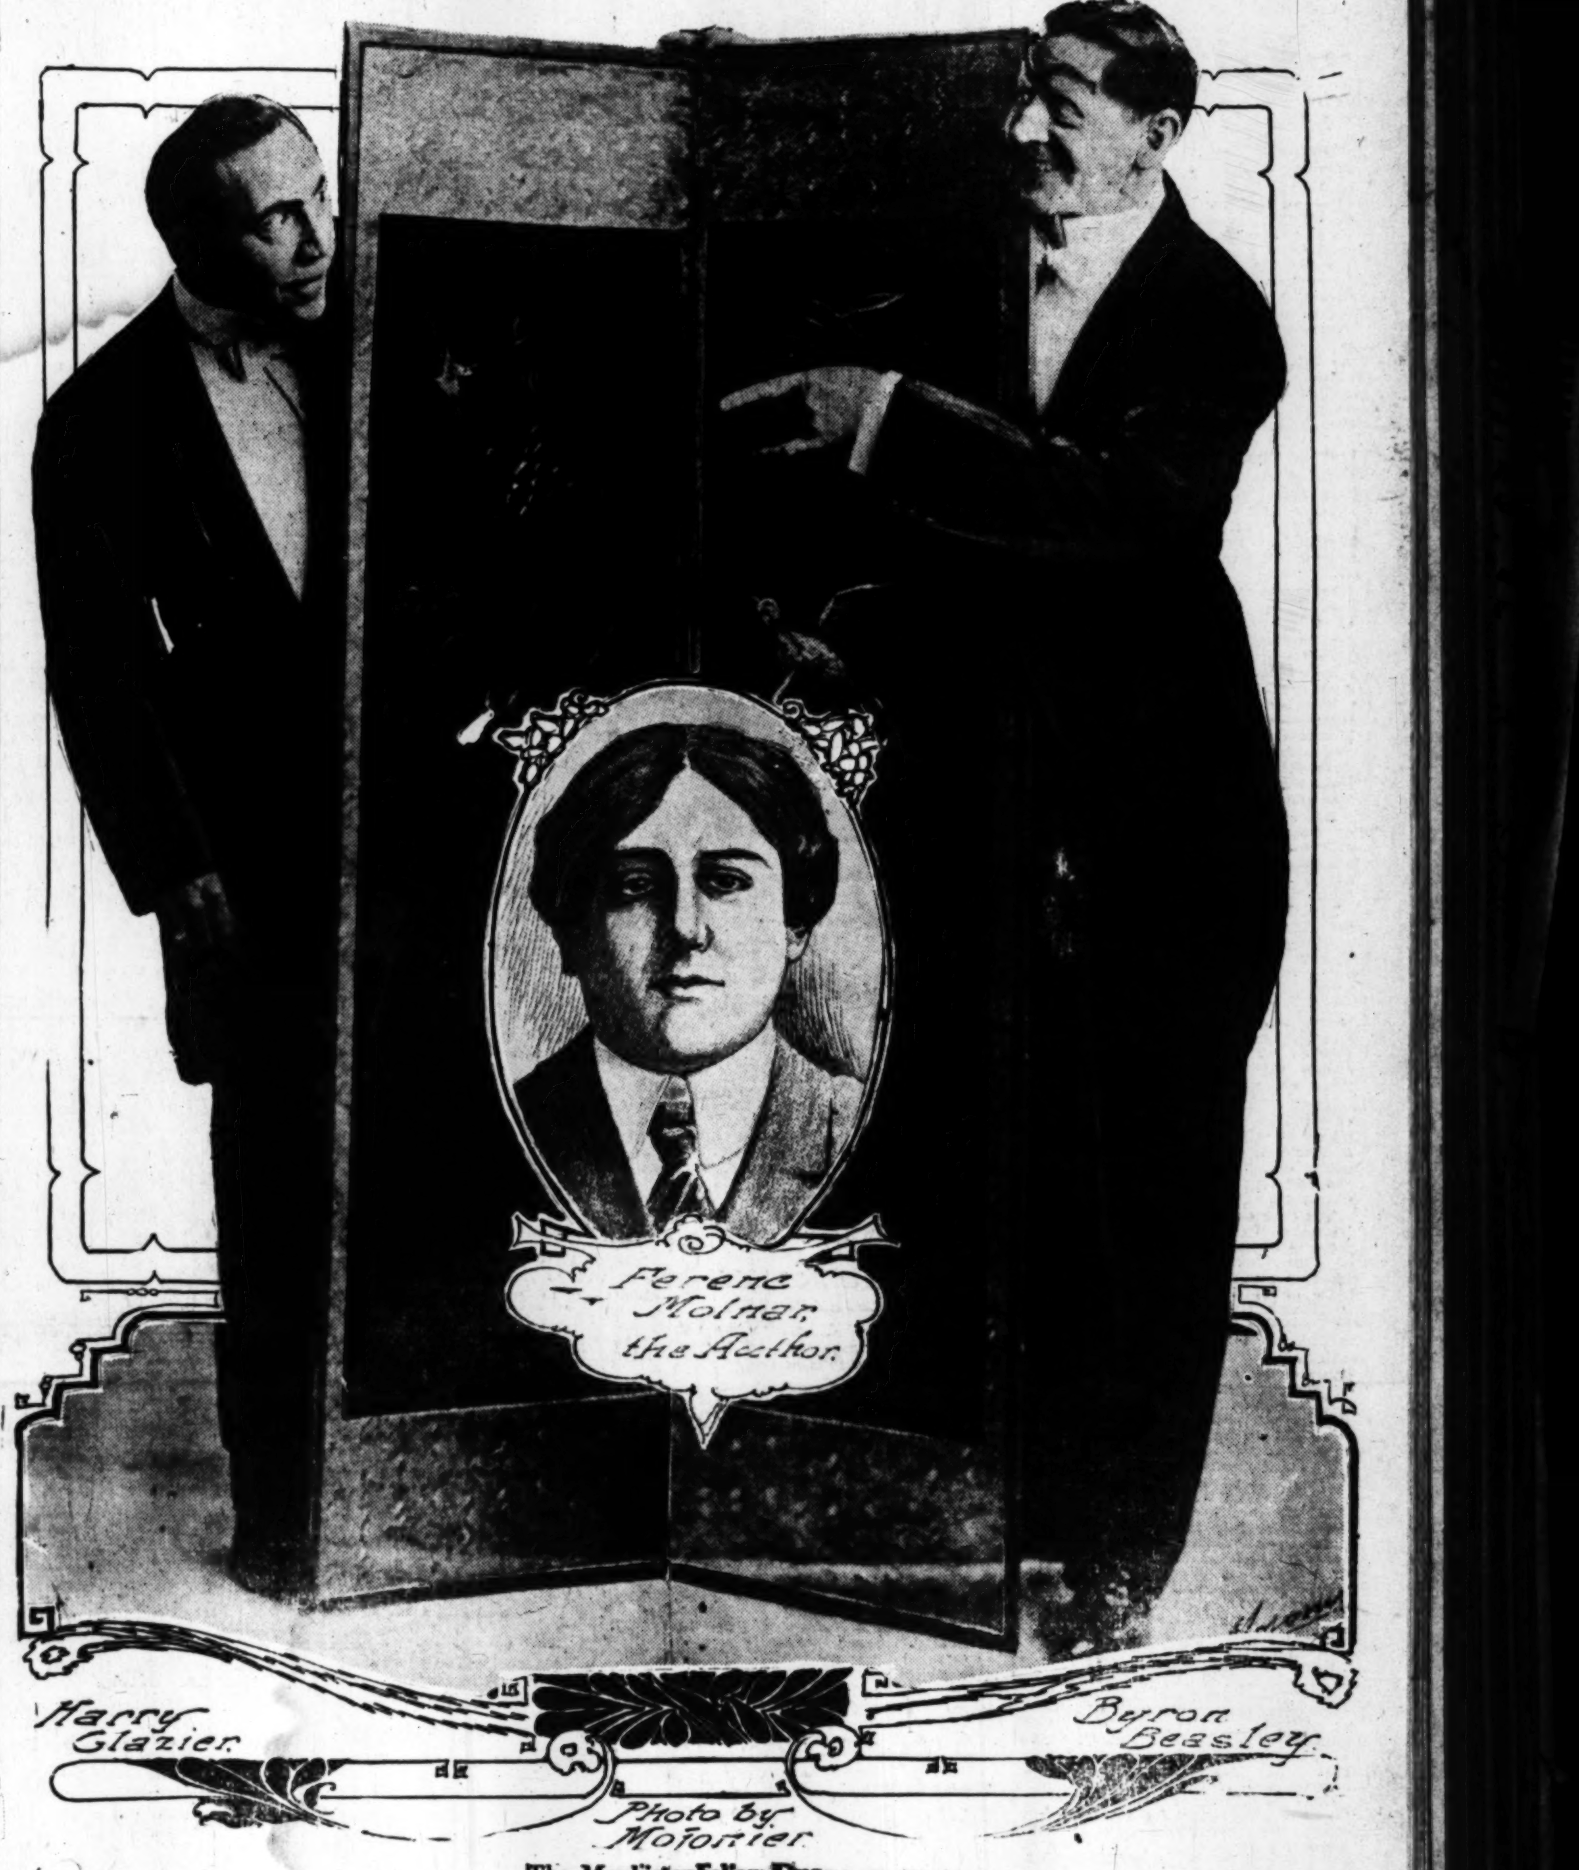
"We entered one of these Bodega places that are scattered all over London, where you get a very decent glass of champagne on draught, for sixpence. They always had a large cheese about, you know, from which you may help yourself, which is about the nearest approach England makes to the American free lunch.

"Well, we tucked into the cheese—at least I know I did—and we had our glass of champagne each. Now I don't know whether you know it or not, but there is probably not a mixture in the world that is surer to create hunger than cheese and champagne. I did not need an appetite; I had a huge one already, but after that cheese and champagne, I had a positive gnawing. I was mentally gloating over the shilling's worth of food I would go forth and feast on, when my friend, shuffling his hand nervously from pocket to pocket, turned to me and said: 'I'm awfully sorry, old man, but I seem to have left my pocketbook at home. If you happen to have a shilling about you —' and I had the satisfaction of paying out my last shilling for that hunger-raising cheese and champagne."

And so it went, dinner invitations sometimes staving off actual starvation. He finally secured a position as Sir Joseph Porter, K.C.B., in one of the first 'Pinafore' companies to go into the English provinces, and played it for a year, at a steady salary of £3 a week.

After various encounters with fate and fortune along these lines, Mansfield finally got to London, and his star was in the ascendant, though neither great fame nor great salary was accorded him in the first years of his endeavor there.

Then suddenly, after the death of his mother, he met Eben Jordan, the old Boston merchant who had befriended him, and, after an all-night talk, the man from Massachusetts persuaded the young actor of five and twenty, that his real opportunity now lay in America. And to America he sailed. That was in 1882, and his rise was rapid, and his ensuing career is a matter of well-known stage record.



The Mephistophelian Duo.

Messrs. Glazier and Beasley, who, as the Satanic hero of Ferenc Molnar's strange play, will be rivals here this week, as are Edwin Stevens and George Arliss in New York. The sketch is of the Hungarian author.

Mario Lambard will bring his grand opera company to Los Angeles and play under the local management of H. C. Wyatt, at the Mason Operahouse—probably in January.

Other attractions booked for the Mason, so far, include "The Clansman," Rose Stahl in "The Chorus Lady," Ethel Barrymore in a new play, several weeks of "The Merry Widow," John Drew in his new play, the "Red Mill," Nat Goodwin, Lillian Russell, Billie Burke in "Love Watches," Dustin Farnum in "The Squaw Man," "The Wolf," "A Stubborn Cinderella," Savage's company in "The Devil," "The Witching Hour," Richard Carle, Lew Fields in "The Girl Behind the Counter," Margaret Illington, E. H. Sothern, William Gillette and Elsie Janis.

Ference Molnar, in writing "The Devil," evidently decided that homeopathic doses of criticism on loose morality were not efficacious. He had also determined, it seems, to go to the other extreme of the story of Marguerite and Faust, by having the up-to-date Devil completely the victor in his game of ruining two souls.

Molnar's work has risque situations and broad epigrams, but they are veiled in platitudes that sparkle and epigrams as truthful—sometimes—as they are likewise bitter and satirical.

Introducing himself into the house of a wealthy merchant, the Devil attracts general attention by his elegance and ease of manner, though his biting sarcasm astonishes and bewilders the guests. His remarkable views of life and its puppets cause comment, but still his brilliancy keeps him a welcome guest.

His entry into society is made through an introduction by a young artist, Sandor Tatray, into whose studio he projects himself while Sandor is painting the portrait of Joland, wife of the rich merchant, Laszlo Vo-ross. Years before the wife had been the artist's sweetheart, but circumstances had parted them, and she had married a man much older than herself, and thoroughly wrapped up in business. The Devil, through his machinations, directs the conversation insidiously toward their old love. The artist is in love with a young heiress, and at first, in fact through the entire first two acts, they fight bravely to subdue the reawakened love, but always the Devil is at their elbows; always their resolutions and platitudes of good are stabbed with his epigrams of evil.

Jealousy is brought into play. The sweetheart is apprised of her lover's old passion, and is shown that it is reviving again. The artist is made to believe that his newer love is growing cold.

So, fight as they will, Joland and Sandor are drawn into the vortex of illegitimate love. Even their friends are turned by the Devil into thoughtless enemies, until at last Voross loses his wife, Vilma her sweatheart, and the Devil stands supreme, as from the artist's studio he watches the pair drawn to a final meeting and confession of love.

Here are some "Devilgrams:"

Any one who imagines that the Devil goes about with horns is an easy prey to him.

Love is the currency with which the Devil cheats humanity.

A wife is like a monocle—without it the eyesight is clearer.

There is but one true woman—the other fellow's wife.

When the tigress has already swallowed her man, the other man has nothing to fear.

What we lose we run after. Such is man.

Life is a treasure only when you spend it freely.

Consider how stupid it would be if every one told the truth.

THE LOCAL WEEK.

Managers Belasco and Morosco will play "The Devil," Ference Molnar's play, at their respective theaters during the coming week.

The Morosco version, which is evidently from the German, will be seen first, commencing today, with Mr. Beasley in the singular title part, Mr. Desmond as the artist, Miss Hall as the girl-wife, Miss Esmond as the model, and John Burton as the aged merchant husband.

At the Belasco these parts will be taken, in order, by Mr. Glazier, Mr. Vivian, Miss Grey, Miss Bernard and Ben Graham.

"The Devil" is, of course, the only title given to the leading character in both casts. In Belasco's adaptation the other principals are Sandor Tatray, Laszlo Voross, Joland (Mme.) Voross, Vilma and Fanny.

At the Burbank these are programmed differently, the merchant and his wife being M. and Mme. Meyer, while the sweetheart is Gretchen, and the artist's model Rosa.

Patrons of melodrama will welcome the reopening of the People's Theater, on Main street, this afternoon. The house is to shelter the Stair and Havlin shows during the coming winter.

The opening piece is "The Montana Limited." The story involves the doings of twin brothers, identical in appearance. One is a train robber; the other a law-abiding citizen. Bandits hold up the limited, and of course the wrong man is charged with the crime. All ends happily at last, of course.

One man plays both brothers, this role being intrusted to Harry P. Dewey. Next week the People's will offer May Nannary in "At the Old Cross-Roads."

"Little Robinson Crusoe," a success of Eddie Foy's a few seasons ago, is to be presented by Fischer's new company next week, witn Ben Dillon in the old Foy role. Novel scenic effects and a liberal allotment of musical interpolations are provided.

Among the numbers to be presented are "The Girls in Green," "Jungle Town," "Serenade," "Don't Take Me Home," and "Beautiful Dreams."

Heading the list of newcomers at the Orpheum this week is Franklyn Underwood and his company, including Frances Slosson and George Bloomquest, both well-remembered Los Angeles players. Their playlet is entitled "Dobbs Dilemma," and it is lively and full of merit.

Mike Bernard and Blossom Seeley are expert exponents of rag-time, which Bernard plays with dexterous zest, while Seeley supplies the vocal end of the turn.

The Tennis Trio, composed of Will Campbell and the Stock Sisters, Alma and May, do juggling of the "different" sort in a setting of wisteria.

Bolesch and Zillbauer, genuine Vienna street singers, just from Europe, appear in Bohemian attire and render original music.

The holdovers include the Military Octette, the Four Rainos, the dancing Mitchells and Wanrell and Carranza.

The Grand Operahouse musical company will revive, for the week commencing today, its biggest success, "In Gayest Manhattan." This comedy concoction contains the scene of the bathing girls, Mr. Gyblin's fine impersonation of the ancient actor, and several other good specialties.

Miss Helen Goff, well-known contralto, will take the role first filled by Edna Sydney.

The new Blackwood-Stone company's opening production, "The College Widow," has been genuinely successful—in fact, one of the most notable popular hits in the history of local stock performances.

It will be continued for one more week, when it will be withdrawn, according to positive announcement, for "The Pit." The large stage of the Auditorium should afford ample facilities for the big scenes of this play.

Director Fredericks of the Unique has another laughable skit for this week, in "The Irish-Mexican." The scene is laid in Mexico, where Hans Schlitz and his daughter have been captured by brigands. George Rehn, as Schlitz, and Billy Onslow, as Patrick Señor, an Irish-Mexican, are cast for the comedy. There will be numerous musical numbers.

James P. Lee, producer for the comedy company, promises a farce out of the ordinary, a satire on "Damon and Pythias."

During the coming week the Los Angeles Theater, which is now a part of the Sullivan-Considine circuit, will offer an entirely new vaudeville bill. T. W. Eckert and Emma Berg will present a scenic-musical phantasy, under the title of "The Land of Two Moons," the scene being laid in Mars. Armstrong and Holly will offer a satirical, humorous sketch, "The Expressman;" Selbini and Grovini will contribute an act which includes juggling, acrobatics and trick bicycle riding; Samuel Rowley, Australian monologist, will contribute some Antipodean humor, and Effie Pearson, singing soubrette, will supply the song-and-dance end of the bill.

"The Time, The Place, and The Girl," a musical comedy, said to possess some worth, and the equipment of a capable company, will commence the season at the Mason Operahouse, beginning a six-day engagement there a week from tomorrow night.

Dramagraphs.

David Warfield began his second week at Elitch's Gardens in Denver Monday night in "A Grand Army Man," eclipsing all records for attendance and box office receipts known to that city.

Eleonore de Cisneros, the Brooklyn mezzo-soprano, for two years at the Manhattan, will make a series of appearances in both Italy and Russia next season, when she will try her luck with dramatic soprano roles for the first time.

Mme. Doria, the new mezzo-soprano on Oscar Hammerstein's list for next season at the Manhattan and the Philadelphia Operahouse, has been singing at the Theater de la Monnaie, Brussels. She is a Marchesi pupil.

The title of J. M. Barrie's new play is "What Every Woman Knows." Nothing is known of its theme, except that it is a modern play in a comedy vein. Miss Maude Adams will probably appear in it in this country.

Henry Norman, who was one of the features of "Tom Jones" last season, has been engaged by the Messrs. Shubert to create the role of Dunn, the Cellar Master, in Pixley & Luder's latest opera, "The Baron of Berghoff."

Oscar Hammerstein sought a noted specialist a short time ago for an explanation of Luisa Tetrazzini's throat, and was told by him that her vocal cords are arranged differently from those in any other person he had ever examined.

The title on the manuscript of "The Fighting Hope," Blanche Bates's new play, is enclosed by a pencil drawing of a four-leaf clover. Was this emblem of good luck drawn by David Belasco or by the author of the play, William J. Hurlbut? When questioned on the point each looked at the other, smiled, but was non-committal.

Geraldine Farrar declares she would like to fashion a composite woman as follows: Physique and indomitable energy of the American woman; complexion and hair of the English woman; elegance and style of the French woman, and fidelity of affection of the German woman.

Messrs. Klaw & Erlanger have made a new contract with Messrs. McIntyre & Heath for three years, beginning September, 1909. The firm has in preparation for these comedians a musical comedy by H. A. Du Souchet, author of "My Friend From India," entitled "The Steeplechasers." Meantime arrangements have been made with the United Booking Offices for a season in vaudeville for McIntyre & Heath, beginning next month.

Robert Edeson's new play, "The Call of the North," was not a cheering success in New York last week. It is a dramatization by George Broadhurst of S. E. White's story, "Conjurers' Houses." Robert appears as a Hudson Bay trader, and looks and acts simply grand, but the piece is described as commonplace and weak.

Charles Frohman wishes to enter into the competition for a prize lately offered for whoever devises a new name for chorus girls. In place of broilers, squabs or ponies, he suggests that they be called Peter Pans, because chorus girls refuse to grow up.

"I believe I have more friends in Paris than in any other place in the world," said Nellie Melba the other day. "It was from Paris that I went out to try my fortune, and it was there that I made my home during the first fourteen years of my professional life. I am almost classed there as a French artist. It was through my influence that 'Romeo et Juliette' was given in French at Covent Garden."

During Margaret Anglin's present Sydney, Australia, season, she will play both "Zira" and "The Awakening of Helen Ritchie." The actress has rented a house in the fashionable suburb of Daring Point, and, with her sister, entertained a large American party there on the Fourth of July.

Maurice Maeterlinck is working at his home in Normandy on a new drama, "Marie Magdaleine." The subject matter of the play is not mystical, and the new work has nothing to do with dramas of dreams and legends. It is rather in the style of "Monna Vanna."

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Grismer (Phoebe Davies) have written a play which they call "Mine Out of Judea," which Brady promises to produce next spring. It has to do with the problem faced by orthodox Jews in seeking to adjust their religious observances with the social conditions of this country. Mr. Grismer explains that the play was suggested by editorial comments of the Jewish newspapers on the Stokes-Pastor marriage.

"The public is always right," says Daniel Frohman. "There you have the infallible critic. There are only a few circumstances which can prevent a sound judgment, and, although we may carp at the uncertainties and caprices of this business, the public is sane and stable in its opinions. In New York a most severe critic is faced. Nevertheless, there is a good deal of kindness in the well-dressed, sophisticated spectators in New York theaters. They exact, with the consciousness that their judgment is sound, and this sort of criticism is good for art and artists. There is always a woeful lack of good plays, just as what is good is always rare."

It would almost seem as if to become a great actress the aspirant must first discover the secret of eternal youth. At all events the great modern mistresses of the stage appear to have set old age at defiance and be determined to live forever and to preserve their youth for at least as long a period. There are two great actresses in particular whose marvelous power of maintaining their juvenescence is a never failing source of surprise to the world. They are, of course, Sara Bernhardt and Ellen Terry. It is, moreover, not merely in appearance alone, but also in the essential spirit of youth that they show that they astonish. The recent marriage of the English actress is still fresh in the minds of the public, and the fact that her husband is much younger in years does not seem so peculiar when consideration is taken of the fact that Miss Terry has obstinately refused to grow any older for more years than most people like to remember. As far as the divine Sara is concerned, it is a well-known fact that she is only 23, although a generation has passed away since she first charmed a Parisian audience with her wonderful acting and melodious voice. Mme. Bernhardt, in the latest of her farewell visits to America, was as sprightly and as vivacious as when she first visited these shores in the day when most of us were more interested in dolls and tops than in theaters.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

The Chamber of Commerce has not only recognized musicians as "desirable citizens," but it is has done more—namely, it has made the appointment of a committee for legitimate musical promotion.

Charles F. Edson is the chairman, and the other members are Harley Hamilton, James S. Slauson, Willis Booth and T. A. Gibbon.

When the time arises for the settlement of vexing disputes such as have arisen in the past few years from time to time, concerning, for instance, choral matters and the problems attaching to large musical undertakings of any sort, this committee should exercise its powers to whatever extent the situation may justify, and should prove a helpful addition to the artistic community.

The Eisteddfod Committee will meet during the coming week to arrange the programme for the musical contest proposed during the session which Welsh people hope to hold here next spring.

The newly organized Matinée Musical Club, of which Mrs. James Henry Ballagh is president and Miss Myrna Baldwin secretary, met last Thursday afternoon with Mrs. Dwight Satterlee and her daughter, Mrs. W. C. Bennett, at their home on Burlington avenue. Eighteen members were present, and an interesting programme was given.

Charles Farwell Edson has just returned from a three months' singing and studying tour in the East, most of which time was spent in New York.

Frank H. Colby has just returned from an extended eastern trip, having visited Chicago, Milwaukee, Kansas City and Denver. Mrs. Colby and their young son, Harvey, will spend a few weeks in the mountains of Northern California before returning to Los Angeles. Mr. Colby had the honor of presiding at the organs of two large Catholic cathedrals while in the East, and returns with an interesting portfolio of new music for the choir at St. Vibiana's, of which he is director.

Moore's band at Eastlake this afternoon, will be heard in a programme which will include Strauss's "Southern Roses" waltz, a selection from "Lucia;" Keler-Bela's "Tempelweihe," Tobani's potpourri of German melodies and Geises "Meditation."

The Woman's Lyric Club will resume rehearsals September 15 at Symphony Hall. J. P. Poulin and Mary L. O'Donoughue will again be director and accompanist, respectively.

THE LONDON OPERA.

Season Just Closed Has Been an Unprecedented Success, With Numerous Innovations.

Artistically and financially, the opera season just closed has been the most successful London has had for many years.

There were eighty-one performances of twenty-four works. Verdi heads the list with twenty-three performances, and Wagner and Puccini have each fifteen to their credit, leaving twenty-eight performances by eight other composers.

The opera most often played was "Traviata," seven times. Next came "Lucia," with six performances, and "Il Barbiere," also with six. Five productions of "Otello," "Rigoletto," "Madam Butterfly" and "La Boheme" were given, and "Aida" comes next in the list with four. This makes forty-three performances of eight operas.

Though there were no novelties the revivals of "I Pescatori de Perle," "Otello" and "Gli Ugonotti" might almost be put in that class, so seldom are they sung in England.

A study of the list of operas performed, says the New York Sun, shows that the repertoire has been practically fixed by the leading prima donnas, which is only another way of saying that the London public wants to hear the singers and not the works. This is certainly the case in regard to Tetrazzini, who has reintroduced to London operas which have not been included in the season's list of productions for the last few years because the British public did not want them, and would not go near them. Yet these operas were her special successes, and in them she drew crowded houses to the very end of the season.

In fact, Tetrazzini's success has been phenomenal throughout. She first sang in the off season when fashionable London was not here to judge her, and her triumph did not necessarily mean a triumph in the grand season. But she had both, as all the world knows.

Then came the return of Melba, who for many years has been the idol of the British public and the dominating force at Covent Garden Operahouse. Every one waited to see what would happen. Would Melba find her place usurped and her public following another star?

Not at all. What happened was just this: The British public divided its affections carefully between its favorites. If the line waited at the balcony doors on a Tetrazzini night from 9 in the morning till 7:30 in the evening, it did the same for Melba, and both were greeted with the same outbursts of applause. Even the press never indulged in comparisons, and if the newspapers extolled Tetrazzini in one paragraph, in the next they said that never had Melba been in better voice since the days when she first gladdened Covent Garden twenty years and more ago.

Mlle. Destinn was another triumphant member of the opera company, and there are many critics who name her as the greatest artist that the season gave London. It was for her that "Aida" was given so often, as London revelled in her wonderful impersonation of the Egyptian slave.

Of the tenors Bonci led as favorite, though Giovanni Zenatello was a close second.

The number of English and American singers was greater than ever before, and though very few of them sang more than twice, their appearances were made with success.

The chorus was a great feature of the season. To a New York opera goer used to a perfectly trained chorus the languid, elderly ladies who held the stage at Covent Garden at stated intervals and with an air of extreme fatigue sang the notes required of them were a great trial in other seasons, but this year an effort was made to drill and train the chorus properly.

There will be no autumn season at the Operahouse. It will be closed for much-needed redecoration and repairs. The dingy, dusky look of the old building is to be done away with. The boxes on the lower and grand tiers will be constructed in walnut. This happily means the total abolition of the unsightly obstructive curtains now hanging around and over every box.

In January there will be a four weeks' season of the "Ring" in English, conducted by Dr. Hans Richter. Three full cycles will be given. The great success of last year's production makes it probable that every winter now a certain number of these performances will be given in England by English and American singers.

Following the "Ring" will be a production of Dr. Naylor's prize-winning opera, "The Angelus," for which new scenery is being made. Only a limited number of performances will be given.

In early spring, about the last of April, the grand opera season will again open. The productions will be confined to French and Italian operas and no German works will be included in the repertoire. Charpentier's "Louise" and Debussy's "Peleas and Melisande" are promised as novelties to London. Among the singers who have been reëngaged for next season are Tetrazzini, Mlle. Emmy Destinn, Sammarco and Zenatello, and Campanini as conductor.

Art and Artists.

BY ANTONY E. ANDERSON.

In a Sculptor's Studio.

Until recently, those two wedded artists, the Wendts, had but one studio between them. This, though commodious and well lighted, was intended for the painter's purposes only, being built by Elmer Wachtel. It was sold to Mr. Wendt some two years ago, at the time when the Wachtels moved to the hills on West Avenue 43.

It is impossible for the worker in clay to properly handle his materials in a full-dress suit. The painter, it is said, may do so if his eccentricities lead him into such dangerous indiscretions. Whistler did, often, and always came out unsmirched. Mr. Wendt never makes the attempt—but nevertheless he finds much clay an impediment to motion when busy at his easel.

So, behind the painter's studio, in the charming garden on Sichel street, Julia Bracken Wendt built herself a sculptor's studio with plenty of elbow room. It is high and sunny and comfortable. It has a window seat that invites to reflection and inspection. Its ample wall-space is adorned with striking examples of Mrs. Wendt's own strong and original work—medallions and bas-reliefs in plaster. Its niches hold many busts in the round. The dust of clay—and conflict—lies about. We find moist clay in a bin, and clay still more moist under swaddling clothes that are as gruesomely suggestive as the cerements of a mummy. But there are no evidences of paints and pictures. These must be sought in Mr. Wendt's studio, first floor front.

Mrs. Wendt's studio is a busy place just now, for she is modeling a number of portraits. Especially happy in its search and grasp of the dreamy artist-poet type is her small medallion of Marion Holden Pope. Her bas-relief of Mr. A., somewhat larger than that of Mrs. Pope, is also a sympathetic piece of work. She has also begun a large relief of Elmer Wachtel which promises much. Already it suggests Saint Gaudens' low relief of Robert Louis Stevenson. The two men may seem radically unlike to the superficial observer; yet temperamentally they have much in common, and we know that both are poets.

Of work in the round Mrs. Wendt has two fine portraits now under way. One is that of her painter husband, whose large humanity and broad intelligence are amply made manifest in this life-like presentment of clay. Equally interesting is the bust of a man whose name cannot be given here, but whose head and bearing are as noble as those of an ideal Roman Senator. The small clay model of "The Sphinx and the Sculptor" is very beautiful. The sculptor is resting from his labors, one hand holding his mallet, the other flung over the head of the Sphinx. His level brows are contracted in deep speculation. He looks straight at you, unseeing. He seems to be searching for the deeper truth, the higher mystery. The riddle of the Sphinx may always remain unreadable, but it is the province of the artist to try and try again.

Mrs. Wendt has just completed and sent to Chicago her medal for the Chicago Society of Artists. It is to be cast in silver at once, to be used this winter. The following artists, prize-winners of the past, will be first honored: Frederick W. Freer (deceased,) for painting, 1905; John Johansen, for painting, 1906; Martha S. Baker, for painting, 1907; Charles J. Mulligan, for sculpture, 1908.

The right side of the medal shows an allegorical female figure in very low relief. This winged figure, very rythmical and beautiful in its lines, is placing a keystone with the word ART upon it in an arch that stands for human endeavor—art being the perfection of every human effort. In the arch we see a small recumbent figure of a sculptor with his chisel in his hand. The companion figure, only partly seen, is that of a painter and his palette. Below the arch, and through it, is seen, against the rays of a rising sun, a man guiding a plow behind two straining horses, symbolizing the beginnings of labor.

The other side of the medal is filled up with a circular palette, round which are twined branches of palm and laurel. On this palette the inscription is to be made. The lines of the design follow the lines on the figured side of the medal, making an exquisitely complete and beautiful medallion.

American Art.

Is there an American art, an art that is distinctive? asks a writer in Brush and Pencil. Fifteen years ago the French critics, the best in the world, said that America's was the most distinctive of any young art. Many critics have said that it is imitative. So far from this criticism being well founded, originality and independence are the distinctive characteristics of American art. Cleverness of composition is one of the strong features of American artists' work. The realistic critic demands a realism that borders on sensationalism in art, but American art has gone beyond that, and every great artist of the nation has been specially gifted with the faculty of composition.

Another superficial criticism is that American artists do not stay at home. They live abroad, and there are many artists whom thousands of well informed people do not know to be Americans at all. Sargent was a member of the Royal Academy; it is hard to believe that Shannon is an American. James McNeill Whistler had a short-lived fit of shame at being an American, but he nobly atoned for it in later life. He was a Massachusetts Yankee and tried to be a soldier; he was a cadet at West Point. George Hitchcock and Walter McEwen and many others that might be named won't live in their native land.

I am ashamed to confess that it is because they could not make a living if they did. The American artist finds to his amazement that he can't sell his paintings if he stays here. It is not so much that the artistic environment abroad is more congenial, though that must be admitted to be true to some extent. But it is necessity. He could sell pot-boilers here, but true art is appreciated better abroad than here, and those Americans who do buy canvases prefer foreign imprints and signatures.

ART NOTES.

Charles Ward has just gone to Santa Paula for three weeks of sketching. Among the good things now to be seen in Mr. Ward's studio are a portrait of a boy, full of character and charming in color, and a large nude called "The Moonstone," a female figure seated on a rock by the sea, and strongly suggestive of Childe Hassam's out-door color and light and vibration.

The members of the Painters' Club, who met last Tuesday at the Art Student's League, have prepared some very strong and original posters for their coming exhibition, which will open in Blanchard Hall on October 8 and continue for two weeks. The event will be one of the notable ones of the year.

Moffat, Yard & Co., New York, will shortly issue an important book entitled "How to Appreciate Prints," by Frank Weitenkampf, curator of the print department of the New York public library. It will be found useful to all who love prints and want to attain to a higher appreciation of them.

John M. Donovan, the marine painter, is spending most of his time at San Pedro these days.

Carl Oscar Borg spent only a few days on San Miguel Island on his last trip. He is now in Santa Barbara.

Nona L. White is sketching near Peoria, Ill. She writes that there are plenty of trees in her neighborhood, though no art critics—but neglects to state whether she considers this a fortunate circumstance or not.

The Woods That Bring the Sunset Near.

The wind from out the west is blowing;
The homeward-wandering cows are lowing;
Dark grow the pine woods, dark and drear—
The woods that bring the sunset near.

When o'er wide seas the sun declines,
Far off its fading glory shines—
Far off, sublime, and full of fear—
The pine-woods bring the sunset near.

This house that looks to east, to west,
This, dear one, is our home, our rest;
Yonder the stormy sea, and here
The woods that bring the sunset near.

MOSBY WAS THERE.

But It Was not the One the Regiment of Soldiers Wished to Capture.

Gen. John S. Mosby, the Confederate cavalaryman, used to tell of a comic incident which happened in the Shenandoah Valley in 1864. Near Millwood a regiment of cavalry halted one night and went into camp. One of the men, who was hungry, slipped away and went off in the neighborhood to get something to eat. He rode up to a cabin on a farm in the dark and called for the person inside to come out.

A negro woman, konwn at that time as an intelligent contraband, opened the door and asked him what he wanted. The soldier wished to be assured of his safety before dismounting and while eating his supper, so he inquired of the woman if any one but herself was there.

She replied: "Yes, Mosby is here."

"What," said he, in a whisper, "is Mosby here?"

"Yes," she said, "he is in the house."

The soldier put spurs to his horse and dashed off to his company to carry the news. When he got there he informed the colonel that Mosby was in a house not far away. The regiment was soon mounted, and went at a fast trot, thinking they had Mosby in a trap.

When they arrived at the negro woman's house the colonel ordered his men to surround it, to prevent Mosby's escape, while he went in with a few to take him dead or alive.

The woman again came to the door of the cabin. The colonel

A GLIMPSE OF PARIS

A Glimpse of Paris greets the visitor on entering the elegantly appointed establishment of Dodson, the man milliner. One enters a spacious reception room where the light softly shining through green draperies makes one think of sunlight, filtering through green leaves. The same exqutsite taste is shown in all the fittings.

Opening out of the reception room is a rest room, where piano, writing tables, phones, etc., are at the disposal of guests.

On either side of this room are five private fitting rooms. Spacious mirrors line the walls, velvet carpets cover the floors. Few hats are to be seen. They are laid carefully away for exclusive inspection. Here amid these elegant surroundings Milady may at leisure select her chapeaux. The theater room is carefully darkened and lighted with electricity. Here the elegant evening creations for which Mr. Dodson is famous are seen just as they appear when the fair wearer steps into her opera box.

Fall Suit Fashions

THERE is a clear and ringing note of newness about the Autumn Suit Fashions that will prove most welcome to all womankind; a departure most radical from styles of the immediate past. Colorings and materials, as well as lines, show no trace, no suggestion of modes of the past several decades.

Nor are these fresh creations confined exclusively to suits of the highest price, the prohibitive price, to so many.

Our buyers have made a special effort this season to supply the wants of those of modest means with suits whose style and finish compare favorably with those designed by the most famous tailors.

Tuesday (the store will be closed tomorrow—Labor Day) we will have on exhibition a line of new suits that, for value, have not been equalled in the West; suits made to our order from designs of our own selection. To introduce the Fall stock we have marked these popular priced garments away below the figure they should bring at regular prices.

$25.00, $29.50, $35.00 and $39.50

All the popular colors and black; newest materials, latest Fifth Avenue styles.

We want you to see these suits, examine them in detail, compare them with the best values you have known. Second Floor.

Novelty Silks $1 Yd.

Seldom indeed have we been able to show at the very beginning of a season such values in novelty dress silks as we present this week—silks of quality, of intrinsic worth as well as unquestioned style. Assortments, too, and colorings to meet the approval of the most particular dressers.

Taffetas, Gros d'Londres and satin effects in broad chevron and herringbone weaves, small brocade and jacquard effects, stripes of every width, all in solid colors of the most fashionable hues or two and three-toned schemes. Besides a complete assortment of pastel shades for evening wear in each of the season's newest weaves.

See our dollar line and be convinced.

Really Elegant Oriental Rugs
at $14.75
(On Sale Tuesday)

Oriental Rugs—if rightly bought—are far more economical, in the long run, than any of the domestic makes.

There is no question about these, at $14.75, being rightly bought.

We know of no place where their equals are sold at twice as much. Daghestan, Shirvan, Ganjes and Mosoul weaves in sizes 3 to 4½ ft. wide by 4 to 5½ ft. long. Soft, silky pieces in dozens of very attractive designs. And their beauty is there to stay. Guaranteed to stand any color-test.

Two 10-Yd. Pieces
Persian Ribbon 25c
(On Sale Tuesday.)

Two ten-yard pieces of Persian trimming ribbon of the class formerly sold at 50c to $1 a piece. Sounds unreasonable, doesn't it?

It will seem even more absurd when you see the ribbons themselves and consider the variety of uses you can put them to.

Undermuslins at Little Above Half
(On Sale Tuesday)

The sample lines and surplus stocks from the factory that supplies our regular stocks came to us at a full third under what we have been paying for the very same sorts.

By narrowing our customary margin of profits we can sell them at prices averaging just about half and clear out the entire collection in two or three days. The bulk of the assortment is in medium-priced garments--no dangerously "cheap" ones, and few extremely costly pieces:

Carloads Upon Carloads of Furniture Bought Below Regular On Account of Business Depression in the East

There's nothing mysterious about the Brent way of doing business.

Our low prices are the result of simple methods, such as every woman practices in doing her daily marketing.

If you buy a barrel of flour and pay spot cash you get it cheaper than if you bought twenty-five cents worth and had it charged.

Brent's buys in great big quantities. Where the slow-moving store buys a dozen chairs, Brent's buys a carload.

Brent's pays spot cash. Where the average store asks manufacturers to give it plenty of time to pay in, Brent's pays money down.

These simple methods result in enormous advantage to Brent's.

We suppy the cash, do the bargaining and you get the benefit and pay when you please.

Make No Mistake, We Have No Branches. Beware of False Stories that salesmen in other stores may tell you.

We know it to be a fact that salesmen in other stores invent all kinds of absurd arguments against Brent's in order to hold their trade.

Customers often tell us some of the silly yarns that salesmen have tried to make them believe. Don't let a shrewd-talking salesman fool you.

The fact is, regardless of what may be said, Brent's handles nothing but reliable furniture from the leading houses in America. You always save money at Brent's. For these reasons Brent's practically does the furniture business of the city.

If any salesman in any store attempts to contradict these statements you should indignantly leave at once. A salesman who will lie will also get the best of you in other ways. You are safe at Brent's.

Sewing Machines for Less Money

Don't imagine, because you are asked a high price for a machine, that it is good because it is high priced. All of our customers tell us, and we know it, that our TIME prices are from $10 to $20 lower than CASH prices of other machines. The reason is because we buy for spot cash—we have no agents who have to be paid from $5 to $20 on each machine they induce you to buy.

Our highest priced "Rotary" Machine is $35—on time—10 per cent. less for cash—which we guarantee to be the equal of any $65 or $75 Rotary machine.

Our highest priced "Vibrator," that is, regular shuttle machine, is $30—on time—10 per cent. less for cash—which we guarantee to be the equal of any $65 sewing machine made.

Our Simplex E Sewing Machine	$15.00
Our Simplex D Sewing Machine	$16.50
Our Simplex C Sewing Machine	$21.00

All machines 50c a week. Machines the best—prices the lowest—terms the easiest.

SALTED THE MUSH.

The Whole Family Appeared of One Mind and the Priest Followed Suit.

The following story of early life in Indiana is told by Congressman Murdock of Kansas in the American Magazine:

"In early Indiana a solitary horseman came, one winter evening, to a clearing in the woods and espied there a comfortable log cabin and near it a native chopping wood. The horseman was wet with snow, and cold, and he asked the privilege of spending the night within and for a stall for his beast. The native agreed, in a surly manner, to this arrangement, took charge of the horse and directed the traveler to the cabin. Within, the traveler found a great room, at one end a large fireplace and a brisk fire, and he sat down before it to warm and dry himself. There was a cheer to the room with its crackling fire which was not in keeping with the manner of his host, and while he was trying to reconcile the two there entered a large, rawboned woman, the housewife. The traveler arose, bowed and bade her good evening. The woman nodded her head once shortly, stepped with a curious decision to the fireplace, hung a pot of mush over the blaze, and, reaching down into a wooden box at the side of the hearth, took up a handful of salt, put it into the mush, stirred it and with the same curious decision walked out. A little later the traveler was aware that a girl of fifteen, the daughter, had entered the room and was surveying him in great embarrassment. He arose and politely bowed as before The girl, still in embarrassment, nodded shortly, and, seeing the mush, edged over to the fireplace, reached into the box, nervously, took a handful of salt, put it into the mush, stirred it and walked out. Presently a boy of ten entered, and, seeing the stranger, popped a dirty thumb into his mouth. 'Good evening, Bub,' said the stranger. The boy did not reply, but, seeing the mush, he stepped to the fireplace, and, taking a handful of salt, put it into the mush, stirred it and walked out. Later the host himself came in, as glum as ever, saw the mush, reached into the box, added a handful of salt, stirred it, and went out.

"When supper was announced the traveler took his place and waited in silence. The housewife was the first to taste the mush. 'Whew!' she exclaimed, 'but this mush is salty.'

"'I salted it, Mammy,' volunteered the girl.

"'So did I,' confessed the boy.

"'And I, too,' growled the man.

"'Well, you had no business to!' cried the woman. 'I always salt the mush.'

"And then the traveler spoke. 'My friends,' he said, 'I am a stranger here. I do not know your ways, but I always try to accommodate myself to my surroundings, and, believing that it was the custom here, I acknowledge that I reached down into that box and put in a handful of salt myself.'"

THE RAILROAD WORLD.

The Michigan Central's tunnel under the Detroit River at Detroit is expected to be in operation by next July when the moving of freight and passengers across the river by ferriage will come to an end. The officials of the road are confident that the tunnel will earn its cost several times over. Better time will also be made by trains as the ferriage now involves a delay of from thirty minutes to almost anything depending upon the amount of ice which clogs the river in the winter time. The cost of the tunnel will be about $15,000,000.

One of the first of the series of great improvements to be entered into by the merger railroads of Mexico will be to convert the Interoceanic from a narrow to a standard-gauge road. Much preparatory work already has been done in shortening the route through the mountains wherever possible, reducing grades and curves and widening the roadbed. A number of new bridges also will be built. The necessary surveys have been made, and it is said that contracts will be let in a few weeks and the work pushed to completion as rapidly as possible. The minority stock of the Interoceanic is held chiefly in England.

The largest stockholder in the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad is the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, with 35,600 shares. The next largest holder is the American Express Company, with 23,492 shares. Then comes Lewis Cass Ledyard, with 20,542 shares. New York Central appears as a stockholder with 11,748 shares.

"Surplus railroad equipment figures, as compiled and published," says a leading operating official, "tell only one-half of the story. Assuming a reported surplus of 300,000 cars, or 16 per cent. of the total equipment, you must remember that only 80 per cent. of the remaining cars in actual service are being operated to their performance capacity. They are not filled up as they should be. You must also consider the shop cars, which would account for nearly 8 per cent. more, at least, until recently. The real surplus equipment is fully 25 per cent. of the total equipment in the country."

The southwestern railroads have announced that if an increase in interstate freight rates is not allowed by the Interstate Commerce Commission, $20,000,000 in railroad extensions planned for Texas will not be built. It is declared that the unreasonable and discriminatory actions of the Texas Railroad Commission is driving investment capital away from this State. The roads charge the commission has persisted in its policy to keep the roads from earning more than 4 per cent. by decreasing freight rates ever since the establishment of the commission, and that after ordering all the roads to expend anywhere from one to ten millions for new equipment, thereby driving properties to receiverships, the commission is now fighting against the slight increase in interstate rates asked for by the roads.

A gasoline traction line is to be built between Youngstown and Conmaut, O. The right of way has been secured and an issue of $3,000,000 bonds made which will be taken mainly by German capitalists. It is expected the gasoline-driven cars will be in operation over the line within a year.

So rapid is the deterioration of freight cars that it is estimated that there will be in service in this country next January 100,000 less cars than were in service January 1, 1908. The reason for this decrease in the transportation capacity of the country is the inability of the railroads to earn enough or to borrow enough to replace the cars being worn out. This loss is greater than the shortage of freight cars last October, when the demand for transportation facilities in excess of the ability of the railroads to supply them reached its highest point in the history of the country.

A Standard Oil Advertisement.

The following translation of the advertisement of a Standard Oil lamp in China is taken from an article in the World's Work for August:

"If you wish happiness, long life, comfort, health and peace, you must live surrounded by brightness. To live in bright surroundings you must use a 'Mei-Fu' Hong Lamp (which is made on scientific principles) and burns real 'Mei-Fu' oil. By using this small lamp and burning the best oil, the light given will be so bright that it will be like day. This will undoubtedly mean a great advantage. If your children are studying at night, then they will be able to do so in comfort, and will take more interest in their studies.

"Some may say, 'If we buy this lamp and the chimney becomes broken, we shall not be able to get a new one.' We therefore wish to say that the Standard Oil Company, at every port, will always have supplies of chimneys to be sent to every city and town for sale. The Standard Oil Company have fixed the price at which shops may sell—each lamp including chimney and wick to be sold for not more than seventeen Mexican cents."

She Read a Speech.

Princess Lwoff Parlaghy, the noted Hungarian painter, was asked in Philadelphia to address a women's club on portrait painting—a subject that would have had much interest, for the artist has done portraits of the Kaiser, the Czar and many other celebrities.

But she declined to deliver the address.

"I cannot speak impromptu," she said, "and what is more wearisome than a speech read from notes?

"A friend of mine once spoke before a class of school children on literature. She had spent a week writing the speech. She read it to the little ones, as she hoped, with great success.

"But the next day she heard that a boy, on being asked by his mother what had happened at the school, replied carelessly:

"'Oh, nothing much, except a lady talked to herself on a piece of paper.'"

The Figure
How Too Much Fat May Be Safely Reduced at Home.

"Oh, that this too, too solid flesh would melt!" cry the ladies nowadays as they try to squirm into a princess frock. How much would the too generously proportioned dame not give up for four inches less in the waistline as she compares herself with the more fortunate one hundred and twenty-five-pound sister. Various devices are suggested to arrest the flesh producing tendency and keep the figure trim, including exercising, walking and dieting as well as numerous patented remedies, but there are objections to all of these. Exercising is hard work and takes up precious time, dieting is distasteful and a real punishment, and most of the patent remedies are dangerous to health.

The very best thing for the overfat, whether male or female, is a simple home receipt: ½ oz. Marmola, ½ oz. Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic, 3½ oz. Peppermint Water, which can be obtained of any druggist at small cost. This should be taken a teaspoonful at a time after meals and at bedtime, and results will be both speedy and certain. This is a harmless mixture that cannot bring on any stomach troubles nor cause the dried-up wrinkled appearance of those who starve or take "patent reducers" to get thin. On the contrary, although it often takes the fat off at the rate of a pound a day, it is really very beneficial to the system, cleansing the blood and causing the complexion to become fair and beautiful. The cost of the three ingredients is a mere bagatelle, and one may if they prefer get them separately and mix them together at home.

Furniture of Finest Grade

—Of Highest Quality;
—Exclusive in Design;
—Perfect in Making and Beautiful in Finish

THE magnificent stock of highest-class fine art furniture carried by Barker Bros. has few equals in America—none in the West. In variety and extensiveness there is ample scope to satisfy the exacting inclinations of the most critical furniture connoisseur. From the hundreds and hundreds of choicest pieces in rarest, most beautiful woods, may be chosen everything needed to furnish the most artistic home, from simplest chairs, rockers and tables, incorporating genuine goodness without extravagance, to the most elaborate creations in the much sought for period reproductions. There is a range of choice sufficient to please everyone with whom quality is paramount.

Many Pieces Specially Priced

In such a large stock of fine furniture as this, there are constantly appearing odd pieces, broken suites, individual pieces and full suites which we cannot duplicate—also maker's display samples which we pick up from time to time at a concession in cost, etc., all of which we specially feature and offer at pronounced reductions.

There are numerous articles of this character scattered throughout the display at this time. We describe a few here today—just as a hint of the exceptional values. Anyone who appreciates fine furniture, with a desire in this direction, should be interested. And do not forget—the articles mentioned here are but a few of many.

New Fall Ideas In Women's Forsythe Suits

Our showing of Women's Forsythe Suits for Autumn emphasizes the style perfection of this famous ready-to-wear. It well illustrates also the quality and perfect tailoring that have made Forsythe garments the standard by which other high-grade wear for women is judged.

These points can best be understood by personal examination. The new colorings—rich, original and tasteful—must likewise be seen to be fully appreciated.

We, therefore, extend an invitation to women to visit our store and inspect our Forsythe display. While late models will still be arriving from time to time, our present assortments afford a most satisfactory variety of selection.

New Long Coats and Capes—Forsythe productions. These garments are original in design and rich in fabric and coloring. An excellent assortment is now available.

Talks on Teeth
BY THE REX DENTAL CO.
Incorporated

Worth More Than $1000 to Him

It is a great source of satisfaction to us to be able to publish a testimonial from a man who admits that his teeth were in a desperate condition and that through the Alveolar Method we had restored all that he had lost, so that now he could eat anything and enjoy using his teeth, whereas before he was in misery most of the time.

A testimonial of that kind means a great deal to some other man who may chance to read it. It makes him want to know more about such a remarkable method of restoring teeth and sooner or later that man will come to one of our offices.

It is a very difficult matter to explain the Alveolar Method of restoring missing teeth without the use of plates or ordinary bridge work, at long range or in the brief space of a newspaper advertisement. If people would only come to our offices and talk to our examining dentist they would soon be convinced that we could do all that we claim we can do. We are going to ask you to read this letter:

Called to Hand Us Letter

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 18, 1908.
REX DENTAL CO.
Los Angeles, Cal.
Gentlemen: Some months ago you did dental work for me which has proven entirely satisfactory, and I called at your office this morning for the purpose of giving you this letter.
I am wearing a full upper and lower set of your Alveolar teeth. The upper is anchored to three of my own teeth, and the lower to two.
My Alveolar teeth are as solid as a rock and I can eat all kinds of food.
They feel and look just as good as if I had my own.
I appreciate what you have done for me and I wish to thank you.
Gratefully yours,
D. H. WALKER.
1129 West 21st st.

This man says that his Alveolar teeth are a complete success. He is delighted with them, and he wants us to publish his testimonial broadcast so that others who suffered and are suffering as he did may hear the glad tidings and follow his example.

Where it is possible we try to have people come to our offices and have a special examination made of their mouth. If this is not possible the next best thing is to send for our book entitled "Alveolar Dentistry," which goes into full and complete particulars of this marvelous method of restoring missing teeth without plates or bridge work. We send this book free of charge and the reading of it brings us patients from all over this country, which shows that it must tell its story in a forceful manner. We invite you, if your teeth are going or nearly all gone, to come and see us and have an examination made of your mouth, free of charge, or send for the book, which is sent free.

A perfect set of teeth is the best investment you can possibly make.

Popular Prices

To be fashionably attired nowadays positively compels the selection of tailor-made garments. Ready-made apparel with its instantly discernible commonness has little to commend it to fastidious women.

The superlative excellence of Elite tailoring has won the patronage of many of the best-gowned ladies of Los Angeles. Elite productions include individual measures for every garment and cutting and fitting by an artist of renowned ability. A perfect fit is assured, and guaranteed. In the choice of your materials we offer you the advantage of hundreds of patterns—finest fabrics in the latest colors and effects. Our popular charges eliminate the necessity of dealing with the high-price tailors and enable you to avoid the wearing of the unsatisfactory ready-mades. We invite your inspection—and it will pay you to see us.

Our special offer last week having been responded to so generously, we have decided to continue it another week, that others may take advantage—a special inducement to have you visit our establishment in advance of the extremely busy season later. Therefore we will continue to make, this week, to your measure, one of our most beautiful new Fall Suits—tight fitting or semi-fitting 34 to 40 inch jacket style, skirts 13 gore flare with wide fold at bottom, jacket lined with Skinner satin; choice of fabrics and modes worth up to $47.50; extra special for a few days longer.......... $35

How I Took My Wrinkles Out
After Facial Massage, Creams and Beauty Doctors Had Failed
BY HARRIETT META

Trouble, worry and ill health brought me deep lines and wrinkles. I realized that they not only greatly marred my appearance and made me look much older, but that they would greatly interfere with my success, because a woman's success, either socially or financially, depends very largely on her appearance. The homely woman, with deep lines and furrows in her face, must fight an unequal battle with her younger and better looking sister.

I therefore bought various brands of cold cream and skin foods and massaged my face with most constant regularity, hoping to regain my former appearance. But the wrinkles simply would not go. On the contrary, they seemed to get deeper. Next I went to a beauty specialist, who told me she could easily rid me of my wrinkles. I paid my money and took the treatment. Sometimes I thought they got less, but after spending all the money I could afford for such treatment, I found I still had wrinkles. So I gave up in despair and concluded I must carry them to my grave. One day a friend of mine who was versed in chemistry made a suggestion, and this gave me a new idea. I immediately went to work making experiments and studying everything I could get hold of on the subject. After several long months of almost numberless trials and discouragements I finally discovered a process which produced most astounding results on my wrinkles in a single night. I was delighted beyond expression. I tried my treatment again, and, lo and behold! my wrinkles were practically gone. A third treatment—three nights in all—and I had no wrinkles and my face was as smooth as ever. I next offered my treatment to some of my immediate friends, who used it with surprising results, and I have now decided to offer it to the public. Miss Gladys Desmond of Pittsburg, Pa., writes that it made her wrinkles disappear in one night.

Mrs. M. W. Graves of Bridgeport, Conn., states: "There is not a wrinkle left; my friends say I look 20 years younger. I consider your treatment a godsend to womankind." Mrs. James Barss of Central City, S. D., writes: "The change is so great that it seems more of a work of magic."

I will send further particulars to any one who is interested, absolutely free of charge. I use no cream, facial massage, face steamings, or so-called skin foods; there is nothing to inject and nothing to injure the skin. It is an entirely new discovery of my own and so simple that you can use it without the knowledge of your most intimate friends. You apply the treatment at night and go to bed. In the morning, lo! the wonderful transformation. People often write me: "It sounds too good to be true." Well, the test will tell. If interested in my discovery, please address Harriett Meta, Suite 526J, Syracuse, N. Y., and I will send you full particulars.

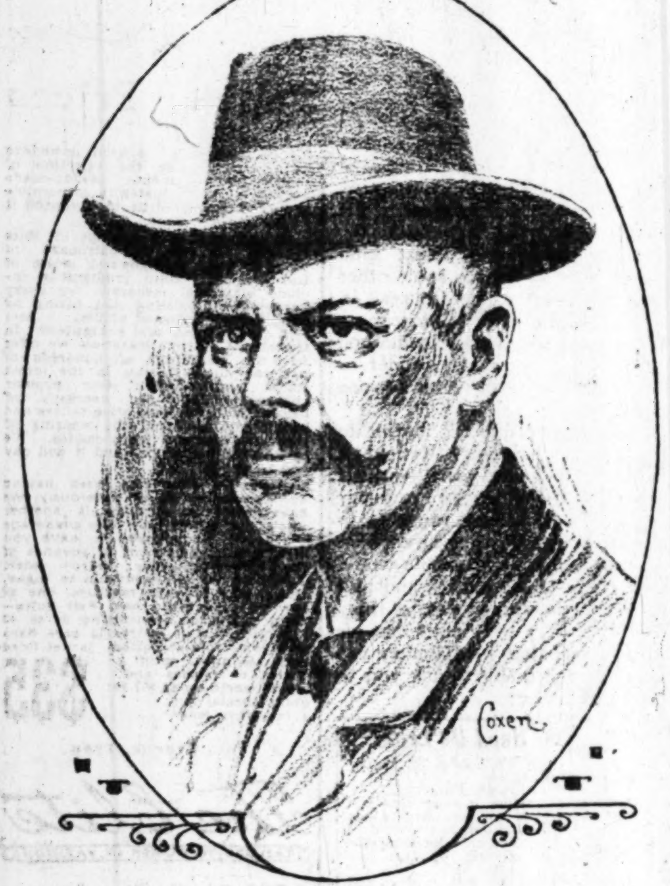
NEW BOOKS REVIEWED

(BY A TIMES REVIEWER.)

Profound in Its Symbolism.

THE OLD ROOM. By Carl Ewald. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York. (Price $1.25.)

Although the term "novel," as employed at the present day, has become flexible enough to embrace almost any form of narrative a writer chooses to use, there still remain a few exquisite literary craftsmen whose work, though it may resemble the novel in some of its details, has still differentiating characteristics that turn it into a lovely but nameless hybrid.



Carl Ewald,
author of "The Old Room."

"The Old Room" is one of these. It is neither a poem nor a novel, though it displays some of the beauties of both. Perhaps it is a poem, after all—a tragic idyll. Perhaps it is a drama of three souls.

Call it what you will, there can be no question of its originality and of its literary quality. Even in translation the choice simplicity of the original Danish has not been lost. The translation, indeed, made by Alexander Teixeira de Mattos, is fluent and sympathetic. Even the songs that Fru Adelheid sings (there are a number of them) are free and unforced, perfect in rhyme and complete in thought. Each one is a lyric of almost faultless beauty.

"The Old Room" was written by a man who was close of kin to Henrik Ibsen, or, at any rate, who had been profoundly influenced by him, especially by the later Ibsen, the subtle symbolist who gave us "The Lady from the Sea" and "When We Dead Awaken." It is a study of two souls sick with the nostalgia of life, and of a third soul's fruitless efforts to bring them back to health and sanity.

Fru Adelheid longed for the vivid joys of living, but lacked the will to reach out for them regardless of consequences. She took pleasure in kindling the desires of men, but though she left her husband's house for many years, she was not unfaithful in act. "I had no lover," she said, in a low voice. He tossed back the hair from his forehead and clenched his fists. "No," he said. "You did not. That is your disgrace and your judgment."

Finn, the son of Cordt and Adelheid, is without desire and without will. The one melancholy pleasure he has is to sit in the old room, that inner sanctuary of the Cordt mansion, built by the founder of the Cordt name for every succeeding head of the house and his wife. It was full of the furniture, beautiful, strange, grotesque brought by each couple on their first entry into the room.

But Finn brought no wife to the old room. While his father and mother sat there, speaking of him, he quietly shot himself. The burden of life, even in thought, was too great for him to bear.

"The Old Room" will perhaps find as many interpreters as it has readers. It could have been written in no other century but this.

A City's Rise.

THE STORY OF PITTSBURGH. Edited and published by the Pittsburgh Gazette-Times, Pittsburgh.

This book presents a resume of the history of Pittsburgh, with an extended account of its present condition, its resources, its men of action, and its industries. It is superbly printed and illustrated, worthy of a paper which has represented the people of its part of Pennsylvania since Washington was inaugurated president.

The story of a city that outranks in the value of its products in iron, steel and glass, not only other cities, but even European countries, is a marvelous one to tell. It has been told adequately here, and even more adequately illustrated. Of course particular attention is paid to iron and steel industries—and the long list of them impresses one more than the array of figures—but other branches of a city's life are not neglected.

Philosophy and Dialect.

DINKELSPIEL'S LETTERS. By George V. Hobart. G. W. Dillingham Company, New York. (For sale by C. C. Parker.)

For some reason that perhaps a psychologist might give, every one appreciates more and treasures longer the homely philosophies of life when they are dressed in dialect. Dinkelspiel, first created more than fifteen years ago, by George V. Hobart, has been, for several years, one of those whose quaint sayings and involved Germanisms has pleased the public.

In this little volume some of the best of Dinkelspiel's later appearances are collected and reprinted, with illustrations. There are eleven letters to his son "Looey," concerning all manner of things from poker and the race track to love and weddings.

The Sword's Glory.

THE DUKE'S MOTTO. By Justin Huntley McCarthy. Harper & Bros., New York. (Price $1.50.)

This is not the McCarthy of "If I Were King"—here is another McCarthy, a less worthy, swashbuckling melodramatic author, spilling swordplay and dead men over his pages. If it were not for the fact that Mr. McCarthy is a workman at all times, the story would be cheap. It has plot and rapid action, and is readable for these qualities, but it is not the kind of work that Mr. McCarthy has led his public to expect.

Henri de Lagardere, an insolent daredevil and the best swordsman in Europe, defends the Duke de Nevers from the attack of a band of cut-throats. The Duke finally falls, but Legardere is able to save his infant daughter. Thereafter he devotes his life to avenging the murder of the Duke and obtaining justice for his daughter. Through plot and counterplot and several hundred pages he steadfastly pursues his object, and at last triumphs splendidly.

Demoralizing New York.

A LITTLE BROTHER OF THE RICH. By Joseph Medill Patterson. Reilly & Britton, Chicago.

Joseph Medill Patterson is a graduate of Groton School and Yale College; he spent some time on the cattle ranges of Old Mexico and Wyoming; he was a war correspondent in China during the Boxer trouble; he has been in responsible position on a great Chicago paper, a member of the Illinois Legislature, and a commissioner of public works in Chicago. Yet of these varied activities, of the outlook on life which one might expect from a man with such experience, of even the technical skill which a trained newspaper man might exhibit, there is very little in "A Little Brother of the Rich."

Joseph Medill Patterson, who has just published "A Little Brother of the Rich."

The book is frankly a disappointment. It should have been good—it is mediocre in many ways, and revolting in some. Of course, Mr. Patterson's socialistic views, which caused a break with his family, tinge the work but that is not the fault. He has tried to depict the disintegration of a man's character by the forces of New York plutocracy. There is room for an attack on certain phases of New York life, even by a Chicago man, but such an attack must have behind it force and sincerity, and purpose. To take a number of people, label them the New York financial and society set, and depict them as continually committing or being about to commit, adultery, does not produce a novel of moral force or literary power. There are only two decent people in the entire story—both women. It is too sordid a story to impress one as being true. There are such people in New York, as there are everywhere, but the dead level of lazy indecency which Mr. Patterson depicts can hardly be a true drawing. New York may be wicked, but it is bright enough to do something more interesting and original than the forms of sin Mr Patterson harps on.

Brilliant and Clever.

THE FIRING LINE. By Robert W. Chambers, author of "The Younger Set," etc. Appleton & Co., New York. (Price $1.50.)

Robert W. Chambers is a born story teller. If internal evidence were wanting, the external proofs may be found in the long list of successful novels which he has written, at the rate of two every year for the past fifteen years. But the stories are on everybody's shelves and speak for themselves. They are all brilliantly and cleverly written, and if Mr. Chambers should neglect for once to be immensely entertaining (but he never does) one might be tempted to accuse him of a fatal facility.

Robert W. Chambers, author of "The Firing Line."

Facile he undoubtedly is, but not fatally so. He writes with ease, but not with the sleight-of-hand dexterity that empties all meaning out of sounding phrases. If he becomes, now and then, exotically and richly overpowering in his descriptions, you are fain to forgive him for the sake of the rattling good story he is so manifestly eager to tell you. If he is sometimes a trifle circumstantial, he is so happy in his loquacity that he carries you along with him and makes you quite forget that you were on the point of grumbling out the words "prolix" and "long-winded."

Of late Mr. Chambers has taken to telling us stories of society in modern New York, quite to the neglect of the lords and ladies of the past. He finds the four hundred highly interesting. So do we, when we see them through Mr. Chambers's magic glasses. Their quickness at repartee quite amazes us—until we remember how immensely quick and clever is the author of their being.

In "The Firing Line" Mr. Chambers brings his New York society people to Palm Beach, where he can luxuriate to his heart's content among birds and butterflies, flowers and fruits, trees and animals, with outlandish names.

A divulgence of the plot of "In the Firing Line" would be invidious. No, let the reader know no more of Sheila than did Hamil, when he met her for the first time in a bathing suit out in the blue waters near Palm Beach. Let him find out by degrees, as Hamil did, the double tragedy of the young girl's life.

The story is absorbing from the first page to the last—a brilliant piece of writing. Its characters are hit off with much cleverness. Sheila and Hamil are undoubtedly very unhappy, but somehow their woe leaves us untouched, we scarcely know why. Is it because cleverness, rather than conviction, is the keynote of Mr. Chambers's work? He can tell a story astonishingly well—but can he always sound the depths of the human heart?

By far the most interesting character in "The Firing Line" is Louis Malcourt, not Hamil, its ostensible hero. Malcourt is a cynic, disillusioned, of a teasing, malevolent humor, but the undercurrent of brooding kindliness in his makeup endears him to the reader. He has what is known as "temperament." Mr. Chambers's study of Malcourt is keenly analytical.

PEOPLE AND THINGS OF LITERARY NOTE.

Henry James Smith, whose first novel, "Amedée's Son," will be published soon, was formerly on the editorial staff of the Atlantic Monthly, and since he devoted himself entirely to writing he has been contributing to many other magazines. He lives in New York, but is at present spending his vacation on the New England Coast.

Mary Austin, author of "Santa Lucia," the California novel of suburban life and unmarried uncertainties which made its appearance simultaneously with May Sinclair's "The Judgment of Eve," is experiencing her first taste of Italian atmosphere. Mrs. Austin, who is herself a Californian, is sojourning in Florence, and has not yet fixed upon the date for her homecoming.

It is a rather curious fact that in the libraries of New York City for the past week "The Weavers," by Sir Gilbert Parker, a novel which has been out almost a year, crowds Winston Churchill's latest novel and Rex Beach's "The Barrier" on the list of the most popular books. "The Right of Way," by Parker, is also in demand, partly due perhaps to the fact that within a few weeks the dramatized version will again be seen in New York.

Maude Radford Warren, author of the recent novel, "The Land of the Living," lives in Chicago, in an English house which commands a splendid view of Lake Michigan, and is decidedly spacious and comfortable as well as artistic. Mrs. Warren's favorite room, where she most loves to read and to write, is the great living-room which has light on three sides, and has a wide hearth with a motto quaintly carved over it in the aGel'-. The motto reads, "Welcome, happiness, and good health to you, O friends."

"The Age of Shakespeare," the forthcoming critical work by Swinburne, is anticipated from a library standpoint as one of the most important publications of the year. The eminence of Swinburne as a critic, long conceded even by those who are inclined to dispute his power as a poet, has been largely attained through his Shakespearean prose studies, hence the keenness of expectation with which this final inclusive view is being awaited. Messrs. Harper & Bros. have definitely fixed the latter part of September as the date of publication.

Horace Howard Furness, Jr., in the preface to his latest volume of the Variorum Edition of Shakespear, "Richard the Third," in noting the wide divergence of opinion regarding the historic basis of Richard's character, and the modern tendency to humanize it, states that in all such considerations, the temper of the times should be taken into account. The Yorkists had been defeated, the Lancastrians held undisputed sway; what more natural than that the character of the defeated tyran should be blackened as much as possible? Yet of all the versions of the story antedating Shakespear's play, not one has become popular; only Shakespeare has made Richard the Third live. Whether he paints Richard's true character or not matters little in spite of all modern apologists to the contrary.

On a recent trip in the Maine woods while Holman Day was gathering material for his novel "King Spruce" he encountered a "timber cruiser" who was in some respects the prototype of a character in the novel. When this "cruiser" was starting on a three-days' expedition in the wilderness his preparations consisted of donning a high pair of laced boots and filling his pockets with raisins. For three days he tramped through swamps and underbrush and over mountains, covering some twenty miles a day. His only food was the raisins; he carried no blankets, and wore no coat. In the course of such a trip the explorer would lose fifteen pounds in weight. His companion, a veteran cruiser over sixty-five, was also lightly equipped, carrying a bottle of gin, a little tea, and a few crackers.

It was never a new thing for a British statesman to write a book, but the wonder grows that so many popular American story-writers should go in for politics. Winston Churchill, Booth Tarkinton, George Ade and Brand Whitlock are among those who have been closely attracted, and now news comes that John Kendrick Bangs has entered politics in Maine, a field which Holman Day is also covering in the coming contest for the Maine Legislature. The career of John Kendrick Bangs has kept him in close touch with public issues—it will be remembered that for some time he was editor of Harper's Weekly—nor is this the funny man's first essay at politics. Maybe it was a Democrat who noted that Mr. Bangs and Mr. Ade, the humorist in this group, are also the Republicans.

NEWS AND NOTES OF FORTHCOMING BOOKS.

All who remember "The Garden of Allah" and "The Call of the Blood" will be interested in the announcement that there will shortly appear a new novel by Robert Hichens. The story is known to be a sequel to "The Call of the Blood."

What is announced as rather a startling book has been prepared for early publication by Abraham Flexner, who has had long contact and experience with secondary school and college methods and results. It is an exhaustive study in contemporary education, and will be published by the Century Company under title of "The American College."

Among new books of a religious trend to be published in September are the following by two well-known authors: "The Character of Jesus," by Dr. Charles E. Jefferson, and "The Wider Life" and "Evening Thoughts," by Dr. J. R. Miller.

Early this month the Scribners will publish a new novel by René Bazin, author of "The Nun." This new novel is called "The Coming Harvest," and is a story of life in modern France—not in Paris, but in the country. It is said to be full of picturesque incidents and vivid characters—among them a rugged figure of a woodcutter, a French artistocrat, and "the charming Antoinette Jacquemin."

The Harpers have manuscripts in process for various new autumn books, many of them representing distinguished names. Among these are Mrs. Humphrey Ward, Robert Hichens, William Dean Howells, Hamlin Garland, George Harvey; Augustus Thomas, Kirk Munroe, Peter Newell and others. On this list also appears the name of Gen. Lew Wallace.

Thomas Y. Crowell & Co. will publish this month five new children's stories by well-known authors: "Old Man Coyote," an Indian fairy book, by Clara K. Bayliss; "The Fire-Fly's Lovers," a Japanese fairy book, by William E. Griffis; "Stories of Persian Heroes," by E. M. W. Buxton; "The Galleon Treasure," a tale of adventure, by Percy K. Fitzhugh, and "Two Stowaways," a tale of the fishing banks, by James Otis.

There will be special interest in Helen R. Martin's new novel, "The Revolt of Anne Royle," as it is announced that this delineator of Pennsylvania Dutch life and character has departed entirely from the field of her earlier successes. The characters are of the college and church circles of a small Pennsylvania town; and the narrative is all the time a love story.

Among the new fiction announced by J. B. Lippincott Company for this fall are "My Lady of the Fog," by Ralph Henry Barbour; "The Tether," by Ezra S. Brudno; "The Sunny Side of the Hill," by Rosa N. Carey; "The Adventures of Louis Blake," by Louis Becke; "The Lost Angel," by Katharine Tynan, and "Under North Star and Southern Cross," by Francis Sinclair.

Otto H. Bacher, the American artist and etcher, knew intimately Whistler—the most fascinating and whimsical of geniuses—during his stay in Venice. His memories of those days, made into an attractive brown cloth volume, with reproductions of twenty-two Whistler etchings, three Whistler lithographs and five Whistler letters, and a number of etchings and photographs by Mr. Bacher, will be published this month.

Awakening.

It were joy to have lived, if only to know
I had waked in this dusk of the woods to the flow
Of a streamlet that leaps down its dell to the lea,
Its waters a-sparkle and beckoning to me:

To have waked in the forest and marveled to hear
A bird at its matin song gladsome and clear:
"From dawn-blue to sun-glow I've haunted your dream
With the lure of Her love by the marge of the stream."

To have slept in my sorrow and wakened but now
With a kiss as of exquisite lips on my brow
And her call as of bells to a world that's reborn,
And a beat in my blood like the laughter of morn:

To have wandered and toiled in the deep forest aisles,
To have counted in darkness the wearisome miles,
To have slept for the dream's sake, and waked with Love's word
At the lips of the stream, at the heart of the bird.
—[Joseph I. C. Clarke, in September Smart Set.

"Edwin Milton Royle is going to write another play for me that will be a sequel to 'The Squaw Man,'" said William Faversham last week. "It will deal with the life and development in England of 'Jim' Carson's halfbreed son. I have obtained the rights of Bernard Shaw's newest play, 'Getting Married.' Mr. Shaw is anxious for Miss Opp to play the leading part in this country, and I will produce it soon after New Year's. I will produce a new play by an American author, Edward Childs Carpenter, 'The Barber of New Orleans.' My first New York production, however, will be of Charles Frederick Nirdlinger's 'The World and His Wife.' I have subleased Daly's Theater from the Shuberts, and after a brief season in Chicago and the West I expect to open in that theater about November 2 and remain all winter."

A Pilgrim Song.

Ah, little Inn of Sorrow,
What of thy bitter bread?
What of thy ghostly chambers,
So I be sheltered?
'Tis but for a night, the firelight
That gasps on thy cold hearthstone;
Tomorrow my load and the open road
And the far light leading on!

Ah, little Inn of Fortune,
What of thy blazing cheer,
Where glad thro' the pensive evening
Thy bright doors beckon clear?
Sweet sleep on thy balsam-pillows,
Sweet wine that will thirst assuage—
But send me forth o'er the morning earth
Strong for my pilgrimage!

Ah, distant End of the Journey,
What if thou fly my feet?
What if thou fade before me
In splendor wan and sweet?
Still the mystical city lureth—
The quest is the good knight's part;
And the pilgrim wends thro' the end of the ends
Toward a shrine and a Grail in his heart.
—[Charlotte Wilson, in Scribner.

Virtue.

Sweet Day, so cool, so calm, so bright,
The bridal of the earth and sky,
The dew shall weep thy fall tonight,
For thou must die.

Sweet Rose, whose hue, angry and brave,
Bids the rash gazer wipe his eye,
Thy root is ever in its grave,
And thou must die.

Sweet Spring, full of sweet days and roses,
A box where sweets compacted lie,
My music shows ye have your closes,
And all must die.

Only a sweet and virtuous soul,
Like seasoned timber, never gives;
But though the whole world turns to coal,
Then chiefly lives.
—[George Herbert.

A Good Old Friend.

We tell our troubles to our friends in quite a childish way;
'Most every friend an ear will lend to what we have to say;
And one friend gives us valued aid—he is a friend sublime;
One friend who helps to soothe our yelps is old Pa Time.

We love the friends who rally 'round when we true friendship need;
The friends who stand on either hand are steadfast friends, indeed;
And one friend should by all be praised in endless prose and rhyme;
One friend who heals and stills our squeals is old Pa Time.
—[Louisville Courier-Journal.

Baby's Laughter.

What rings so true as a baby's dear laughter;
Chrystalline, silvery, witchingly sweet;
Heedless of past, unaware of hereafter,
Tuned to the rhythm of pattering feet!

Bubbling and pure as a spring on a mountain,
Light as a thistledown wooed by the breeze;
Bright as a beam on the spray of a fountain,
Fresh as the whisper of wind in the trees.

Airily delicate, gleefully dancing,
Poised as a butterfly kissing a rose;
Rippling with merriment, blissful, entrancing—
Loviliest music that melody knows.
—[Richard Butler Glaenzer in the Metropolitan.

Horse's Sense of Danger.

That a horse has the instincts of impending danger was demonstrated the other afternoon when an animal belonging to M. D. Swisher, County Road Overseer, refused to act on the bit, ran up the mountainside and saved its rider from death in a cloudburst.

Swisher was riding along Box Cañon, a narrow gulch, when the horse turned from the road, and, paying no attention to the rider, ran up the mountainside and stopped on a ledge twenty feet above. Swisher was mystified until he saw water about eight feet deep rushing down the cañon tearing up bushes and upending everything movable. The water was from a cloudburst about half a mile further up the gulch and the horse had heard the noise of the rushing water before the rider.

Half a mile of the Box Cañon road leading to Florissant was washed out and bridges carried away. Swisher remained on the mountainside for an hour before he considered it safe to reenter the cañon.

Swordfish Fights Dogfish.

A 400-pound swordfish engaged in a battle with a school of dogfish was captured by the crew of the schooner Galatea, which arrived at T wharf yesterday, says the Boston Herald.

The Galatea was at anchor off Chatham Saturday when the crew noticed a commotion in the water. Two men rowed over in a dory and witnessed a remarkable battle. The swordfish was standing off a whole school of dogfish. The swordfish would charge right and left with his weapon. One fish after another was impaled upon his sharp sword, while his side cuts sent many of the small sharks out of the water. The dogfish closed in on him and tore huge pieces out of his sides. He shook them off each time, however.

In the meantime the fishermen returned to the schooner and got a harpoon. They drove this into the big fish and he gave up the fight.

Over 1000 Pairs Blankets We're After a New Record

It isn't the idea of a moment, nor that of a week, or a month. We've had September in mind since last September, when other records were won that set the mark way up, beyond the reach of months that had gone before, that really started Bullock's prestige as a leading Blanket House.

We started to plan and work then. We've fairly lived in the market since. Snapped up offering after offering. All the time looking forward to this great September record we must beat. We bought blankets in a way to open the eyes of dealers. Only good blankets. Only when savings unusual presented themselves. Constant watchfulness, wideawakeness and energy have won. Over 1000 pairs of splendid blankets are ready for what we have no hesitation in calling Los Angeles' greatest sale Tuesday.

HEREABOUTS.

LUIS M. DE CASTRO, one of the wealthiest men in Mexico, who has close affiliations with that government, has been a guest at the Van Nuys during the last week. Mr. Castro is reputed to be worth over $50,000,000. He is one of the most enthusiastic believers in the future of Mexico. During the last few days Mr. Castro has been in consultation with Los Angeles men in regard to the development of oil lands in the central part of the State. He states that he believes every advance made by the southwestern section of the United States redounds to the benefit of Mexico, and that the converse is also true. "In Mexico we believe that the line separating the two republics is fast becoming one of paper alone, and that in the near future the United States and Mexico will have interests so identical, both in a commercial and diplomatic sense, that business interests and capital of both countries will be so interchangeable that corporations will be able to transact business under one charter as freely in one country as in the other," said Mr. Castro.

E. A. Wall of Salt Lake, who is rated as one of the "copper kings" of the Rocky Mountain States, has been touring Southern California with his family for two months. He is now at the Alexandria, registered from "New Salt Lake." He says Salt Lake is growing so fast that after a short absence the city appears to the homecomer to have changed, and thus he uses the prefix "New." Mr. Wall is the man who gave the night clerk at the Hotel Virginia a check for $1000 for rescuing his two daughters, Misses Selma and Alice Wall, when they had been caught by the undertow in the surf at Long Beach.

"While Salt Lake City is my first love," said Mr. Wall last night at the Alexandria, "I have planned that in the future I will spend four months of each year in Los Angeles. I have experienced the delights of your winter and summer months, and I am sorely tried to decide during which period I will spend my four-month sojourn here."

A. C. Barber, president of the Barber Asphalt Company of Philadelphia, which threatened at one time to involve the United States and Venezuela in war, has been in Los Angeles during the past week, with the Alexandria as his headquarters. Mr. Barber says that President Castro of Venezuela is acting the part of a spoiled child. He says Castro believes that he can do as he pleases with foreign governments without fear of interference, owing to the Monroe doctrine, and that the man has been completely carried away with this idea. This, he says, has resulted in the enormous fines recently imposed upon foreign companies operating in Venezuela. Mr. Barber believes that there is a great future ahead of the asphalt industry in California, and says that while the immense boiling lake of asphalt in Venezuela will always be the greatest source of supply in the world, California may, through the manufacture of asphalt from the product of its oil wells, take a very prominent place in this industry.

A. B. C. Dohrmann of San Francisco, who is at the head of the Parmelee-Dohrmann Company of Los Angeles and San Francisco, spent the last week here. Mr. Dohrmann's business for years has been furnishing hotels of the higher class with chinaware. "It would surprise the layman to know what a quantity of chinaware is used in an ordinary hotel," he said last night. "A hotel of 300 rooms and a corresponding dining-room capacity will have enough chinaware, if put end to end, to form a chain about the entire city of Los Angeles. There is enough breakage each day in a big hotel to fill one wagon. The first-class hotels cannot use anything but frail, thin chinaware, and in the hurried handling, both by the service and the guests, there is a tremendous amount broken. There are companies which do nothing but furnish odd pieces of chinaware to be used to refill certain sets which have been broken up by one or two dishes being destroyed."

Maj.-Gen. W. S. McCaskey, U.S.A. (retired,) who makes San Diego his home, is a guest at the Van Nuys. Mrs. McCaskey is with him.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Gaunt of Topeka, Kan., arrived at the Angelus Friday night. Mr. Gaunt is second vice-president of the Santa Fé Railroad. He came in his private car and is making a tour of inspection of the company's lines in this State.

C. B. Seger, auditor for the Southern Pacific Company, with headquarters in San Francisco, is at the Alexandria.

Judge and Mrs. Edward T. Sanford of Knoxville, Tenn., are at the Angelus. Judge Knox sits on the United States Circuit bench in Tennessee.

Grove L. Johnson of Sacramento, who was married in Del Monte, arrived Friday with his bride at the Alexandria.

Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Bronson returned yesterday from a six months' trip to Europe.

J. E. Carr left yesterday morning for a two weeks' trip with his family to Yellowstone Park, returning by way of the Columbia River country and San Francisco.

IN THE LIMELIGHT.

CAPT. HIRAM AMES of Algonac, Michigan, holds the record on inland waters of handling more and bigger tows than any other tow boat captain, in his time. Ten vessels in the string behind his panting tug, bound down the lakes, was not an unusual sight and five steamers and seven barges in an upbound tow is claimed as a record established by him. His father before him was a lake sailor, his brothers, like him, became masters, and sons and grandsons have followed in their footsteps until today, with fifteen sailors, nine masters, four mates and two stewards the Ames family ranks first of all on the lakes.

Ben B. Laska of Denver, stung to the quick because a well-to-do Jew of that city was jeered because he could not sign a bond in court, has inaugurated a unique philanthropic educational project. Every one of the thousands of Jews in the city have been notified that if they will call at his residence in the evening they will be taught to read and write their own name in English and that he will provide free of cost any further education that may be desired.

Hugh A. Lancaster of South Sterling, Pa., has been in Uncle Sam's employ as postmaster since 1850, with the exception of five years, or over a half century. For fifty years he has also been interested in the sawmill and wood-turning industry. In 1862 he manufactured a large number of tent poles and flagstaffs for the United States government to be used during the Civil War. In 1864 he turned the first umbrella stick through a hollow mandrel. Since that time Mr. Lancaster claims to have made millions of grosses that have gone to nearly every country on both continents.

John W. Gates is about to carry out some ambitious plans at Fort Arthur, Tex., on Sabine Lake, near the Gulf of Mexico, where he has projected golf links to cost $965,000.

Two princesses, representatives of the only real American royalty, descendants of that Massasoit whose word was law to thirty villages and 30,000 red men, are living in poverty on the shores of Lake Assawampsett, Massachusetts. They are Teweeleema and Wootonekanuske. An effort is being made to secure for these last of the royal blood of the Wampanoags a material recognition of their rights and of the services which their ancestor, the mighty sachem Massasoit, performed for the pioneers of New England. For without Massasoit's friendship and protection the struggling colonists would have been swept from the land.

M. A. McGinnis, a convict in the Missouri State Prison, is one of the most skilful algebraists in the world. He has evolved a theory for the solution of numerical equations which is said to go beyond anything previously devised. But he has gone further in the solitude of his prison cell, and now announces that he has discovered a formula for the solution of literal equations as far as the twelfth degree. Mathematicians have declared that it was impossible to do what McGinnis says he can do. But McGinnis does not regard this discovery as his great achievement. He claims to have perfected a solution of numerical equations by logarithms and wishes Gov. Folk to submit his theory of the logarithmic solution of equation to a jury of mathematicians of national reputation.

President Underwood, of the Erie Railroad, has purchased an old-fashioned street car, the first in which he ever rode, and shipped it to Wauwatosa, Wis., where it will be set up as an outdoor reading room on the grounds of his ancestral home.

PEOPLE OF THE COAST.

MISS EVELYN CARRI, daughter of Judge Charles H. Carri of Portland, Or., performed a thrilling rescue a few days ago of two other young women who had been capsized from a canoe on the Willamette River. Both women were dressed in street costume and would surely have been drowned had not Miss Carri, who was in a bathing suit, gone to their rescue.

Superintendent of Schools Roncouveri of San Francisco will attend the educational convention in London as a delegate from the San Francisco Board of Education.

D. M. Watson of Portland, Or., has invented an instrument he declares will point out infallibly the exact situation of an ore body, or an underground water supply. His experiments cover twenty years, and he has already had good success in his practical tests of his machine.

Mrs. Mary E. Hart of San Francisco, who was appointed by the Governor of Alaska Territory to take charge of the Alaskan exhibit at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, will receive a similar honor at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition in Seattle next year if the wishes of the Alaskan people prevail. Many of the most influential citizens of the far north are urging Mrs. Hart's peculiar fitness for the position.

Dr. Mary Harriss, formerly of San Francisco, decided to settle permanently in Florence, Italy, after the fire and earthquake had left her the possessor of four front doorsteps in place of a fine apartment house. She is now Florence's only American woman physician, enjoying this enviable position by reason of having taken diplomas in Vienna and Berlin, these giving her a standing denied to those having only American diplomas.

Capt. Robert Quinton of Berkeley and Dr. J. Herbert Reeve of San Francisco are planning an expedition to the Seniavina Islands, lying in the Pacific to the north of Australia and west of New Guinea, for the purpose of recovering two huge prehistoric stone images that are believed to be remnants of a lost civilization that existed more than 2000 years ago.

OVER THE SEA.

LOPEZ DOMINGUEZ, who has just been invested by King Alfonso with the order of the Golden Fleece, is a senior captain general or field marshal, the ranking officer of the Spanish army and its most popular veteran. A nephew of Marshal Serrano, and possessed of the reckless daring of the Russian general, Skoboleff, and the level-headedness and strategical and technical skill which so distinguished the French general, Chanzy, he has taken part, either as a spectator or combatant, in every war in Europe during the last fifty years, receiving the cross of the Legion of Honor before Sebastopol.

Baron von Klitzing of Germany has invited Fritz Grawrt, an aëroplane inventor of New York, to come to Germany and exhibit his invention. He was formerly a naval constructor in the German navy and came to the United States with a fortune of $30,000, which has all been consumed in living expenses and aëroplane experiments.

Prof. Robert Koch, Prof. Martin Kirchner and Dr. Wilhelm von Leube have been appointed official German delegates to the Tuberculosis Congress, which will be held in Washington, September 21.

Dr. James Augustus Henry Murray, one of the great scolars of England and famous as editor of the Oxford New English dictionary, has been made a knight by King Edward. Percy William Bunting, editor of the Contemporary Review, who has reached the age of 72, was also made a knight on the King's recent birthday anniversary.

Thomas C. Hasten, head of the native police of Nugamaland, South Africa, is on a year's leave of absence and is visiting the United States. During the Boer War he distinguished himself as one of the body guards of Lord Roberts. During an engagement before Ladysmith he saved the commander's life and was rewarded with a Queen's medal with three bars and a King's medal with two bars.

Prof. Roy, the French Esperantist, is urging the establishment of an independent Esperanto State in Europe. The site he has selected for his experiment is a neutral strip of territory which lies on the frontier between Germany, Belgium and Holland, five miles from Aix-la-Chapelle. This territory is known as Moresnet, is situated in a pleasant valley and has a population of 3000 inhabitants.

Isaac Charles Johnson, the inventor of Portland cement, is still living in Gravesend, England, and active, at the age of 98. He was born in the year 1810, when George III was King and Jefferson was President, and when Napoleon was at the zenith of his power. Mr. Johnson won an education under many difficulties, as his parents were poor.

Mary Anderson was 50 years old on July 28, although to those who knew her in her best days before the footlights this seems impossible. She had been twelve years on the stage when she became Mme. de Navarro and settled down in the quaint old town of Broadway, England, with little to remind her of the glare and glitter of the footlights, and like the girl in the story book she seems to have been happy ever after.

EDUCATORS.

MISS MARGARET W. BAYNE of Kirkwood, Wash., has declared candidacy for the Democratic nomination for County Superintendent of Schools, on her record as a teacher in the public schools. She has taught all the twelve grades, and for six years was one of the principal instructors in the Kirkland High School.

Prof. E. D. Campbell, director of the chemical laboratories in the University of Michigan, lost his sight eighteen years ago through an accident. In spite of his affliction he has taken a high place in education and has made original researches of much value, especially in the chemistry of iron and cement.

President G. Stanley Hall of Clark University announces with solemnity that college professors must organize for self-protection and boycott all news gatherers as enemies to academic dignity and weight. He says: "College professors must do something to keep themselves from being made ridiculous. The time has come when a college professor cannot open his mouth without being made to look, speak and act like a fool."

Prof. John H. Lykens, head instructor of the Huntingdon Reformatory, Pa., is a veteran teacher. He is a native of Newry, Blair county, and began his career as a teacher in the schools of that county in 1861, and with the exception of four years has been in the educational harness ever since, making a service of forty-four years. In 1884 he was elected Superintendent of Schools for Blair county, and filled that office for six years. In 1890 he became head instructor at the Reformatory in Huntingdon, which position he still occupies.

Felix Adler, the well-known instructor and lecturer, was born in Alzey, Germany, August 31, 1851, the son of a Jewish rabbi. He came to America in early life, and was graduated from Columbia College in 1870, and subsequently studied at Berlin and Heidelberg, obtaining the degree of Ph.D. After his return to the United States he was professor of Hebrew and oriental literature at Cornell University from 1874 to May, 1876, when he established a new religious society in New York called the Society of Ethical Culture, to which he invariably speaks every Sunday.

Van den Broeck, the Belgian geologist, announces his conclusion that the curious twists observed in many tree trunks are produced by the earth's rotation. In support of his theory he points out that if conditions of growth were the cause the torsion should follow the earth's apparent path. But in at least 990 out of 1000 trees he has found the exact reverse to be the truth. The twist of the tree trunk is usually to the left in the Northern Hemisphere and to the right—as with the clock—in the Southern Hemisphere, like the turn of the cyclonic storms and water vortices. This difference is due to the earth's rotation.

ARMY AND NAVY MEN.

BRIG.-GEN. MEDOREM CRAWFORD, retired, though born in Oregon in 1844, has only cast one vote for President, that of 1872, when he found a chance to vote for President Grant. His service in the army of almost forty years covered almost every class of duty between the Atlantic and Pacific, including service in Alaska, just after that region had been purchased by the United States.

Col. Montgomery M. Macomb, Sixth Field Artillery, and Col. Joseph W. Duncan, Sixth Infantry, on duty at the War Department as members of the general staff, have taken up the duties which would devolve upon a chief of field artillery and chief of infantry, respectively, if those offices had been created by law, as in the case of the chief of coast artillery. Col. Macomb will have charge of matters particularly relating to the field artillery, and Col. Duncan will perform similar work in connection with infantry matters.

Capt. Hanson B. Black of the Coast Artillery Corps has forwarded to the War Department his report of his inspection of the Alaskan military telegraph lines, which he made last January, traveling 800 miles by dog sled to accomplish his work.

Lieut.-Col. Solomon W. Roessler, Corps of Engineers; Lieut.-Col. Orin B. Mitcham, Ordnance Department; Maj. Charles McK. Saltzman, Signal Corps; Maj. B. Frank Cheatham, quartermaster, and Capt. Robert S. Abernethey, Coast Artillery Corps, have been constituted a board ot prepare plans and specifications for a building in Washington, to contain office and storage facilities for the work and material pertaining to artillery, engineer, ordnance and signal stores at Coast artillery posts.

Col. John L. Clem, quartermaster-general of the Department of California, has been transferred from San Francisco to San Antonio, Tex., at his own request, and that of his millionaire father-in-law, a banker of that city. Lieut. Hazzard, who relieves Col. Clem as quartermaster-general, took part in the Spanish War in the Washington regiment. Later he received his baptism of fire in the Philippines as a captain of the Eleventh Volunteer Cavalry in several engagements. He was wounded in a skirmish in Ambos Camarines, and, later, found himself allied with Gen. Funston in the strategical capture of Aguinaldo.

Commander Harold P. Norton, one of the experts of the Naval Bureau of Steam Engineering, has been ordered to attend the conferences of naval officers at Newport, R. I., where warship designs, including considerations involving the propelling machinery, are being discussed. Naval Constructor Richard H. Robinson has also been added to the conferees.

ACTIVE WOMEN.

JULIANA LOPEZ of Guatemala City, aged 131 years, is believed to be the oldest woman in Central America, if not in the world. She is half a century older than Guatemala's independence, and, despite her years, is active and can walk two or three miles a day without apparent fatigue.

Hetty Green says the women of America "helped make hard times. All they live for, all they care for, is clothes—the latest shape in skirts. And they are none too particular how they get what they want, or who pays for it." She does not waste her money in this way. When dinner was announced on the train where she made the above remark, she produced an apple and three cookies from her reticule and ate them.

Gov. Guild of Massachusetts has appointed Miss Bambe and Miss Rockwell of Boston on the board of trustees for the new State Industrial School for Boys.

One of the best known of the women writers of France is Madame Delarue-Mardrus, who has published a number of books on subjects relating to the Orient. Her father is a well-known lawyer of Paris and she has traveled most of her life. Her husband was the author of an edition of the Arabian Nights.

Miss Ina Richmond, manager of the Magherafelt gas works at Dublin, is considered the best gas expert in Ireland, and is the first woman to hold such a post. She began in the postal service, and afterward studied the subject of gas in all its ramifications.

STATESMEN, POLITICIANS.

SENOR JOAQUIN NABUCO, Brazilian Ambassador at Washington, delivered an address at the sixty-eighth convocation of the University of Chicago, on the subject of "The Political Approach of the Two Americas." "You, with your high civilization, can do no wrong to any nation. Intimate contact with you will, under any condition, bring only good to you and the other party," was the remarkable tribute paid to the United States.

Congressman George L. Lilley of Connecticut seems assured of the Republican nomination for Governor. He acquired national notoriety at the last session of Congress by his unfounded charges against fellow-Congressmen for their connection with the alleged submarine boat lobby, but the Republicans of his State appear to have confidence in him.

Elienne Lavel, French Consul-General at New York, has been promoted by his government to Minister Plenipotentiary at Montevideo, Uruguay. He was married to Miss Amy May McKee of Oakland, Cal., last June.

Count Carl von Moltke, the Danish Minister to Italy, whose wife was Cornelia Van Rensselaer Thayer, daughter of Nathaniel Thayer of Boston, will succeed M. Brun, the Danish Minister at Washington, in the autumn.

IN THE BIG INDUSTRIES.

Heat Units in Coal.

The old idea that a ton of coal is a ton of coal, and that that is all there is to the matter, has passed away, and now large consumers of coal are making their purchases on the basis of its heat-producing qualities. It is estimated that at the present time between 4,000,000 and 5,000,000 tons of coal are purchased in the United States annually on the basis of analysis and paid for on the basis of heat-producing qualities. The United States government is buying coal for its Washington departmental buildings on this basis. Other large consumers are doing the same. Details of contracts differ, but the substance is analysis of samples taken at regular stated intervals to determine the British thermal units per pound of coal and settlement in accordance therewith, with certain bonus payments and penalties, as the heat-raising value may be above or below that agreed upon, and with certain limits below which the fuel will be rejected entirely.

The Fuel Engineering Company of Chicago was organized for the purpose of sampling and testing coal for consumers, and the basis of its contract between buyer and consumer is the number of net British thermal units delivered for 1 cent. Regular tests are made at intervals, and at the end of each month the number of British thermal units delivered in accordance with these tests is paid for on that basis.

Soft Wood Distillation.

The distillation of pine and soft woods for turpentine oils and charcoal is practically a southern industry. The chief plants for this industry are located in North Carolina, Florida and Georgia. Turpentine is the leading product, with charcoal, oils and tar as products of secondary importance. Long-leaf pine supplies the bulk of the raw material, 'though other species of pine, as well as other conifers, are used. On the whole, the showing for 1907 of this branch of the industry was satisfactory. While the inquiry disclosed only thirty-one plants in operation, as against thirty-two in 1906, the quantity of wood consumed increased from 50,234 cords to 61,149 cords, or 21.7 per cent. This increase was accompanied by an advance in the average cost per cord from $2.58 to $3.44. The total yield in 1907 of turpentine, the leading product, was 654,711 gallons, as against 503,427 gallons in 1906, an increase in quantity of 151,284 gallons, or 30.1 per cent., while the average value per gallon remained substantially the same—about 47 cents. The production of tars and oils increased from 773,128 gallons, valued at $81,797, to 1,152,752 gallons, valued at $127,531. The production of charcoal also showed marked increase, from 791,887 bushels, with a value of $44,381, to 1,158,364 bushels, with a value of $102,411.

Sulphur Production.

Sulphur production has increased so rapidly during the past few years that more than enough is now produced for home consumption, and the surplus is being sent to Europe, where it competes with the Sicily product. The phenomenal production of 294,153 long tons in 1906 was nearly equaled by the production of 1907, which amounted to 293,106 long tons, while the value of the product increased from $5,096,678 in 1906 to $5,142,850 in 1907.

Sulphur was produced in the United States in 1907 in Louisiana, Nevada, Wyoming, Utah and Colorado, the output of each of the States, except Louisiana, being small.

In 1906 the United States exported 22,237 long tons of sulphur, valued at $460,435; in 1907 the exports increased to 35,925 long tons, valued at $734,749. Most of this sulphur went to France. As the total imports were only 22,524 long tons, it is apparent that the domestic production exceeded the consumption by 13,402 tons. The output of Louisiana sulphur has, therefore, reached a point where it is able to supply the domestic requirements.

Most of the pyrite mined in this country is consumed in the manufacture of sulphuric acid. The production of this mineral in 1907 amounted to 247,387 long tons, valued at $794,949, a decrease in both quantity and value as compared with the output of 1906. Of the total output 124,740 tons, valued at $372,586, was furnished by Virginia; 51,950 tons, valued at $174,549, was furnished by California; New York and Massachusetts furnished 30,671 tons, valued at $126,991, and Alabama and Georgia 28,281 tons, valued at $85,307.

Glass Bricks.

The manufacture of glass bricks for building purposes, is one of the newest forms of industrial activity. Such a plant has recently been installed at Connellsville, Pa. The brick, which will be made from a white opalescent glass, have been approved by a number of prominent architects and engineers to whom samples were submitted. In construction they are hollow, and have receding ends. The main objects of their peculiar form are that they can be laid either hollow or cement filled as desired. OUR EACH

FROM THE PRESIDENT.

A Letter in Which Every Member of Each and All Will Be Interested in Reading.

The other day an Each and All girl said to me: "Do you know how long it has been since you wrote a letter for the page?" Time passes swiftly and I confess I do not know how many weeks may have gone by since I have sent a written word to "my girls," but this I can say, I have been working with head and heart, and very many days with hands and feet, for the cause of Each and All, trying to find solutions to the problems that face our society. We have grown in the six months that I have had the honor of being president, our many chapters are all in working order, and under well defined plans, need only more good earnest members to "carve success" after their names.

We have all felt the need of a few simple rules to regulate the machinery of our society, for all societies must have a mechanical factor.

The Executive Board, composed of good strong women, having at heart the interests of this society, are ready to put before you these articles of regulation, to ask you to adopt them and to do your share toward enforcing them, since rules without enforcement are of little avail.

I have been asked, "Why are you resigning?" "Bless your hearts, girls, I'm not resigning! I quote from the secretary's minutes the following:

"Monday evening, March 16, 1908, the second meeting of Each and All was held at The Times rest-room and the following officers were duly elected for six months: President, Mrs. Eva P. Reardon," etc.

So you see September 16 is the regular election day.

I know the needs of Each and All as well as if not better than any one connected with it, and while I should be glad to be a candidate for reëlection, and to keep on doing what I can for a society in which I have taken an active part for over three years, yet I do feel that it is right for me to ask you to put into office as president some one who can give it more time than I can and which it needs.

I have in mind, among our members, several women who have the time, who have executive ability combined with pleasing personality, and I am sure that some one of these women will be glad to take up the work where I must lay it down. At the same time, I hasten to add, that if you look for me now or at any future time, you will find me with your "rank and file" doing what I can to aid your president, if she wishes such help, taking my place in whatever work there is for me to do, and it is to be understood that at any time I stand ready to do all in my power to further the aims of Each and All.

I have called a special meeting for Wednesday, September 9, which I hope will be attended by all who can possibly do so. The Executive Board will report and put before you the draft of laws; then I wish to bring up for settlement the festival.

The Would-Be authors and the Musical Chapter are ready, the individual work and the work of the other chapters are not ready; but at the meeting of the Executive Board, suggestions were made, and approved by said board, which, I think, proves a solution. Please be on hand to hear what these suggestions are.

With good rules adopted by the society, a good president, a strong Exe-

BIRTHDAY CELEBRATED.

A Pleasant Party Given for Adelaide Goswell—Fine Musical Programme.

The little laughing lassie pictured here today is Adelaide Goswell, a remarkable young musician. Adelaide was tendered a birthday party at the home of Mrs. James G. Ogilvie, No. 933 South Union avenue, last Thursday, when the little girl attained her twelfth birthday anniversary.

Because Adelaide is so passionately fond of music, her birthday celebration was in the nature of a musicale. All of her little musician friends were invited, and all contributed numbers to the programme. Harriet Boothe and Elizabeth Parsons's piano solos were especially fine, and little Lawrence Leland Jonas, who is also pictured here as a dainty colonial dame, delighted the guests both old and young, with his recitation, "When Grandma Danced the Minuet," which was given in costume with a quaint grace and inimitable style.

Little Adelaide herself gave the following numbers on the piano: "On Wings of Song" (Mendelssohn-Liszt,) Sonata in A (Scarlatti,) "Warum" (Schumann,) Etude in G Flat (Chopin,) Intermezzo from Op. 44, No. 4 (Leschetisky,) Prelude in B Minor (Mendelssohn,) "Soirées de Vienne," No. 6 (Schubert-Liszt,) "Perpetuum Mobile" (Weber.)

It will be seen from this programme that this little girl is already a remarkable pianist, for these numbers are found upon the programmes of artists. All the guests were amazed at the truly wonderful playing of Adelaide.

She is a lovable, unspoiled child, for one so talented. She loves her pets and her books, and is very fond of fun. Adelaide had the distinction of being the youngest entertainer at the recent Chautauqua at Venice, where her playing brought much applause.

Calendar of Chapter Meetings.

Animal Aid Chapter, 2.30 p.m., Tuesday, Sept. 8, with Mrs. W. L. Yard, No. 2637 La Salle ave. Fancy Workers' Chapter, 2 p.m., Wednesday, Sept. 9, with Mrs. W. E. Wells, No. 1015 East Ninth street.

Special general meeting, 2:30 p.m., Wednesday, Sept. 9, Summer House, Westlake Park.

Invalid Cheer Chapter, 2 p.m., Tuesday Sept. 8, with Mrs. B. Fry, No. 124 Witmer street.

About Animal Aid.

The chairman of Animal Aid Chapter submits the following report:

"The Animal Aid Chapter met at No. 2637 La Salle avenue, Tuesday, Sept. 1. Those present were very enthusiastic in the discussion of plans for future work. A visitor, well versed in animal aid and anti-vivisection work, gave us a splendid talk, and many new ideas were gathered.

"We feel much encouraged over the interest shown in this chapter, and hope we may hear from all who are in favor of justice and mercy to animals. We are also anxious to come in touch personally with each one who sends a letter to the page on this subject.

"We are distributing literature and striving to interest people in the work, and cordially invite all who are interested to come to our meetings and let us tell you our plans. We meet again on Tuesday, Sept. 8, at 2.30 p.m., at the same address, and hope for a full attendance."

An Invitation.

The chairman of the chapter on the Study of the Bible as Literature extends the following invitation to all interested members:

"To the number who are interested in the study of the Bible as literature, if you will send your addresses to me by kindness of our editor of Each and All page, I will send you dates and places of meeting for the coming six months. As you will note upon receiving the memoranda, that the places of meeting are private homes, you will understand why the invitation is given only to those interested in this beautiful study.

"To those who cannot attend but wish the lessons for home study, send your address with stamps to the editor for forwarding, and I will send the lessons to you. To members of the class in Los Angeles I will send the memoranda of dates and places of meeting at once, and also to other members of the Each and All group of whom I have the addresses.

"To members of Each and All in other places who have not enrolled in this chapter, shut-ins, stay-at-homes, invalids, may receive a larger outlook on life through the windows of this study of literature. It has broadened my life so much that I am glad to give a glimpse of its beauties to Each and All, and believe that you will be glad to receive the first six lessons. Sincerely yours, with love for Each and All."

The Art Chapter.

The chairman of the Art Chapter makes the following report:

About the Art Chapter there is not a great deal to report. So many of our members have heard and responded to the "call of the wild" that the chapter is down to a few faithful ones, to whom sketching is a joy.

The chapter's last trip was to Echo Park, where we got some pretty sketches, where the lake, bridged by a curved oriental-looking structure, reflected the verdure and the merry boating parties. The stately swans were accommodating enough to sail into our picture, pruning themselves as if they realized their grace and the favor they had conferred of adding their beauty to the picture. Such a jolly place to take luncheon, too. A great furnace is ready for those who wish their hot coffee or tea. Tables, a fountain and woods around make you forget you are so near the city's din. The indoor meetings have had to be postponed until fall. No one wishes to be indoors this weather, but it is so delicious out. Good art students, come, meet with us. Even if you don't wish to sketch, bring your art ideas or a clipping on an artist or the art subject. You will enjoy it and it is so helpful where a number of bright people with a common interest exchange ideas. Each girl is at liberty to work in her own way and sketch where she pleases; then compare notes. All girls who are interested in this chapter are invited to join us. My address may be had from the editor of this department.

Readers' Chapter.

The chairman of the Readers' Chapter submits the following:

The Readers held their last meeting until October 1 with one of the members at Long Beach last Thursday, August 20. We have to thank Mrs. Hughes for her cordial invitation and for her pleasing ability as hostess, in giving us a most delightful all-day outing.

Several interesting articles were handed in under the current topics part of our programme. "What is Worth While," by Anna Brown, a short ethical sketch, was read. We then adjourned to further enjoy our outing.

Two new members have sent in their names. We will be glad to welcome them at No. 1764 West Twenty-second street, Thursday, October 1.

Co-operative Housekeeping.

J. A. of Los Angeles would like to keep house on the coöperative plan with an Each and All girl.

I wonder if there is some one in the ranks of Each and All who wants to undertake the study of architecture? Also if there is some business girl who would like to live with me. I live rather far out, with my baby, and would give room and board very reasonable to some refined woman, or we could live on the "coöperative" plan, sharing expenses.

I had hoped, long before this to be able to meet with the Readers Chapter, but have not been able to accomplish it as yet.

Hoping one of these propositions will appeal to some of our girls.

Architecture is rather a departure from the regular line of studies pursued by girls, still there are many girls members of Each and All Society, and it is possible some of them may be interested in this. The member's address will be cheerfully furnished upon application.

An Enthusiastic Member.

Mrs. N. F. S. is a new and enthusiastic member of Each and All Society of girls. Her letter follows:

I have intended acknowledging receipt of your good favor and list of names of "Shut-ins," but have been a shut-in myself for a little while and thus far most of the writing I have done has been letters to the "shut-ins," of which I have written four. Many thanks for the list, giving this privilege. It is, indeed, our own "blessed privilege," as it seems to me, to find the ways and means to reach and help others, no matter what their need, and, the one who can point the way to an object of need is the welcome one to whom most gratitude is due. Think of being "in bed 15 years," in a "home for incurables," "paralyzed for 15 years," or "a shut-in for 22 years." Is there not something to do for those of us who are free and have much?

Even the little we may do by correspondence is much to the afflicted one and fulfills our pledge. Let us rally 'round the "shut-in" until our invalid chapter outnumbers all others.

Recently I learned of a case in our city of which I shall learn fully as soon as I can go free (of sciatica) to find it, and there will be one more worthy name added to our list of "shut-ins," a truly pathetic one. I am deeply interested in the "Mothers' Chapter," but still await further initiation, which is promised soon, by "Round Robin" letter. If I only felt competent to add my contribution to the letters about whether business girls make "good housewives," etc., I might add a little experience of interest perhaps, all of which I assure you would reflect only credit to the business wife and mother. But, I should feel to require time and training with our dear "Would-Be Authors" before I could venture to submit so important a literary effort. Meantime I thoroughly enjoy the contributions of others. With love wholly of the Each and All variety. Fraternally yours.

EACH AND ALL MOTTO.

Golden thoughts, golden deeds,
Rid life's garden of its weeds.

OUR PLEDGE:

"To make one another happy, to lighten one another's burdens, to share one another's cares, to be lifters, not leaners, to make the world a little sweeter place to live in, to be mutual encouragers, never discouragers of any one, to start songs, not complainings, and to do every day something beautiful, some kindness which will cheer and strengthen another."

Your Round Robin letter will reach you in due course. Why not tell the girls of your opinion about business girls making good wives? This should not be made a literary effort, but just a plain statement of opinions, based on experience or observation, and it will interest the readers of our page.

Business Girls as Wives.

Star of Los Angeles adds her say to the popular query:

The question has been asked, "Do business girls make good wives?" My answer is, give the average girl half a chance, be she business girl or no, and she will make a good wife. Because from the creation of the first woman down to the present making good as a wife has been characteristic of women. Many business girls are fast becoming bachelor girls, because they see the vain attempts many of their sisters have made to be good wives, their dream of happiness often ending in the divorce court.

Why should not business girls make as good wives as girls having no business knowledge? Should they not make better ones, because of the knowledge they have gained in battling with the stern realities of life? Should they not therefore appreciate home life the more? Men and women have such different views of the subject of what constitutes a good wife, that they fail to agree; to the majority of men a good wife means one who intuitively reads his every thought and hastens to obey his every command. If he be sad or happy she must smile to please him no matter about her own aches or woes for is she not his wife? An instrument to be played upon at will and as his words vary so must the music change to suit his pleasure. Down through long ages woman has been battling to gain her freedom, slowly but surely she has advanced and eventually she will come into her own. When man recognizes the fact that woman stands equal with him in all things, then will woman have come into her own and then will business girls and all other girls become good wives, because then will they have good husbands to aid them. But the millennium is not yet.

Would Visit Prisons.

Mrs. L. D. of Burbank thinks the Each and All girls might add another chapter to their society.

A great many aids and helps are included in the work of the Each and All Society, but I have in mind a work which I have never seen mentioned and which seems to me ought to be included in the society work, and hope it will meet the approval of the members of some of the chapters.

My plan for the work would be for the members to visit the City and County Jails once a week and distribute flowers and good literature and kind thoughts and words among the unfortunate inmates who have failed in finding the key to right living, perhaps more through circumstances than through any real fault of their own.

Does it not seem terrible that one must look through prison bars before realizing the value of human sympathy? If these unfortunates could come closer in touch with good and noble women it might inspire them to turn over a new leaf when they have once more regained their freedom.

The Each and All Sunbeams, I think, would be a fitting name to give this new chapter, for few sunbeams ever penetrate the gloomy walls of a prison. This work might be made a part of the Invalid Cheer or Shut-in chapter, as these poor creatures are indeed shut-ins.

We all know what tender emotions flowers bring forth. They are so plentiful and grow so easily in this beautiful land. Good reading matter could also be distributed.

I had not given much thought to this work until recently, when I read the accounts of women prisoners and the terrible conditions they found existing in the jails; it set me to thinking and wishing that something might be done to better their miserable existences while there. MRS. L. D. (Burbank, Cal.)

The girls of the Each and All society do not pretend to do but a very small fractional part of all the good which is to be done in this big world, but even that small part requires much work. The work you mention is beautiful and may be taken up in time.

A Pomona Girl.

A girl from New York State, now in Pomona, Cal., asks to join our band.

I am begging for admission to your charming circle, for I think the pledge is beautiful. I am particularly interested in the Post-Card Exchange and the Musical Chapter.

I am a newcomer to this State, my former home being in New York State, but I intend to make Pomona my future home. This is a charming little city. I am just carried away with the beautiful trees and flowers which grow here.

I would like to receive letters from members of the society and exchange post-cards. I love to save clippings from papers and magazines, particularly poems and songs. I would be glad to send some of these to shut-in and invalid members.

I wish the Each and All Society every success. F. C. P.

You are indeed welcome as a member of our Each and All Society of girls. No doubt some of our members will accept your invitation to correspond.

Lives According to Pledge.

Mrs. E. T. W. of Los Angeles wishes to join the Each and All Society, and says she has always ordered her life according to pledge.

I have been a reader of the E. and A. page from the beginning. My daughter was a member till she married and moved away. I thought then I would join the society, but put it off until today. I want to be able to help some with the fair. I can take the E. and A. pledge, for I have tried to live according to this rule for years. I like the postcard exchange, and I send a stamped envelope for particulars, hoping to be of some help to the E. and A. and to hear from you soon. I am a friend to all girls, old and young. (MRS.) E. T.

Your offer to help with the festival is gladly accepted. Can you not attend the called meeting for Wednesday, notice of which will be found in the calendar.

A Brand New Member.

Here is a brand new member, signing herself "M. R.," of Los Angeles, who loves the pledge of the society.

I would like to join your Each and All Society. I inclose a self-addressed and stamped envelope for membership card and would like to join the Invalid Cheer Chapter and the Postcard Exchange. I think the pledge is very beautiful and shall try to live up to it. I will appreciate any information you can give me, and hope to hear from you very soon. M. R. (Los Angeles.)

The members of Invalid-Cheer Chapter are anxious to swell their membership list for there is much work for willing hands to do. You will be put in communication with the chairman of the chapter. Names and addresses from the post-card list are furnished to Each and All girls upon request.

Wants List of Shut-ins.

Mrs. G. of Long Beach is a business girl who observes her Each and All pledge in her every-day life.

Please send me the names and addresses of our foreign postcard collectors, also names and addresses of "shut-ins." I joined the E. and A. Society three years ago. Am constantly on the go (expect to be here only a week,) so am hardly long enough in one town to have an address, but try to live up to our pledge by doing good when and where I can.

I wonder if any of the readers of the Each and All department can give me any information regarding Luther Burbank and his wonderful knowledge of trees and flowers. MRS. C. G. (Long Beach, Cal.)

The list of our "shut-in" members will be sent to you without delay. Why do you not join the Invalid-Cheerers? You could keep in touch with the work of the chapter through correspondence.

A Lonely Little Girl.

A little Burbank girl signing herself E. F. wants addresses of shut-in members. The letter follows:

Will you please give me a list of shut-ins, and addresses of some of our girls, for I am lonely out here, at this time of the year.

I am so glad that we are getting along so nicely with our festival.

If you please, send me addresses of some of our shut-ins, for my mother is getting better and now wishes to help others. Please let me know if there are any girls belonging to the Each and All Society living out here. E. F. (Burbank.)

The shut-in list will be sent to you for your mother. We shall have to look over our big membership roll for those Burbank members and their names will be forwarded to you.

Needs a Wheel Chair.

Here is a letter from our dear, sick girl in San Fernando Valley. It is a private letter, written in answer to one from the editor of this department, and is published because it is of interest to our girls:

I was more than pleased to hear from you. It surely did me a world of food to know I have friends who are so willing and kind to help me, now, when I need it so much.

I wrote to Mrs. McG. today, I do hope I can get the work to do as I need it so badly. I will have to let my wheel chair go back as I am not able to pay for it, but the young lady is so good and kind that she lets me use it yet.

I am stronger in some ways. I am able to be up in the chair most all the time, and walk a little. Oh, you don't know how thankful I am. It is a heavy burden to take care of three little ones when one hasn't good health. If I could follow my trade I could make all ends meet. I am a nurse. Now, perhaps I could help some young mother in telling her how to care for her little one.

I am willing, my dear, to do anything I can to help others out, so if you find a place for me to fill, put me in; I'll be so glad to help.

Many, many thanks to you for your kindness to me. I remain your loving friend. S. W.

Dear Each and All Girls, this wheel chair should not be allowed to be sent back if we can help it. It means so much to our dear girlie, who, while sick and is trying so hard to help herself and the dear babies. Part of our pledge is "to lighten each other's burdens." Now is the time to lighten this girl's burden, not later. The editor gives herself the privilege of starting a fund with $1 with which to purchase the wheel chair. Now let's dispatch this matter quickly, girls. Who gives quickly, gives doubly. Send your pennies, dimes, quarters or whatever you will to this department.

Willing to Help.

"Versatile Venona" of Los Angeles is willing to help "A Times Subscriber" if he or she will send address.

To a "Times Subscriber" I will say that if said subscriber will send address with stamps to the editor of the Each and All page, to be forwarded to "Versatile Venona" she will be glad to send a copy of the rules for cure of rheumatism, for it can be cured if one is in the possession of the right remedy, and has at the same time the inclination to follow it to a successful end. It cannot be cured by medicines or appliances of any kind. It is caused by errors in diet and errors in habits of life. It is either acute or chronic. Each of these stages calls for a different treatment. If the "subscriber" is "rheumatiky" in general, then rules for eliminating the uric acid will be sent. If suffering acutely, the rules for treating acute rheumatism will be sent. The treatment is scientific, and consists of a code of diet, breathing and other exercises, and a code of wearing apparel. It will cost nothing but the keeping of the Each and All pledge.

I am so busy and have so little time for work outside of business hours that am glad to help Each and All by writing. I have also a simple exercise that will cure pneumonia in its most terrible stages, that I would be glad to send any one. It is well to learn it before one needs to use it. If "Times Subscriber" will note in communication of August 23, that I state I am a member of a "private club of scientific humanitarians," and of course, our treatments are not for the general public, who are generally curious only, so "Marguerite Winnifred," even though a "Would-be Author," would have no right to have the rules for rheumatism plublished, which were sent her for her use.

Dear girls, are you not glad there is no age limit to prevent girls from joining the Each and All group? The pledge actually makes one feel young. I feel quite sixteen, and I am really old enough to vote.

I have been very much interested in the discussion, "Do Business Girls Make Good Wives?" I think a wife must have a keen business interest in making a home. To a true woman "home" implies husband, children, and, perhaps the benedicition of the presence of an aged parent. Not only must a woman have a business training, the knowledge of the value of time, dollars and cents, but a knowledge of the common-sense things of life. If she wishes to be a good wife, and successful as a home maker, she must also understand the harmony of colors, forms, sounds, the value of ethics, the relation of food values to the growth and sustenance of the body. She must know how to prevent disease—physical, moral, mental and spiritual—from entering any inmate of her home. For her home is the sheltering tabernacle of the inmates thereof, and each inmate is a "temple for the indwelling of the Holy Spirit," so that it behooves her if she understands how to love rightly to make sure that her education includes the knowledge of how to prevent the ills of life. By all means, dear girls, get a business education, and add the knowledge that will multiply your joys, subtract your sorrows and that will never divide your interests in home, husband and children, thus you make it worth while to live in this dear old world. Happiness and peace will reign in your own home, and the influence of that happy home will go to Each and All.

If this address is sent to this department, it will be forwarded to V. V. and she will undoubtedly be able to aid you.

Awards to English Spinsters.

A quaint custom has been observed in connection with Holsworthy fair, in the awarding of a money prize to the young woman "generally esteemed as the most deserving, most handsome and most noted for her quietness and attendance at church."

Miss Rosa Bassett was selected for the honor of fulfilling all these requirements, and became the possessor of £1 10s., in accordance with a singular bequest of a former rector.

Under the same will the sum of 5 shillings is annually given to the spinster over sixty years of age who "is noted for the like virtues, and is not in receipt of parish pay." This gift was presented to Miss Ching.

It is three years since any award was made of this money, spinisters being very scarce at Holsworthy.—[London Standard.

BIRTHDAY CELEBRATED.

A Pleasant Party Given for Adelaide Goswell—Fine Musical Programme.

The little laughing lassie pictured here today is Adelaide Goswell, a remarkable young musician. Adelaide was tendered a birthday party at the home of Mrs. James G. Ogilvie, No. 1933 South Union avenue, last Thursday, when the little girl attained her twelfth birthday anniversary.

Because Adelaide is so passionately fond of music, her birthday celebration was in the nature of a musicale. All of her little musician friends were invited, and all contributed numbers to the programme. Harriet Boothe and Elizabeth Parsons's piano solos were especially fine, and little Lawrence Leland Jonas, who is also pictured here as a dainty colonial dame, delighted the guests both old and young, with his recitation, "When Grandma Danced the Minuet," which was given in costume with a quaint grace and inimitable style.

Little Adelaide herself gave the following numbers on the piano: "On Wings of Song" (Mendelssohn-Liszt,) Sonata in A (Scarlatti,) "Warum" (Schumann,) Etude in G Flat (Chopin,) Intermezzo from Op. 44, No. 4 (Leschetisky,) Prelude in B Minor (Mendelssohn,) "Soirées de Vienne," No. 4 (Schubert-Liszt,) "Perpetuum Mobile" (Weber.)

It will be seen from this programme that this little girl is already a remarkable pianist, for these numbers are found upon the programmes of artists. All the guests were amazed at the truly wonderful playing of Adelaide.

She is a lovable, unspoiled child, though so talented. She loves her dolls and her books, and is very fond of fun. Adelaide had the distinction of being the youngest entertainer at the recent Chautauqua at Venice, where her playing brought much applause.

Lois Francis Chambers's Party.

Another birthday party of the week was given in honor of Lois Frances Chambers, the beautiful little blue-eyed daughter of Dr. and Mrs. W. K. Chambers of No. 686 West Avenue 54, who was 6 years old last Saturday.

Fifteen little friends of Lois came to the party; the house was decorated with the little hostess's favorite flowers—baby roses and sentorias. A jolly time was spent in playing games, the merriest of which were "Peanut Scramble" and "Musical Chair." Dora Ewald captured the prize for gathering the largest number of peanuts in the "scramble." Marion Haswell won another prize in the "musical chair" game.

Lois received many pretty presents in honor of her birthday. She is a very dear little girl, with a sunny, happy disposition. She has quite a talent for music, playing the piano by ear for more than a year; she is now learning to read music, and is doing very nicely. Lois also sings very sweetly, and is not at all timid or shy when asked to sing, for she likes to give her friends pleasure.

not tell who it was, when Lois spoke up and said, "It looks like foxy grandpa to me."

Lois loves her dollies, and also loves to play house, she has been attending kindergarten for a year.

The little ones who attended Lois's party were: Dorothy and Robert Cushman, Dora and Ruth Ewald, Veo and Melvin Caldwell, Marion Haswell, Margaret Ashton, Harold Roberts, Katharine Stafford, Bernice Jackson, William Sullivan and Malcolm Chambers. Mrs. Chambers and Miss Agusta Follmer helped entertain the little people.

Children's Bowling Tournament.

The chief interest of a bowling tournament recently held at Idyllwild was centered in the children's exhibition, when, it is reported, that the skill shown by some of the youngsters was truly remarkable for their years. Chalmers Wright and Dorothy Wellborn, two of the tots who participated in the exhibition, have reached the mature age of 5 years.

lin Wellborn made a score of 207, thus capturing first prize, a hand-painted photo of Lily Cañon Falls. Each contestant was rewarded for the effort made by a pretty gift, also by a view photo donated by the camp photographer, Mr. Gray. Every child in attendance, too, was presented with a souvenir of the occasion.

Fun from the Tots.

Jimmy had his weak points as an example of the result of modern educational methods, but his brain was of excellent quality. When the teacher looked at him and inquired, coldly: "What is a synonym, James?" he was ready with his answer: "It's a word that you can use when you don't know how to spell the one you thought of first," he replied, cheerfully—[The Monitor.

"Now, Arthur," said the housekeeper, according to Answers, "I'm going upstairs for a moment; but while I'm away I want you to look well after these nice white aprons I've put before the fire to air, because the Duchess of Blankton is coming to call today, and I want the girls to look particularly smart."

Little Arthur nodded wisely, and the houskeeper, satisfied, departed on her higher mission.

A few minutes later, however, she heard the young boy's voice calling to her from below.

"Well?" she answered, "what is it?"

"Please," called up the embryo chef, "please, are they done when they's brown?"

Here is a story related by a man of letters: "I was walking in the country one day with a young woman. In a grove we came upon a boy about to shin up a tree. There was a nest in the tree, and from a certain angle it was possible to see in it three eggs. 'You wicked little boy,' said my companion, 'are you going up there to rob that nest?' 'I am,' replied the boy. 'How can you?' she exclaimed; 'think how the mother will grieve over the loss of her eggs.' 'Oh, she wont care,' said the boy, 'she's up there in your hat.'"

Smart, Saving Youngsters.

This story related of the school children of West Des Moines, Iowa, should prove an inspiration to our children of Los Angeles, for this example could be followed with great profit to them.

Pupils of West Des Moines public schools have $20,000 soaked down in good United States currency in bank. Over 3000 school children of that city have been induced to save money and start bank accounts. More than 1500 of them have deposits of about $10 each.

The credit of the achievement belongs first to the Mothers' Congress of Iowa, which organized the Penny Association in October, 1901. The plan used in West Des Moines is simpler than that of other cities.

The principal of each building is supplied with stamps and folders in which fifty one-cent stamps can be pasted. Every Friday at a certain hour the principal is in her office to sell stamps to the children.

When the child has filled the folder with the fifty stamps, he may go to the bank, always on Saturday morning, and either get 50 cents in cash for the sary printed matter from the bank without any expense to the district, and she makes an accounting with the bank every week, for the number of stamps she has sold.

The financial affairs are controlled by a board of directors representing the bank, the school and the Mothers' Congress. This board meets the first Tuesday in each month from October to June to receive the report of the banker and discuss the affairs of the association. It has worked admirably without any difficulties or complaints, and has educated not only the children but in many cases the parents as well.

The principals, as a rule, do not find the work much trouble, for they have only to get a cent for every stamp and have no accounts to keep with the children. They are even allowed car fare for taking the money to the bank on Saturdays.

The deposits now amount to nearly $20,000. Since its organization the Penny Provident Association has induced the saving of about $35,000, of which less than half has been withdrawn. The youthful depositor to draw out his money must have the written order of his parent or guardian.

The amount of the deposit, however, is of secondary consideration. The object of the system is to establish the habit of saving among the children and teach them a little about business methods. The results have been very satisfactory. The decrease in gum chewing and candy eating has been noticeable.

The young depositors are discouraged from saving merely for the sake of hoarding. Many of the most persistent say their money is to be used to go to college after they get through the public school. During the disastrous floods two years ago the Penny are much larger and that they decrease and are drawn upon during the winter months.

Animal Legends.

In Palestine, where several religions exist side by side, legends have crossed and intermingled in such a way as to make a distinct folklore. A collection of stories from "Folklore in the Holy Land," by the Rev. J. E. Hannauer, contains many Bible legends in new forms and with humorous additions. One explains how the mosquito came to buzz and why the swallow's tail is forked.

After the fall of man the serpent missed the reward which the evil one had promised him—namely, the sweetest food in the world. An angel was appointed to assign to every creature his food and dwelling place. The serpent asked for human flesh. But Adam protested and pointed out shrewdly that as nobody had ever tasted human flesh, it was impossible to maintain that it was the most luscious of food. Thus he gained a year's respite for the race.

Meanwhile the mosquito was sent round the world with instructions to taste and report upon the blood of every living creature. At the end of twelve months it was to report in open court the result of its researches.

Now, Adam had a friend in that sacred bird, the swallow, which annually makes a pilgrimage to Mecca and all holy places. This bird shadowed the mosquito all the twelve months until the day of the decision. Then as the insect was on its way to the court the swallow met it openly and asked what flesh and blood it had found sweetest.

"Man's," replied the mosquito.

"What?" asked the swallow. "Please say it again, for I am rather deaf."

On this the mosquito opened its mouth wide to shout, and the swallow darted in its bill and plucked out the insect's tongue.

The Disobedient Chick.

Said a downy young duck
To a fluffy old chick:
"Come down to the water and swim!
By a fine bit of luck,
The right path I can pick,
And the horse trough is full to the brim."

"I really don't dare!"
Was the prudent reply;
"I have often been cautioned, you know,
With the greatest of care
To walk where it was dry,
And with giddy young ducks never go."

She replied, with a sneer,
"To me it is clear
To your mother's tail feathers you're tied;
You run at her cluck!"
Said this naughty duck,
"I don't think you have very much pride."

The chick hung his head,
While with blushes he said:
"I never have learned how to swim;
You see that by my toe;
But I would like to go—
I suppose I can walk on the rim."

With his thin yellow legs,
Like long scaly pegs,
He walked on the perilous rim;
He watched his friend dive
And come up still alive,
Though she paid no attention to him

Sale of Auction Silks

Prices Average 50c to 60c on the Dollar

To the left we reproduce the front page of the catalogue issued by Townsend & Montant, concerning the auction sale of 4500 pieces of plain and fancy silks.

We were the only Los Angeles store to attend this sale directly. We consider it to be the best, most important and most unusual sale of its kind. You see, there was 275,000 yards of high grade silks thrown on the market. We bought only the best of it, and we're going to place it on sale at prices that will make things hum in the silk section. Sale will continue Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. The opening day will be most important, Tuesday. These prices prevail.

Labor Day the store will be closed all day. Tuesday, with the impetus of this page of truly remarkable values, the store will experience a day of wonderful trading.

Fall stocks are rapidly filling in; in many departments the showing is practically complete. The garment section is blossoming out with the newest of the new, and the millinery stock bids fair to outrival any previous showing.

Two great trade events—the sale of auction silks, and a manufacturer's stock of winter coats, together with the Azusa shoe stock—make a trio of bargain features worthy of the attention of every shopper. Make the Broadway your shopping headquarters and save money.

The most remarkable sale opportunity that has presented itself in months. $10 for the new coats, the kind that you will be obliged to pay $16.50 to $30 for.

It's a sale with a definite purpose; we've planned for it, and the manufacturer has aided us. When our buyer was in the East he approached one of the big manufacturers and said: "I want to open up the coat season in Los Angeles with a sale that will set the town talking." And the result is we will be able to offer $16.50 to $30 coats—300 of them—at a uniform price of $10 each.

They're made of broadcloth and kersey, in full and hip satin lined effects. They are here in black and all the new shades, handsomely finished, light and medium weight; coats that are suitable for almost any 7-8 and full length styles. We're going to make this a one-day event, but we don't expect them to last throughout the day, so we say no C. O. D.'s, no exchanges.

Remember
TUESDAY
Not Monday

We've Illustrated Two of the Styles

We venture to say you will not be able to duplicate the offer this season. If you contemplate buying a coat, don't fail to be here bright and early Tuesday.

Important Embroidery Sale

It's to be a sale that will stand out as a feature in comparison with the ordinary embroidery events. In the first place, the embroidery was bought well; we had our pick of several lines, and we practically named the price. In the second place, the designs are all practically new, well worked on cambric and swiss, pretty patterns in blind, semi-blind, open work, shadow, repousee Anglaise and eyelet effects. Embroidery for corset covers, flouncings and plenty of insertions, edges and bands. The values range from 25c, 35c and 50c up to 75c yard. The sale price will be 15c yard Tuesday.

CHURCH NOTICES—

With Place and Hour.

YE OLD MISSION, SAN GABRIEL, AND all pertaining thereto has been placed in charge of the Congregation of the Immaculate Heart. The new cloister or parish house is nearing completion, and the new chapel is also far advanced; all possible restorations will be carefully and correctly made. Gardens and patios will be restored. The wells and fountains will again be made to flow; flowers and shrubbery to flourish. It is the purpose of the new custodian to make of this first and grandest of the old missions a delightful and peaceful resort for all the people—a national pilgrim's shrine. The first annual fiesta-bazaar of the harvest moon, for the building and restoration fund, will be inaugurated October 19th to 25th. Many mission treasures are now being placed on exhibition, which have never before been open to public view. There will be a large and interesting collection of paintings, vestments, records, implements, curios, etc. All who desire to assist in any way in this work are invited to visit the Mission Saturday afternoon, Sept. 12. LIVE AND LET LIVE.

Never before in the history of occult science has a man of PROF. W. E. KING'S professional standing consented to place his services at the disposal of the public for such a nominal consideration. Realizing that this city has been overrun with pretenders and that many of its citizens are anxious to visit a genuine psychic PROF. W. E. KING has decided to place his consultation fee within the reach of all.

Years of study, travel in far eastern lands, and endless experience, coupled with rare psychical gifts, have made him the world's greatest living exponent of HINDOO and OCCULT MYSTICISM.

DO YOU WISH TO KNOW
How can I have good luck?
How can I succeed in business?
How can I make home happy?
How can I conquer my enemies?
How can I marry the one I choose?
How can I marry well?
How soon can I marry?
How can I conquer my rival?
How can I make any one love me?
How soon will my lover propose?
How can I get a letter?
How can I get a position?
How can I remove bad influences?
How can I control any one?
How make distant ones think of me?
How can I settle my quarrel?
How can I hold my husband's love?
How can I hold my wife's love?
PROF. W. E. KING tells all—never asks a question.

EXTRAORDINARY PSYCHIC POWER, combined with his superior knowledge of occult force, enables him to read human life with unerring accuracy from infancy to old age; his powers are wonderful and indisputable; his advice is reliable, his information clear, concise and to the point, in love, marriage, divorce, sales, wills, patents, journeys, old estates, investments, property mortgages.

I WILL GIVE YOU THE LUCK that wins success in love, marriage, divorce, speculation, business, health and transactions of all kinds; restore lost affection; I will tell you how to gain the love of the one you desire, even though miles away; will tell you who and when you will marry.

I WILL TELL YOU HOW TO ATTRACT, control and change the thoughts, intentions, actions or character so that you will reach the highest possible development of mental vigor, health, happiness and capacity to earn wealth; how to accumulate a fortune and be happy.

I WILL TELL OF YOUR HUSBAND, WIFE, lover, friends, or enemies; who is true and who is false; will tell you every hope, fear, ambition, better than you could tell it yourself; those that are unsuccessful are made prosperous and started on the road to wealth; tell you how to make your husband or wife, or any one, be kind and true to you.

IF YOU ARE GOING TO SEE A PSYCHIC WHY NOT SEE THE BEST?
As the best is always the cheapest in the end. Better consult no clairvoyant at all than one who is unable to help you, as false prophets do more harm than good, as they leave you in a worse condition than before by their false advice, based upon guesses; but PROF. W. E. KING has an established reputation; testimonials and credentials from thousands of your own citizens and friends.

If you have already made a mistake, thrown away your money and lost confidence through dealing with much-advertised and self-styled palmists and psychics and their cheap, clap-trap methods, start from the beginning and consult PROF. W. E. KING. He will tell you frankly your condition and what you may expect; if nothing can be done for you he will not take one cent of your money. Has not this honesty on the face of it?

PROF. W. E. KING FORETELLS MANY EVENTS.
Some of the prophecies made by Prof. W. E. KING and which were fulfilled to the letter and day were:
The explosion of the United States warship Bennington at San Diego, Cal. It was predicted that on that day the government would lose a ship in the Pacific.
Prof. W. E. KING, Psychic, had warned the public of San Francisco's earthquake of 1906 for years.
Prof. W. E. KING predicted the Japanese-Russian war. The day of the month and year was predicted on which hostilities would be begun and the victory of the Japanese.
Prof. W. E. KING predicted the late President McKinley's assassination at "Buffalo Exposition."
Prof. W. E. KING predicted the assassination of Carter Harrison the elder three weeks before the weak-minded Prendergast fired the fatal shot at Chicago's chief executive.
Prof. W. E. KING predicted the earthquake at Kingston, Jamaica, W.I.; the earthquake in Chile; the Thaw-White tragedy; also predicted the Galveston flood.
On Jan. 17 two earthquake shocks were felt at Oban, Scotland. They had been predicted by W. E. KING.
Prof. W. E. KING, Psychic, has foretold many great events that took place on the day set.
Prof. W. E. KING is now located at 247 S. Hill st., where he will be pleased to meet his clients and many friends.

Recommended by a New York Judge: August 20, 1905—I cheerfully recommend Prof. King as a gifted psychic. He predicted my election and located important documents that had been lost three years. JUDGE F. B. CROWELL, Supreme Judge.

FROM LILLIAN RUSSELL, THE WELL-KNOWN ACTRESS.
I was greatly impressed with PROF. W. E. KING'S reading. His powers are truly marvelous. He develops in one a force that enables them to attract people, to interest them and to please them to their good and to your advantage without the least effort on one's part. His advice and assistance have been of great benefit to me.

FROM A PROMINENT MINISTER.
I desire to bear evidence to the genuineness of PROF. W. E. KING'S work. God gives to us an intuition whereby we may guide our lives. That PROF. W. E. KING possesses this guiding power to a marvelous degree is evident. The fact that his clients are his warmest and truest friends is alone a tribute to his sincerity and honest methods in dealing with all. He has rendered me immeasureable assistance. Rev. W. C. Jessup.

FROM M. ROTHSCHILD, THE WELL-KNOWN FINANCIER.
For the past five years PROF. W. E. KING'S advice and assistance have favorably influenced my business and financial affairs. I have tested nearly every psychic in this country and find PROF. W. E. KING'S advice reliable and far superior to any that I have ever met.

PROF. W. E. KING: I wish to give my testimonial for the benefit of those who wish to read it. Since I consulted you several weeks ago I have followed your advice and the instructions you gave me as nearly as I possibly could, and I can truly say the result has been marvelous. I shall consider it a privilege to recommend you to any person who will take the trouble to write to me. Yours truly, Maurice Winkler, 3829 State St., New York.

To Whom It May Concern: We take great pleasure in recommending our brother, PROF. W. E. KING, as a psychic of good standing, having to our knowledge been fully developed in all the various phases of mental psychicship. We cordially recommend him to any individual or society that may need his services.
Dr. John Westerfield,
President Indiana State Association of Spiritualists.

A TRUE PSYCHIC IS BORN—NOT MADE.

KARMA IS NOT A CLAIRVOYANT FROM CHOICE, BUT BECAUSE FATE HAS SO DECREED IT. HER ANCESTORS WERE POWERFUL MEDIUMS AND HAVE FOR AGES HANDED DOWN THEIR WONDERFUL POWER OR GIFT FROM GENERATION TO GENERATION. SO SHE HAS RECEIVED THE RICH INHERITANCE TOGETHER WITH COMBINED KNOWLEDGE AND PRICELESS EXPERIENCES OF GENERATIONS. NO MATTER WHAT YOUR PRESENT TROUBLE MAY BE, OR WHAT YOUR PAST EXPERIENCE HAS BEEN, YOU WILL SAVE TIME AND AVOID DISAPPOINTMENT BY AT ONCE CONSULTING HER.

MADAM KARMA IS RECOGNIZED BY THE PRESS, medical fraternity and scientists generally as the foremost medium in this country. Her past record and strictly honorable dealings are sufficient guarantee for her future work and have won her the good will of the press and people.

HONEST, FEARLESS AND CAPABLE.
Madam Karma fully understands the responsible position she is placed in by the remarkable gift she is endowed with, and she will try her best to help those who need help, and advise those who need advice and do all in her power to show all honest callers plainly and in forcible language how to gain happiness and prosperity.

MRS. MASSON,

the noted palmist of London, Eng., may be consulted at 322 S. SPRING ST. (over Owl Drug Store,) by those desiring CAREFUL CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND-READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

The earnest student and thinker will soon learn, in his investigations along psychological lines, that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HIMSELF HAS WRITTEN THAT INFORMATION.

PALMISTRY, HONESTLY PRACTICED, WILL NOT tell you your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in every-day life.

Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health, marriage and domestic life, financial conditions and ways and means of climbing out of a rut of ill luck into wide paths of success and prosperity, can all be told you through scientific palmistry, WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.

MRS. MASSON DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.

HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.

If you have no one in whom to confide, no one to advise you; if your heart and brain are heavy with a load of care, business going wrong, friends or family unsettled, sweetheart indifferent; if you wish to buy or sell, to change location, consult without fear and in confidence, STANLEY. He will lift your burden, bring back hope to the weary, and peace to the afflicted mind.

Unlike the fortune teller and pretender, he takes no fee in advance, and absolutely refuses to accept any fee for his reading if perfect satisfaction is not given.

Bear in mind, you hear the truth. Also remember what has been told you, which too often is not the case.

It is to your interest to try him. Go to him and let him for a small fee relieve you from all mental anxiety and guide and direct you into pleasant paths of happiness and prosperity. It is not necessary he should through the columns of the press mention all the ills one is heir to. Let PROF. STANLEY analyze your troubles and suggest the remedy.

STANLEY HAS BLAZED THE PATH FOR THOUSANDS WHO NOW ENJOY PROSPERITY AND THE FULL MEASURE OF HAPPINESS. HIS ONE DOMINANT AMBITION IS TO HELP THE SUFFERING AND ADMINISTER TO THE WANTS OF THE NEEDY—TO SO UNTANGLE THE COMPLICATED AFFAIRS OF TROUBLED HUMANITY AS TO MAKE HIS SERVICES INDISPENSABLE TO RICH AND POOR ALIKE, AND MAKE HIS NAME RESPECTED, HONORED AND REVERED IN EVERY HOUSEHOLD OR HABITATION WHERE CARE OR MISFORTUNE HAS LURKED.

WITHOUT DOUBT ONE OF THE GREATEST KNOWN PSYCHIC ADVISERS IN THE WORLD TODAY IS STANLEY, THE DISTINGUISHED PSYCHIC. WITHOUT ASKING A SINGLE QUESTION HE TELLS YOUR LIFE AS IT IS—TO ASSIST YOU, SO YOU MAY ATTAIN SUCCESS.

BEAR IN MIND BYRON STANLEY NEVER PUBLISHES OR IN ANY WAY ALLUDES TO ANY OF HIS MANY CLIENTS. EVERY CALLER IS RECEIVED AND DEALT WITH STRICTLY CONFIDENTIALLY.

ONE VISIT WILL CONVINCE YOU THAT BYRON STANLEY IS A MAN OF GREAT ABILITY. HE WILL POINT OUT THE WAY THAT WILL LEAD YOU TO SUCCESS IN BUSINESS, SPECULATION, INVESTMENTS, LOVE, COURTSHIP, MATRIMONY, DIVORCE, OR ANYTHING YOU MAY BE IN TROUBLE ABOUT. TRUTHFUL IN HIS PREDICTIONS. RELIABLE IN HIS ADVICE.

No matter what troubles you may have with yourself and others, come and he will guide you to happiness.

HONEST, FEARLESS AND CAPABLE.
HIS REVELATIONS ARE MOST WONDERFUL.

And acknowledged to be of the highest order, and not made to satisfy the idle curiosity only; but intended to give those who seek the truth a permanent benefit.

It costs no more to consult PROF. STANLEY, and one who has stood the test of time, than those whose competency is questioned.

During the year 1907 some of her records for successful work as follows:
148 reunited after separation.
Brought about 200 marriages.
Gained love of desired one in 314 instances.
Located 13 absent ones.
Located 3 buried treasures.
Overcame 575 rivals.
And hundreds of other cases, such as business, speculations, law suits and transactions of all kinds.

The tide of skepticism is surely turning by the wonderful power displayed by this phenomenal woman.

Mme. Annuve's purposes and intentions are best expressed in her own words: "I don't want money I don't earn; I don't need it. But I want to help you to success and happiness. I will tell you frankly your condition. If nothing can be done for you I will not take one cent of your money."

"My practice and professional reputation are built upon honor, reasonable charges, fair dealings, faithful service and speedy success, for my clients have won for me the largest practice in California. My superior knowledge and power give me advantages which warrant me in guaranteeing safer, surer and more rapid results than can be obtained elsewhere. Will give you the most complete, exact, reliable and intelligent reading you have ever had. Tell you whom and when you will marry; if you will be divorced and why. The sickness you have or will have. How to prosper and win success. Locate business to begin and where; the psychological moment for safe speculation or investment. Locate buried treasures, missing papers, lost or absent friends, mines, ore veins. Overcome rivals, enemies, evil influences, weakness of all kinds. I positively do what others claim to do."

The very secrets of the dead revealed.

And every warning, advice and information laid bare before you. Your present life and entire future told.

Mme. Annuve is the owner of considerable property in Los Angeles, and is consequently PERMANENTLY LOCATED in this city.

LIVE STOCK FOR SALE—
Poultry, Birds, Dogs, Etc.

FOR SALE—

Some are predicting that eggs will sell at 70c a dozen late this fall and winter. The discouraged ones who have sold off their stock because of the high-priced feed will not get any of this big egg money. Nor will you if you let your hens take all the fall to molt, and come out of it all run down.

WEST COAST EGG FOOD, will keep them in good condition, supply the material for making the new feathers, and then the eggs. Grains alone will not suffice. The ration must be rightly balanced for the best results. That is just what West Coast Egg Food is—a scientifically balanced ration, ready mixed, either for mash or dry feed. But if you can get grains or bran cheaper than to ship them in from here, you may make your own Egg Food by using which is a highly nitrogenous, concentrated Poultry Food, very rich in protein, to keep the poultry in good health, maintain a strong and vigorous system, make the hen molt early; feather out quickly, and lay lots of eggs when scarce and high.

Read just a few out of many testimonials: F. W. Healy, the well-known banker and fancier of Pasadena, writes: "After hearing others praise Egg-More, I determined that if there was anything to keep hens laying through the fall and winter months I wanted it. I bought a package of Egg-More, and fed it, and the improvement was very marked. Keeping on with it, I soon proved the truth of your statement that 'you can't put all your eggs in one basket if you feed Egg-More.' I have raised poultry nearly all my life, and for twenty years in California, but never did my hens lay so well as since I began to use Egg-More. I consider it the best egg producer on the market, and I do not intend to be without it."

Wm. L. Morehouse, Paso Robles, Cal., writes: "I have tried the Egg-More, and found it the best I ever used. I can't say too much for your Egg-More. Will send for more soon, as my dealer does not carry it."

A. H. Green, another banker, of Los Angeles, writes: "Having used your Egg-More for the past two years, I take pleasure in adding my testimony to its merits. It is difficult to measure the benefits derived from feeding an article continuously, and it was only by accident that I am able to state definitely the true value of Egg-More. I fed up what I had and neglected to order more for at least two weeks, when my attention was called to the fact that we were getting less eggs than we had been getting. I at once ordered more Egg-More, and in a few days we were again getting our usual number of eggs. I now see that there is a supply of Egg-More constantly on hand, so as not to disappoint our egg basket again."

Try it, and you will be convinced. 4-lb. package, 35c; 12½-lb. sack, $1; 25-lb. sack, $1.90; 50-lb. sack, $3.60. It is not only the best but the cheapest concentrated Poultry Food on the market today. If your freight dealer hasn't it, send us the price, and we will deliver a sack, freight prepaid. Made by the OUTRIGHT.

Largest concern of this kind handling second-hand cars exclusively on the Pacific Coast. We have demonstrated our ability to sell more and make quicker sales than all other brokers combined. Why? Because we are not novices, and depend on copying other brokers' ads and methods for business; we originate and have our own ideas, and can assure you better results, as we have proven in the past our ability to make quicker sales than you can get elsewhere.

NOTICE: TO PROSPECTIVE PURCHASERS. WE only handle machines that are in good running order and ready to use. No cars misrepresented in order to make sales.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN—
ENSENADA, Baja California, Mexico.
I take great pleasure in testifying that I have found the course in Spanish taken from Prof. Uribe at 619 S. Hill st., fully sufficient to enable me to speak and understand Spanish immediately upon my arrival from the United States and a most splendid foundation to further build upon.
I tried several other Spanish teachers before I met Prof. Uribe, but found his methods of teaching far superior to any other.
I therefore cheerfully recommend Prof. Uribe as a perfect gentleman and the best teacher of Spanish I have ever met.
A. T. LOFBERG, graduate of the Woodbury Business College, 1908. 6

THE DIRECTOR OF THE SPANISH DEpartments in the magnificent new building of the Y.M.C.A. and also in Heald's Business College, will start a new beginners' class for ladies and gentlemen at his home, 619 S. LIFE'S SEAMY SIDE.

CANNOT PROVE IT IS MURDER.

Police Unable to Ascertain Method of Killing.

Prevents Charging Ahlstedt With Crime.

Further Evidence in Comb and Handkerchief.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

OAKLAND, Sept. 5.—The mystery surrounding the tragic death of Mrs. Alice Lucretia Donohue has not yet been cleared up. The suicide of Daniel H. Donohue, the putative husband, has complicated the case instead of simplifying it. As yet it has not been proved to the satisfaction of the police that the woman was murdered. The manner in which Mrs. Donahue came to her death is not yet known. It cannot be proven that it was by strangulation or poison. Both these theories have been investigated, but nothing has come from them.

But as soon as the cause of death is proven, it is thought that Gustave Ahlstedt, or Arkell, against whom the circumstantial evidence is strong, will be charged with the murder of the woman. It is thought if the manner of her death cannot be learned, Ahlstedt will be released. But the police are also working on the theory that Ahlstedt is guilty, and have not abandoned the supposition that Donohue was implicated in the crime.

More evidence against Ahlstedt was discovered yesterday, when Mrs. P. D. de Verra, Mrs. Green and Mrs. Myers, neighbors of the Donohues, identified a sidecomb and handkerchief found in the possession of Ahlstedt as belonging to Mrs. Donohue. The sidecomb was found in the garret of the accused man's house, and when it was found and shown to Donohue he denied that it belonged to his wife. This statement makes it plausible that Donohue knew of his wife's death, and tried to hide it by denying that the comb belonged to the woman.

The handkerchief, which was identified yesterday, was taken from Ahlstedt's pocket the morning of his arrest. It is twelve inches square, with a one-fourth inch black border. There was a purple blotch on it corresponding to that found on the towel dug up with Mrs. Donohue's body.

Owing to these additional facts, Ahlstedt will be held in detinue until the mystery has been solved as well as it can be solved.

Marshal Carey and Deputy Marshal Lippi were at work today in the grounds surrounding Donohue's house, looking for the earrings and watch which Donohue said his wife wore when he last saw her.

Captain of Detectives Peterson said today: "I believe that Berry, who is regarded by some as having probably shared the fate of Mrs. Donohue, will put in an appearance. One reason why I do not put much faith in the dying note left by Donohue is because William Ronaldson, a friend of Donohue, who was with him the night before he committed suicide, says that on that night Donohue produced a bottle of whisky and that they drank one glass apiece. The next day when the body was found the bottle was found empty. This makes it appear that Donohue was under the influence of liquor when he killed himself."

JAPAN TO CONTROL PACIFIC.

Count Okuma Says It Is His Country, Not the United States, That Will Rule.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

VICTORIA (B. C.) Sept. 5.—According to advices received by the steamer Glenfargg, Count Okuma has been interviewed with regard to a statement alleged to have been made by President Roosevelt that the United States would, in future, control the Pacific.

Count Okuma, in the Nochi Shimbun, says that it is Japan, not the United States, which will control and he enlarges at length on the possibilities in the Pacific for the Japanese mercantile marine.

BANK ROBBERS SENTENCED.

SEDAN (Kas.) Sept. 5.—Bill Tennant and Harry Coleman, the young bandits who robbed the Chautauqua State Bank, at Chautauqua, this county, in daylight on the morning of April 17, last, locking Cashier Waterhouse and Del Easley, a customer, in the vault, entered a plea of guilty here today and each was sentenced to serve an indeterminate sentence of from ten to twenty-one years in the State reformatory.

The men secured $3000 and escaped on horseback. Tennant was captured in Denver and Coleman was arrested in the State of Washington.

OBITUARY.

John J. Emory.

BAR HARBOR (Me.) Sept. 5.—John J. Emory of New York died at his summer home, The Turrets, today, after an illness of several weeks, of pneumonia. Mr. Emory has large holdings of real estate in Cincinnati, where he resided until twelve years ago, and in other western cities, and his fortune is reported to be $40,000,000.

Arthur Sanders.

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 5.—Arthur Sanders, for many years a familiar and popular figure in musical comedy, and for a long time a leading member of the various casts in the productions of Mort H. Singer, died here today. He was stricken with apoplexy last Wednesday.

Chief Standing Bear.

NORFOLK (Neb.) Sept. 5.—Standing Bear, a famous Ponca Indian chief, is dead at Niobrara. He was once exploited in Boston and other eastern cities by Thomas Tibbles, former Populist Vice-Presidential candidate, as a martyr to government persecution. Tibbles dressed Standing Bear in silk hat and corresponding attire.

Thomas Richards.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 5.—Thomas Richards, vice-president of the Pittsburgh Reading Coal and Iron Company, died today, aged 72.

Willis Howe.

CHICAGO, Sept. 5.—Willis Howe, for twenty years manager of the Palmer House in this city, and well known throughout the country among hotel men, died today at French Lick, Ind.

John Y. Smith.

RICHMOND (Va.) Sept. 5.—John Y. Smith, president of the negro reformatory and Minister to Liberia under President Cleveland, died here today, aged 65.

ALASKA WHEAT A FAKE.

Department of Agriculture Finds It Is No Better Than Ordinary Varieties.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.—An agent sent by the Department of Agriculture to Juliette, Idaho, to investigate the present status of the so-called Alaska wheat, said to yield over 200 bushels per acre, today made the following statement by wire:

"Alaska yielding twenty-five bushels per acre. Badly mixed. Grain inferior. Quality soft and white. Ordinary wheat yielding fully as much. Best varieties much more."

An analysis recently made by the Department of Agriculture shows that Alaska wheat contains only a little more than 9 per cent. of protein, while soft winter wheat has 10 per cent. and hard winter 12 per cent. and hard spring wheat 12½ per cent.

TARGET GUNS CREATE TROUBLE.

Cause Arrest of American Boys Who Carried Them Over Into Mexico.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.—The mother of Robert Rechy, one of the American boys from El Paso arrested by the Mexican government because they crossed the river with a target gun, has appealed to the State Department for assistance in securing his release.

Because of the recent border troubles it is appreciated that the Mexicans are naturally suspicious of persons crossing the border with guns in their possession, which probably formed the justification for the arrest of the boys. If the case is an ordinary one, without evidence of any evil intent, it is expected the trouble can easily be adjusted.

WOMEN ADOPT BADGE.

Insignia Is Facsimile of One Presented to Susan B. Anthony Twenty Years Ago.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

GENEVA, Sept. 5.—After adopting a badge which is the facsimile of that presented by the first council twenty years ago, to Miss Susan B. Anthony, the International Council of Women closed its sessions today. A brilliant reception was given by the government in Evnard Palace, Lady Aberdeen, the president of the council, responding to an address which was presented in behalf of the municipal council of Geneva.

WEAK IN AERONAUTICS.

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—Brig.-Gen. Allen, chief of the United States Army Signal Corps, who left today on the St. Paul for a tour of inspection among the aëronauts and aviators of Europe, stated that the government is seriously handicapped by want of men and lack of funds in the development of aëronautical facilities for the army and navy.

Because of the great need of experienced aëronauts, he announced that neither Lieut. Frank P. Lahn or Capt. Charles de Forrest Chandler will be allowed to take part in the international balloon races at Berlin on October 11, as had been expected.

MAY STOP TROUBLES.

PROVIDENCE (R. I.) Sept. 5.—There is a possibility that arbitration may be called upon to end the trouble of the local street railway men and their employers, which threatens to precipitate a general strike on the trolley lines operated by the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, in three States. Should such a strike be ordered, no less than 32,000 men would be involved.

The whole trouble arose over the discharge of fifty-four men employed by the local company. While the company officials declare the action was due entirely to a breach of discipline, the union leaders contend that it was because of the organization of a local union and general prejudice on the part of the company against their employés.

TOOK STOCK IN SPIRITS.

OAKLAND, Sept. 5.—Charging that he had been defrauded of $28,700 as a result of alleged spirit messages, J. U. Secrest yesterday brought suit against C. W. Lynn, E. W. Blodgett, R. B. Meyers, Frederick Delberger, Calvin Easterly and the Eureka Woodside Mining Company for the recovery of that amount.

Secrest alleges that Lynn told him that the company had been capitalized for $5,000,000, and that it owned rich holdings in Eldorado county. According to Secrest he was furnished with samples of asbestos and copper which were supposed to have been taken from the mines of the company. On six different occasions, Secrest says, Lynn told him of conversations he had had with spirits who had divulged the secret of the wealth of the properties held by the company.

Secrest claims that he parted with $28,700, for which he has received nothing more substantial than a bunch of stock certificates. He now wants to exchange these for the amount he paid for them.

AIRSHIPS COLLIDE.

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—Six mechanics, propelling two airships at the final rehearsal of the "Battle of the Skies," were injured last night at the Hippodrome, when two ships were in collision. The smaller one was completely wrecked, and the larger one badly crippled. The men were thrown out of the ships on the stage.

Edwin Clarke, the baritone, was in the smaller ship, but saved himself from injury by catching hold of a rope ladder.

The accident was caused by the misplacing of a switch on an electric board controlling the current that operated the stage ships, and made it necessary to defer the opening of the big playhouse, which was to have been tonight.

A tablet marking the headquarters of Gen. Count de Rochambeau while he was in Newport during the Revolutionary War commanding the French auxiliary forces was unveiled and dedicated at Newport, R. I., yesterday, in the presence of officials representatives of both the French and United States governments and members of the various patriotic societies. Mrs. Julia Ward Howe broke the strings holding the veil which covered the tablet.

FORBIDDEN.

BANS TOLSTOI CELEBRATION.

Russian Synod Forbids Its Observance.

Act Regarded as Second Excommunication.

Count Sorely Grieved at Sentiments Expressed.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 5.—The circular addressed by the Holy Synod to all believers, appealing to them not to participate in the celebration on September 9 in honor of Count Leo Tolstoi's eightieth birthday on the ground that to thus praise this opponent of the church would be a stumbling block to persons of weak faith meets with approval by only a limited section of the press and public, the latter being represented by the League of Russian People.

This circular is virtually a second excommunication of the aged writer.

The Znamia and other newspapers condemn it unstintedly, and a scathing criticism by the Novoe Vremya, which usually is a staunch supporter of the government, furnished a criterion of the temper of Russian society in general.

The administrative provincial authorities are bestirring themselves at the eleventh hour to check the observance of the Count's jubilee, and the Governors of the provinces of Moscow, Warsaw, Saratov, Simbirsk, etc., have resorted to the provisions of martial law to veto the celebrations arranged by the municipalities. Furthermore, the censorship of St. Petersburg has prohibited the memorial performance arranged for a local theater.

A telegram received here from Yasnaya Poliana says that the influenza and fever from which the Count has been suffering has disappeared, and that the inflammation in his leg has subsided. In the last few days, however, the Count has become extremely weak and emaciated, and is scarcely able to speak. But in spite of this his mental vigor is not impaired.

The Count's wife has issued an announcement setting forth that even her husband's relatives and closest friends will not be received at Yasnaya Polina next Wednesday, because of the patient's weakness. She has requested all newspapers publishing commemorative articles of the Count to forward copies to the Rumiantsoff Historical Museum at Moscow for preservation in the Tolstoi room.

The effort of the Countess to prevent the news of the bitterness excited by his jubilee from reaching her husband have been fruitless. He insists upon seeing all the newspapers, and his grief at the harsh sentiments expressed is pathetic.

DEFENDS WHITE FLY CRUSADE.

Commissioner Jeffrey Answers Charges of John Isaac That It Was Graft.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 5.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] State Horticultural Commissioner Jeffrey has come to the defense of his chief deputy, E. K. Carnes, against whom charges of misconduct in the white-fly campaign at Marysville have been made by John Isaac, former secretary of the commission. He declares it was under Cooper's régime, and not his own, that the order for defoliation of trees was made, and that Isaac himself wrote the order he now condemns.

Jeffrey says the Marysville orange trees were treated just as those in other parts of the State, and the charge of vandalism made by Isaac is all rot. Politics had nothing to do with the campaign, he declares, and, inasmuch as Cooper made the defoliation order, Isaac's charges are really made against his old employer. Jeffrey took occasion to commend the course adopted by his predecessor in combatting the white fly, and says the same course will be followed should necessity arise again.

SAILS OVER PARIS.

PARIS, Sept. 5.—The dirigible balloon Republique maneuvered for six hours today over the city of Paris and its suburbs, and covered before coming down a distance of 200 miles.

French aëroplanists were out in force at Issy this morning to view a number of flights by local aviators.

Leon de La Grange circled the field five times, covering a little over seven miles, at an average height of twenty feet.

M. Ferber, on board his biplane, remained in the air two minutes.

M. Malecot, with a mechanic at his side, accomplished two turns of the field at a height of fifty feet, but he had trouble with his motor, and this made it necessary for him to abandon the effort.

M. Beloit broke the wheels to his machine, and did not leave the ground.

FOUND IN BROTHEL.

Sixteen-Year-Old Girl of Notorious Family Ran Away With Man Twice Her Age.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN JOSE, Sept. 5.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mabel Ross, the pretty 16-year-old daughter of a workingman of Salinas, was found by Deputy Sheriff Buffington in a house of ill-repute on Market street last night.

She disappeared from her home some time ago with William Gorman, a man about 30, who had been working at various occupations in Salinas. Gorman was found in a local lodging-house shortly after the discovery of the girl.

In her fall, the girl only followed the example of her brothers and sisters, five of whom are now in the Whittier reform school for various offenses. The family is notorious in Salinas for wildness.

Sheriff Nesbit and one of his deputies arrived from Salinas this morning and took Gorman back with them to face a charge of abduction before Justice of the Peace Norris. Local officers are retaining the girl in hope of obtaining a confession from her.

CLASPED CHILD IN DEATH.

ALLENTOWN (Pa.) Sept. 5.—After a search since Wednesday, the bodies of Mrs. Diana Fenstermacher, a widow, and her daughter, Eva, aged 11 years, were found today in the Lehigh Canal near Catasaqua, Pa. It is believe the woman clasped the child in her arms and leaped into the water. Mrs. Fenstermacher, who lived at West Catasaqua, had showed signs of failing mentality and had threatened to end her life and that of her child.

not forgetting that the ac- residences of moderate cost continues unchecked. The month of August showed a record of about the average number, running close to half a thousand cottages and bungalows. The total cost of permits taken out during the month approximated quite closely to $1,000,000, compared with somewhat over a round million in the month a year ago. The fall months will probably see the continuance of this activity, furnishing about 500 new premises for residence purposes each month. As averages go, this would provide for perhaps 1500 increase in population a month. That is considerably below the growth of population in this city during the last seven or eight years. We must not forget that in a city of 300,000 people houses are wearing out, and those built from fifteen to twenty-five years ago are by this time in rather a sad condition of squalor. The average American family insists upon having a fairly decent home, and with the intelligence as to sanitary affairs prevailing at the present time, this is one of the first things a family looks to. There must be a bathroom, and it must be airy, with proper plumbing in every respect, or it is utterly undesirable.

Look Carefully to the Situation.

The real estate people are of the class who pay closest attention to the remarks of the Fact and Comment man week by week. This is not addressed to them, but is of a more popular character. The rental agencies and real estate men will perhaps find it useful to lay before their clients in order to show the condition as they exist. A large number of the general population read Fact and Comment in The Times Sunday by Sunday, as the writer knows from the criticisms, favorable or otherwise, passed upon his views, which are poured weekly into his ears. Without indulging in any particular self-glorification, it may be said that these criticisms are in the main very favorable. It is hoped that there will be a general attention to the article this week. Those who must have their home here during the coming winter will be wise in proportion to the early movement they make in securing one. There are more on the market this morning than there will be next Sunday morning, and Sunday by Sunday as the time passes houses will be more difficult to find. All have their preferences as to locality. Some desire flats close in within walking distance of business. Some prefer to live at considerable distance from the business center, having time to come in on the cars in the morning, and perhaps saving more than car fare in lower rents. Others have friends in one locality or another, or there are particular schools to which they wish to send their children, or perhaps it is a church which they wish to attend with the family on Sunday. We must remember that these 4000 houses, 2000 of them such as the people we are speaking to would not live in, and leaving only, as things are now, about 2000 at all desirable, are scattered widely over the whole area of the city. In some districts there are few or none. In no individual district are there many of these 2000 houses suitable for occupancy. As the city fills up with winter population the number decreases rapidly, and where one might be entirely able to suit himself today, that may be impossible this day week.

CHICAGOAN BUYS RANCH.

Pays Twenty-five Thousand Dollars for Forty-three-Acre Walnut Grove at Rivera.

A. G. Cramblitt, for many years a member of the firm of Lyon & Healy Company of Chicago, has tired of the rigorous eastern winters, and purchased a fine walnut grove at Rivera for a reported consideration of $25,000. Bullis & Nickerson and W. H. Neiswender were the agents. The property was owned by the Cole family.

The grove, which contains forty-three acres, is said to be a great producer, the income for the last three years ranging from 18 to 20 per cent. of the purchase price. Nearly the entire acreage is in large bearing trees of the choicest variety of softshell walnuts.

There is a handsome new house of eight rooms, a large barn and carriage house and other buildings, and a good water supply. The place is fenced.

Included in the purchase are forty shares of water stock.

BUNGALOW HOME BOUGHT.

B. W. Bryon & Co. report the sale of the bungalow at No. 2079 West Twenty-ninth Place, consisting of a lot 50x150 feet, improved with a handsome five-room bungalow. The buyer is H. B. Crouch, and the seller is Clara E. Humbolt. The consideration was $5500.

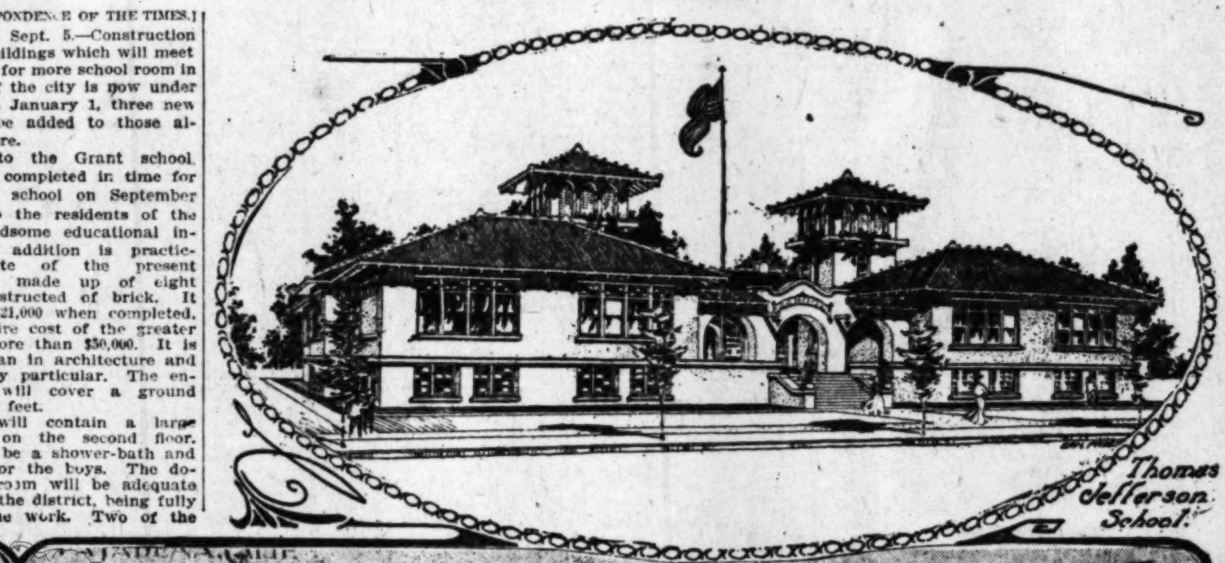
PASADENA'S SCHOOL IMPROVEMENTS TO ACCOMMODATE MANY HUNDRED PUPILS.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

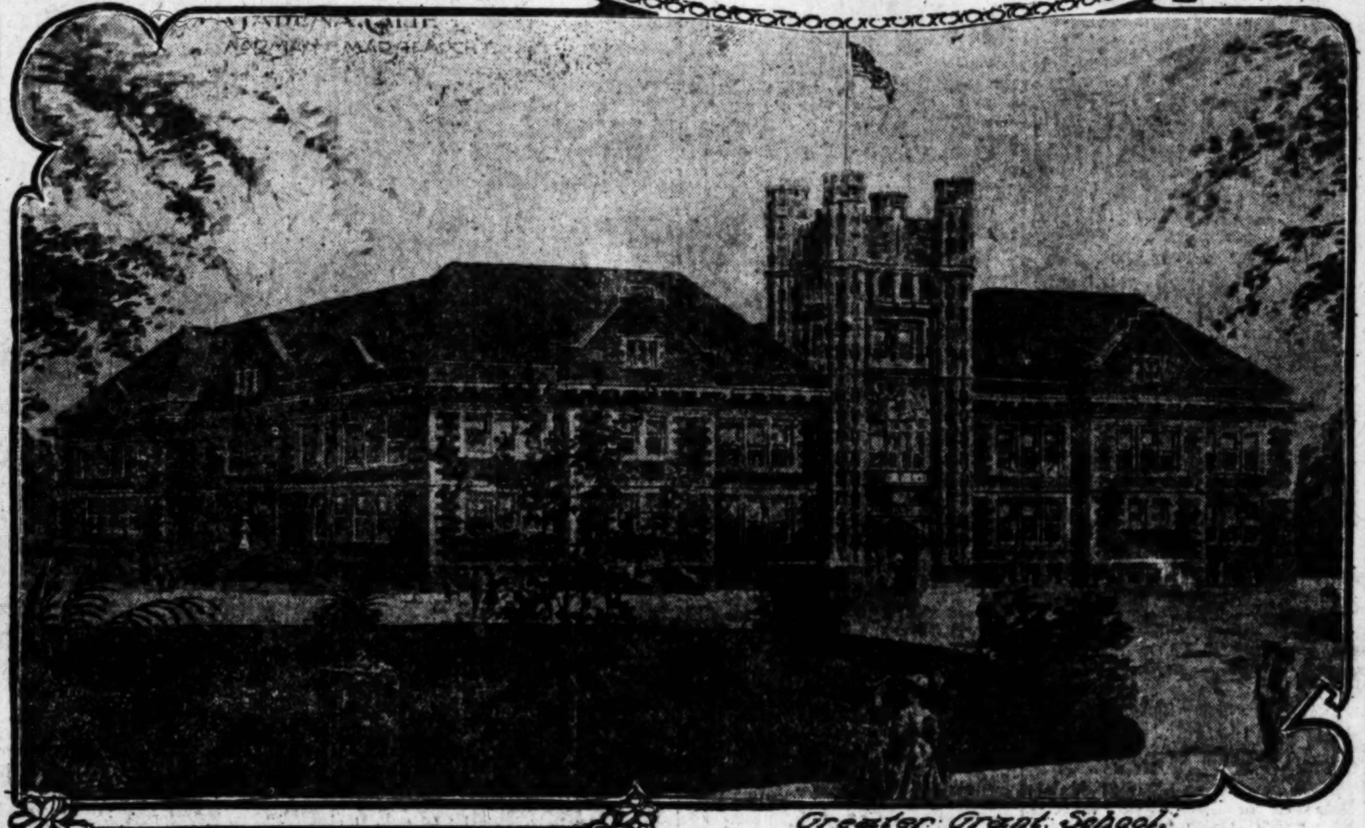
PASADENA, Sept. 5.—Construction on school buildings which will meet the demand for more school room in various parts of the city is now under way and before January 1, three new buildings will be added to those already in use here.

The addition to the Grant school, which is to be completed in time for the opening of school on September 28, will give to the residents of the Eastside a handsome educational institution. The addition is practically a duplicate of the present building, being made up of eight rooms and constructed of brick. It will cost over $21,000 when completed, making the entire cost of the greater Grant school more than $50,000. It is to be Elizabethan in architecture and modern in every particular. The entire structure will cover a ground space of 162x103 feet.

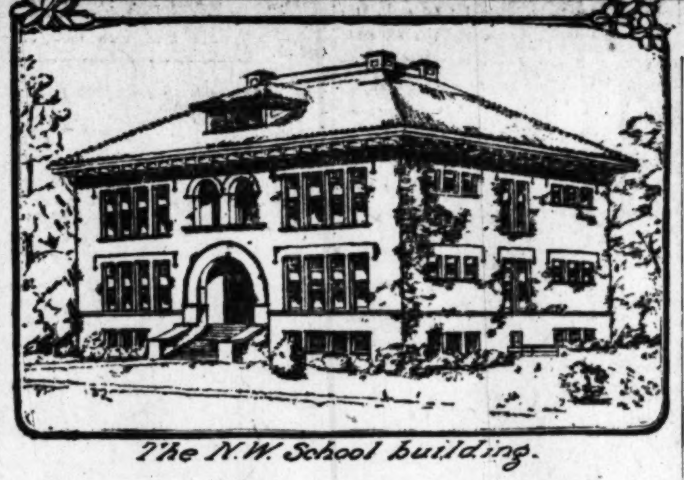
The addition will contain a large assembly hall on the second floor. There will also be a shower-bath and dressing-room for the boys. The domestic science room will be adequate to the needs of the district, being fully equipped for the work. Two of the rooms on the ground floor will be fitted up for kindergarten purposes and a portion of the campus will be arranged for this branch of the work. Dawson & Daniels have the main contract for the addition at $16,795, and George Whyte & Son have the masonry work at $9723. The plumbing contract at $1370 was awarded Monger & Monger and the heating contract was awarded to E. O. Ney & Co. for $1963. Gaylord Blick & Vore have the electrical contract at $495 and the contract for painting goes to the E. Card Paint for painting goes to the E. Card Paint Company. Norman F. Marsh of Los Angeles, is the architect.



Thomas Jefferson School.



Greater Grant School.



The N.W. School building.

The new eight-room brick school house on West Washington street, which will probably be named the Cleveland school, will be completed in time for school after the Christmas vacation. J. J. Blick is the architect for the building, which will cost more than $23,000.

The interior finish will be of a rustic appearance and very attractive. The rooms are to be 25x32 feet square and have seven windows, four large windows at the back of the room and three smaller windows on the side, making the light equal all over the rooms. G. S. Bliss has the general contract at $11,710; and the masonry work was awarded the Pasadena Cement Company at $5995.

Probably the most attractive building and the one which has tendencies toward an original design of all the new ones erected in this city recently, is the Jefferson school, which will be built on Villa street. The architecture is of the Spanish order, the low spreading tile roof with stucco finish, somewhat resembling the mission buildings of early California.

The building is one story in height covering an area of 162½x125 feet. There will be eight large class rooms varying in size from 22x35 to 25x31½ feet. A large assembly room is on the main floor. All of the rooms are excellently lighted, as the building partially surrounds an open court. There are five exits to the building. Besides the assembly and class rooms, there are a teachers' room, library, principal's room arranged on the ground floor. In the basement is a sloyd and domestic science room, 31x40 feet, supply rooms, toilets and furnace rooms, and a storage room for wheels. The plumbing and heating in the building are of the most modern appliances, hot air being used in the heating while the Plenum plumbing will be used.

The building will cost $28,672 when completed. G. A. Harmon has the general contract, E. O. Ney the contract for the heating, the Pasadena Plumbing Company the contract for the plumbing, and the Pasadena Painting Company for the painting. C. W. Buchanan of Pasadena is the architect.

Besides these school buildings, three kindergarten buildings of sitely appearance and adequate to the work, soon will be started, the contracts for the buildings having been let for $3500 a piece.

IN BOYLE HEIGHTS.

LARGE SUM FOR OLD LANDMARK.

RESIDENCE AND LARGE LOT BRING GOOD PRICE.

Chaffey Place on Boyle Avenue Sold for Thirty-five Thousand Dollars—Grounds Handsomely Improved—Realty Firm Reports Much Activity—Other Transactions.

George B. Chaffey has sold to J. B. Coverley the handsome twelve-room two-story residence at No. 501 Boyle avenue for a reported consideration of $35,000. The property is one of the landmarks of Boyle Heights. The house stands on a plot of land, fronting 150 feet on Boyle avenue, and extending back a distance of 355 feet. It is of striking architecture, and the grounds are beautifully improved with plants and trees.

The Edward & Wildey Company was the agent, and states that the demand for all classes of residence property has improved greatly within the last month. Other sales by this company are:

Mary Schneider to E. F. Leutzel, a lot at the northeast corner of Gramercy and Wilshire boulevard, in Westminster place, 75x150 feet, for $3500.

E. E. Hall to Mrs. M. L. Landers, the five-room bungalow at No. 124 West Fortieth place, on lot 40x145 feet, for $2750.

E. B. Leonard to M. M. Hartigan, a lot 50x115 feet, on the west side of Oxford, between Sixteenth and Washington, in the Harvard Heights tract, for a consideration of $2300. This was bought for immediate improvement with modern two-story nine-room residence, which will cost $4500.

O. F. Scherer to Hermon C. Smith, the eight-room residence at No. 2620 Dalton avenue, on a lot 50x150 feet, for a consideration of $7500.

Miss Ida E. Morrison to Margaret O'Conner, a lot 50x150 feet, on the west side of Fifth avenue, between Pico and Sixteenth, in Central Arlington Heights, for a consideration of $1200.

C. L. Rixon to Louise Riley, lot 40x125 feet on the south side of Fifty-first street, between South Park and McKinley streets, in the South Park tract, for $900. Mrs. Riley has let the contract for a five-room bungalow to be built at once.

W. F. Stevenson to Mrs. M. F. Hensler, the six-room bungalow at No. 1244 West Thirty-ninth place, between Budlong and Normandie avenues, on lot 50x135 feet, for $3750.

BUYS ON SAN JULIAN.

Property Between Fifth and Sixth Street Sold for Twenty-four Thousand.

The Hunter-Ford Company reports the sale of the property located at Nos. 532-34-36 San Julian street from Frank B. Veasey and Rollo E. Goodrich to John Wollenshlager, proprietor of the Chicago Market, for a consideration of $24,000. This property has a frontage of eighty feet on San Julian street and a depth of 125 feet, and is improved with three small cottages, producing only a nominal income. Mr. Wollenshlager intends to immediately improve this property by the erection of a three-story brick building.

The same company reports the sale of the southeast corner of Vermont avenue and Thirty-fifth Place from John Wollenshlager to George W. Jordan for a consideration of $5600. The lot has a frontage of fifty-six feet on Vermont avenue and 135 feet on Thirty-fifth Place, and as all cash was used in the transaction, it is considered that Mr. Jordan secured an especially good buy.

The Hunter-Ford Company also reports the sale of the adjoining lot south from John Wollenshlager to George I. Banta for the sum of $5600. This lot also has a frontage of fifty-seven feet on Vermont avenue.

The sale of a suburban home consisting of two and one-half acres, well improved, located on North Wilson avenue, Alhambra, from C. H. Harper to Henry Klein, for a consideration of $7500, is also reported by the Hunter-Ford Company.

ON WESTCHESTER PLACE.

Robert Marsh & Co., have sold to C. F. Thorpe, a lot 120x150 feet on the west side of Westchester Place, 120 feet south of Twelfth street, for $12,000. Mr. Thorpe is having plans drawn for a fourteen-room residence to cost about $25,000. He is owner of the Thorpe building.

BIG PRICE FOR POMONA GROVE.

Fifteen hundred dollars an acre is the price paid by T. N. Newill for a ten-acre Valencia orange grove located in the city of Pomona. The property was sold by George E. Hart for $15,000. It is one of the oldest Valencia Late orange groves in the section, the trees being 15 years old, and in full bearing. The property occupies the block between Fifth and Ninth streets, the Southern Pacific Railway tracks and East End avenue. The purchase was made for an investment, as the place pays a handsome return on the amount invested. The sale was made through the agency of D. A. Van Vranken & Co.

SIX HUNDRED A FRONT FOOT.

Retired Manufacturer Invests in Apartment House Property on Hill Top. Will Improve.

The property at No. 327 South Olive street, consisting of a fifty-foot lot, on the west side of the street, between Third and Fourth streets, has been purchased by Henry Kreim, a retired furniture manufacturer of Clinton, Iowa, from Allie A. Hewitt, for a reported consideration of $30,000, or at the rate of $600 a front foot.

Present improvements consist of a handsome old-time residence, which brings in a rental of $100 a month. Property is considered very valuable in this section for improvement with high-class apartment houses, it being only a short walk into the business center of the city. It is opposite the eight-story Hotel Kellog. Some exchange was taken as part payment. The buyer intends to improve with a substantial building soon. The sale was made by R. A. Rowan & Co.

KEEPING UP WITH TIMES.

G. G. Johnson has removed from the Bryson building to offices in the H. W. Hellman building. He has been twenty-one years in the real estate and investment business in Los Angeles. More than a score of years ago he opened an office on Second street, which was "way out in the country." Later he removed to First street, then to Broadway near First, "to be in the real estate circle," as it was then constituted. Improvements later drove him as far south as the Bryson building, which then held many real estate offices, but which is now nearly all given over to manufacturers' agents, showing the tendency of similar businesses to flock together. Mr. Johnson has engaged in no other business than real estate and investments, and like all old timers is full of reminiscences of the wonderful development of Los Angeles during the past twenty years.

THE BARGAIN BUNGALOW OF THE SOUTHWEST.

This new, modern, up-to-date five-room bungalow has every modern convenience such as gas, electricity, oak floors, beamed ceilings, handsome buffet, fine bathroom with porcelain tub, stationary wash tray, cement porch, handsome lighting fixtures. The exterior of the house is pleasing, with its stone and rustic combination, and the location is in a good bungalow neighborhood which is being rapidly built up and only two blocks from car line. This is a snap.

BUNGALOW NEAR ADAMS.
$4000.

This seven-room nearly new bungalow is located close to Harvard and 29th sts., on a fine elevated 50-foot lot, having cement retaining wall. The house is one of the most substantially built houses of its size in the city, with handsome brick and cement veranda across the entire front, beautiful hardwood and polished floors, fine Flemish oak and white enamel finish, elegant lighting fixtures, etc. Every room is extraordinarily large and complete. We have no room to describe in detail; you must just see it. There is cemented basement, also fine barn; and it would take at least $5000 to duplicate this property.

WEST ADAMS HEIGHTS BUNGALOW.
$6200.

The prettiest, cosiest, most original bungalow in the city. Large east front lot, near Berkeley Square; six rooms; hardwood and polished floors throughout, beamed ceilings, tapestries and expensive hangings; cellar, piped for furnace; in fact, everything to make a perfect home. Terms can be arranged. No trouble to show it.

WEST ADAMS HEIGHTS HOME.
$8500.

This home was finished just a few months ago; it faces a one-hundred-foot boulevard; north front; large lot with plenty of space on either side. The house was built by the owner for his own home and no expense was spared to make it complete. There are nine beautiful rooms with hardwood floors throughout, beamed ceilings, paneled walls, built-in seats, buffet, plate glass windows, wash trays, large cellar, furnace, garage, etc. The front elevation is very artistic; the spacious porch across the whole front being built of stone and cement. This property must be sold this month, and our price is fully two thousand dollars under value; terms can be arranged.

BEAUTIFUL NEW RESIDENCE ON GRAND VIEW, NEAR ELEVENTH STREET.
$10,500.

This brand new nine-room house is just being finished. It has been built on honor on a lot 60x140, in an ideal neighborhood; oak floors in every room, beamed ceilings, paneled walls, beautiful mantels and buffet, very handsome lighting fixtures, rich wall hangings and lots of large plate-glass windows. The living room is 18x30 and other rooms in proportion. Brick and cement porch across entire front of house; good furnace and cellar. The woodwork is particularly well finished in fumed and golden oak downstairs, with white enamel (six coats) in kitchen and sleeping rooms. The bathroom is fully in keeping with the rest of this artistic home. Let us show you this.

WESTLAKE HOME.
$10,600.

New, modern 12-room house on Bonnie Brae st., between Orange and Seventh sts., on high ground overlooking Westlake Park; lot 50x150 to alley. Rooms are large and well arranged; oak floors throughout, very handsome fixtures; furnace; in fact, everything that goes to make an up-to-date residence. This property is quoted $2000 below its real value for quick sale.

BURLINGTON AVE. HOME.
$11,500.

Lot 75x150, east front, between Ninth and Tenth sts.; highly improved with fine trees, fruits, flowers, and a good, modern 8-room residence; oak floors, large rooms, beautiful entrance, plate glass windows, polished floors; furnace, garage; in fact, a beautiful home in the best part of the Westlake district at the price of the lot alone.

If you want a snap that will appreciate in value AT ONCE.

CALIFORNIA MISSION HOME.
$15,000.

The most artistic and originally planned house in Los Angeles. A jewel in a setting of beautiful homes, with a splendid large lot, giving spacious grounds on either side. It is rightly called in Spanish "El Nido," or "The Nest"—so cosy, complete and admirable is it throughout in selection and arrangement. The house is built partly about a fern green patio upon which French windows open, and the interior decorations were brought in great part from Europe. We want to impress upon you that while this house is comparatively small, it is an exquisite creation, an ideally constructed residence for people of taste and culture. The house alone cost what is now asked for the entire property. The lot is worth $8000, and the barn and garage for three horses and two machines, and servants' quarters above, laundry, etc., cost $3000 to build.

It will take an hour of your time to see this bargain. See it with us today.

WESTMORELAND HOME.
$17,000.

This property, consisting of twelve beautiful rooms, on a lot 65x145, was finished about six months ago; circumstances compel the owner to sell at once. To make a quick sale he has put a price on it that is a bargain to any one looking for a snap. This is an opportunity that seldom presents itself. The home is finished in solid hardwood downstairs, white enamel up, and a beautifully finished third floor. Descriptions will not do this property justice. We would like to show it to you. Call on us for an early engagement. This won't last long, as the location is perfect and the property a snap at the above price.

FRONTING THE PARK.

Read this and call us up and let us show you a gem of a home opposite one of the beautiful parks on a quiet street. There are 7 rooms, 4 bedrooms, 3 for family and one for servant. The living-room is in striking contrast to the average, with its stamp of artistic individuality. There is a large open grate with solid open beam work; exquisite fixtures, specially made. This room is 20x30 and opens into the dining-room, which gets first the morning sun. The dining-room is paneled and beamed and the buffet is also a work of art. The three bedrooms are large, with closets that would please any woman. There are three entrances to the house, one into the spacious front hall, one in the rear, and the side entrance into the basement, as well as kitchen. Porcelain bath, wash trays, furnace and Monarch automatic water heater. Hardwood floors first floor. There are timbers in this house heavy enough for another house the same size, so the strength is there for keeps. The house cost $5000 to build, and is practically new. The ground would be cheap at $6250. Still you can buy this for $10,500. Mortgage $4000, bank loan, 2½ years, 7 per cent. See this place without fail. You will like it. Good garage with cement floor.

Due to extenuating circumstances, I am compelled to sell my bungalow, built for my own occupancy. Those expecting much for little money will not be interested. The bungalow is a consummate piece of art, carefully worked out in every detail under my own supervision. I do not hesitate to say it is the handsomest, most artistic bungalow in Southern California. With those who appreciate quality and know the value of expert workmanship, I shall be glad to talk. Living room is 14x25, with handsome plate glass window, massive carved fireplace and cosy inglenook. Dining room and living room handsomely paneled with imported velour. The electric wall bracket, fixtures and statues equal in elegance and design to those found in $15,000 residences. The doors have been specially designed and are in perfect harmony with the architecture of the house. The padded window cushions are upholstered to match tapestries on wall. An ideal French kitchen, equipped with cupboards, flour bins, drawers and cooling closets. Bath with lavatory and conveniently built-in dressing case with long bevel-plate mirror, and contains expensive plumbing; also handsome tile floor. The lot is 54x132 to alley, two blocks from car line. This is a corner lot and has seven beautiful old pepper trees. Large porch extending across entire width of house, and contains natural white Salt Lake stone. House has just been completed and premises have been put in good condition. I have lived in the house a few weeks, but an imperative circumstances compel me to sell; small payment down, balance like rent. The price is actual cost. Those who would appreciate an expensive piece of art and are willing to pay for quality, will be interested. 1948 NORMANDIE AVE. Take Dalton ave. car, get off at Normandie ave. 6

7 ROOMS.

Due to extenuating circumstances, I am compelled to sell my bungalow, built for my own occupancy. Those expecting much for little money will not be interested. The bungalow is a consummate piece of art, carefully worked out in every detail under my own supervision. I do not hesitate to say it is the handsomest, most artistic bungalow in Southern California. With those who appreciate quality and know the value of expert workmanship, I shall be glad to talk. Living room is 14x25, with handsome plate glass window, massive carved fireplace and cosy inglenook. Dining room and living room handsomely paneled with imported velour. The electric wall bracket, fixtures and statues equal in elegance and design to those found in $15,000 residences. The doors have been specially designed and are in perfect harmony with the architecture of the house. The padded window cushions are upholstered to match tapestries on wall. An ideal French kitchen, equipped with cupboards, flour bins, drawers and cooling closets. Bath with lavatory and conveniently built-in dressing case with long bevel-plate mirror, and contains expensive plumbing; also handsome tile floor. The lot is 54x132 to alley, two blocks from car line. This is a corner lot and has seven beautiful old pepper trees. Large porch extending across entire width of house, and contains natural white Salt Lake stone. House has just been completed and premises have been put in good condition. I have lived in the house a few weeks, but an imperative circumstances compel me to sell; small payment down, balance like rent. The price is actual cost. Those who would appreciate an expensive piece of art and are willing to pay for quality, will be interested. 2948 NORMANDIE AVE. Take Dalton ave. car, get off at Normandie ave. 6

FOR SALE—
FOR HOMES, FOR LITTLE FARMS, FOR VEGETABLE GARDENS
OR FOR PURE STRAIGHT INVESTMENT
SOMERSET ACRES WILL PAY WELL.

The biggest money will be made for the next few years on the rising values of land near Los Angeles. With all the world and his wife seeking a home in Southern California it will pay you well to buy all the good land you can pay for. The closer you get to Los Angeles the better profits you will realize. Somerset Acres is at Somerset Station, only 30 minutes from my office on fast electric line. It is just far enough away to become a great suburban city and just near enough to participate in all the development and advancing values of Los Angeles. It has station and power house, many new homes, thriving gardens and chicken ranches. Market car loaded there daily reaches the city markets in half an hour.

LAND HAS BEEN PROFITABLE FOR YEARS.
WATER COSTS NOTHING AND IS PIPED FREE TO EACH ACRE.
PRESENT PRICE, SUBJECT TO EARLY ADVANCE, $325 an acre. TERMS $10 DOWN AND $10 A MONTH. THIS OPPORTUNITY NEVER WILL COME AGAIN. EXCURSIONS EVERY HOUR DAILY AND UNTIL 2 P.M. SUNDAY.

FOR SALE—

WEST OF WESTLAKE PARK
WILSHIRE BLVD. DISTRICT.

This district is the most beautifully-situated in Los Angeles; and is being built up with high-class, thoroughly-modern homes. The entire district is thoroughly protected by restrictions, and there are no old houses for eye-sores. It has a higher elevation than West Adams, West Washington or Pico Heights. It has a magnificent view of the mountains and the valley. It is traversed by two of the yellow car lines. It is only 18 minutes from Broadway. It has all improvements and conveniences.

If you are looking for a home, investigate these lots before purchasing.

$1700—for a lot 60x170 on WILTON PL., a 100-foot street, lies 3 feet above the grade. A snap.
$1425—A fine 60-foot EAST front lot on Manhattan Place. Remember the size.
$1200—for a 50-foot EAST front lot on St. Andrew's Pl.
$1000—A snap, a 50-foot lot on Manhattan Place. Best buy in the district.
$900—A 50-foot EAST front lot on Gramercy Place and a snap. We can give easy terms on any of the above lots.

FOR SALE—
Business Property.

FOR SALE—LOOK. LOOK. LOOK.
SPRING STREET. NEAR 4TH ST.

Nos. 414, 416 and 418 South Spring.

60x159 to 20-foot paved alley.

Leased for 3 years.

Look over these columns and see how much real central Spring or Broadway property is on the market. Look and see. But I need the money and you can get this if you have the nerve to act quickly (before I get a loan or make a sale of 2000 acres at Rialto. See my ads. in Money Wanted and For Sale—Country Property in today's Times) and the nerve to act while the other fellow suffers with congested pedal extremities. "When the other fellow is breaking his neck to buy, you sell." And when others are breaking their necks to sell, you buy, is a good way to make money. I didn't act upon this when prices were up, so I've reduced this lot from $6500 to $5000 and that's where you get the advantage of my holding on till the other fellows quit buying.

Price $300,000; half cash, balance 3 years at 4½ per cent. interest. Don't get frightened at that rate of interest. It's bona fide. I borrowed money at 4½ per cent., and from Main street savings bank, after the other boom and you'll see 4½ per cent. money here before those 3 years end.

MR. INVESTOR!
MR. SPECULATOR.

Are you looking for a good deal?
Are you particular, hard to please?
Are you conservative?
Do you want the best that money will buy?
If so, call at our office and let us show you photographs of, and give you full particulars about what we unequivocally and unhesitatingly call the best buy in Los Angeles. If you but knew what an extraordinary choice property we have had placed with us for sale, you would come post haste and close up the deal, for which you would be grateful the rest of your life. Opportunity now knocks at your door. It is truly the chance of a lifetime. This property is decidedly in a class by itself, it is so far above the average. You can make a search of the entire city, and you will not find another like it in the market. The owner, for obvious reasons, does not wish us to advertise the location; for your information, however, will state that is consists of a prominent corner highly improved, with a new business block.
The price is $37,500. The income is $4350 per annum.

495-Acre Bean Ranch
Situated in Ventura Co., 1 mile from good town, and shipping point, 200 acres in beans, balance in wheat, oats and barley. All fenced and cross-fenced, good well, soft water, two tanks, gasoline engine, one barn room for 25 horses, one granary and wagon-shed, one shed and barn for 200 tons of hay, chicken houses and corrals, and a good 8-room two-story house, excellent climate and magnificent view overlooking a large and productive valley; price $45 per acre; 1-4 cash.

165 ACRES.
In Ventura county, 35 acres of fine orchards, 50 acres of very good farming land, balance good pasture land.
A complete farming equipment, some stock and a good set of buildings, near good school and only 2½ miles from station. The products from this land are paying 25 per cent. annually. Price $8000; $3000 will handle it and you can make the balance from the land at your own time.

A 40-ACRE PIECE.
One mile from Artesia and in the very best section of that district. This carries abundance of water for irrigation developed and distributed on land in 10-inch steel pipes; excellent alfalfa land, and the very best for sweet potatoes. In 1906 crop of same on this land netted $200 per acre. Owing to the close proximity to electric and steam railways, this is a first-class bargain and has not been in the market before. Price $225 per acre. Good terms.

12 ACRES, HIGHLY IMPROVED.
A modern two-story, eight-room house, good out-buildings, a complete pumping plant for irrigation, with lots of water, all fenced. This is only ¼ mile from Artesia depot. Excellent land for alfalfa, vegetables, etc. This would be fine to cut up in small chicken ranches, as it is only 35 minutes' ride from Los Angeles. Price $400 per acre. Very best of terms.

390-ACRE MOUNTAIN RANCH.
In the Canejo Valley, Ventura County, 100 acres equal to the finest land in the State, balance rolling, but fine for pasture; good water and some buildings. Also has good oil indications. Only 2½ miles from El Camino Real. Price $17.50 per acre.
Will exchange for some good clear lots in Los Angeles. Prefer Southwest or West.

30 acres in trees, one and two years old, plenty of water stock. This is just east of the Avenue between Upland and Ontario. Price $200 per acre, ¼ cash and good terms. Will sell whole or part.

"RANCH OF THE OAKS."
1100 acres in the UPPER SALINAS VALLEY, at PASO ROBLES, 17 miles from the COAST, where the average rainfall is 22 inches, and the mean annual temperature is 60 deg. Nature has made THIS RANCH beautiful and doubly blest by making each acre fertile and productive, the coast hills surrounding it are covered with fine oak trees for many miles.
The Salinas River (a real river) with never-failing water supply, is its west boundary line, and furnishes thousands of inches of water, the plant in operation on the place is pumping 150 inches for irrigation, with a lift of only 15 feet, and many times that amount can be developed at a small cost. The alfalfa is yielding twelve tons to the acre, and sold in the winrow at $9 per ton. The grain crop this year is running from $15 to $20 per acre. The corn and potato crop is very good. Shipping station and school on corner of the property. A good family orchard. The improvements are all in excellent condition, consisting of houses, barns, fencing, corrals, etc. The price is $30 per acre, $10,000 cash, balance easy terms.

These are just a few selections from our LARGE list of FARM LANDS. We have at our office photographic views, together with full description of many more as advertised above. We have sold in the last four months over 20,000 acres in tracts, and through constant attention to this one branch of the real estate business, we have made ourselves entirely familiar with the FARMING INDUSTRY in Southern California, and we are in a position to supply your every want in FARM LANDS.

FOR SALE—AT RIALTO!!

2000 ACRES! 2000 ACRES!

1300 of it as fine level sandy loam as you can find in the State. None better for oranges, alfalfa, grapes or any other fruits. The balance is water land in the foothills, just west of Lytle Creek. About 23 inches of water; 400 ft. of tunnels, $10,000 dam. A fine 3,000,000-gallon SOLID CEMENT reservoir, cost about $25,000, and, all in all, this is one of the finest propositions in the State, as the water development is only just begun and every inch at Rialto is worth from $1000 to $1200. Besides this, the water land is fine for eucalyptus and the wind brakes on the 1280 acres will give space for 100,000 eucalyptus trees and more.
The Santa Fe runs through the 1280—1 mile—and the oiled road from Los Angeles to San Bernardino splits the 1280 just half in two and is 1 mile in length. Moreover, the electric road from San Bernardino through Rialto to connect at North Ontario for Los Angeles will, I feel sure, go through this tract, being 2 miles of frontage on electric line.
Now, Mr. Moneyed Man, I mean biz! I'm going to raise about $300,000 in short order. I'm going to raise it the quickest way I can. I'll borrow it (as per my ad. in Money Wanted column, which see; also in "Business property,") or if you'll take this "pride of my eye" before I get the loan, I'll sell it to you. Such opportunities don't come often in Southern California.
Think of it, 2000 acres! IN CIVILIZATION, don't forget that! Not in Mexico!
Price only $70 per acre! $140,000, ¼ cash, balance 3 years, 5 per cent.

EAGLE ROCK HAS THROUGH CARS.

The long looked-for improvement in the Eagle Rock car service has taken place—cars now run straight through, down Broadway to Eagle Rock. •

ACRES AT PRICE OF LOTS.

Our Eagle Rock Acres tract is now ready for reservations. It is beautifully located at the corner of Colorado street and Central avenue, in the choicest portion of Eagle Rock, fronting on streets 120 feet wide and convenient to street cars, schools, church, bank and business buildings.

Preliminary prices on these ACRE LOTS, including all improvements (cement curbs and sidewalks, water piped and streets graded and oiled,) from $850 up. Easy terms, 6 per cent. on deferred payments. This is the first opportunity there has ever been to secure one-acre lots in Eagle Rock. Prices subject to advance without notice.

EAGLE ROCK CENTRAL TRACT.

This tract is rapidly selling out—it is located directly across the street from the Eagle Rock Acres tract, and every lot affords a magnificent view of the entire valley.

KENILWORTH.

We have a few lots left in this famous tract upon which we will make special inducements to builders. Building loans arranged at reasonable interest.

LARGE HILL LOTS.

Facing on Hill ave. we have several magnificent building sites, ranging from one to seven acres, some heavily wooded, that we can sell for from $1000 upwards, all improvements completed.

ACREAGE.

Improved and unimproved, ranging from three to fifty acres, prices from $450 per acre. We do the largest real estate business in Eagle Rock.

WHY DON'T YOU
INVEST WISELY?

A LITTLE HOME,
A LITTLE GARDEN,
A LITTLE RANCH.

BEST SOIL—UNLIMITED WATER.
BIGGEST PROFITS ON PRODUCTS.
GREATEST INCREASE OF VALUE.

The land at Lomita Farms appeals more strongly than any other land in this section of the State. It is the world-famed Fresno sand, noted for its wonderful productivity. Whether you want one acre or ten you cannot afford to pass by Lomita for anything else.

BUT THE GREATEST CONSIDERATION IS ITS LOCATION.

It is close to the electric line on the way to San Pedro. It is close to the Bixby Slough, into which the ship channel is proposed. It adjoins the Shoestring Strip, assuring all the advantages of the city, without city taxes. It is sheltered by the San Pedro hills and the new boulevard cuts through it. If you wish to make money, now is the time to make it, and this is the place to buy. Millions being spent at San Pedro all tend to develop the values at Lomita and land in the Shoestring Strip is held now at $1000 and up. The price at Lomita enables you to double or even treble your money in a very short time.

FOR EXCHANGE—PRICE $25,000. THIS fine 23-acre orange and lemon orchard, trees 14 years old, now offered for exchange, is one of the finest and most thrifty orchards in the Upland-Cucamonga section, is no run-down proposition; this coming season crop is estimated at from 5000 to 6000 boxes; good improvements, worth $5000, consist of 9-room, 2-story house, barn, lemon house, etc.; plenty of water stock. Will take good clear city or suburban improved property up to $14,000; $5000 cash and balance long time mortgage, or will consider Seattle property up to full value.

$3000 clear; fine 28-foot Ocean Front lot in Ocean Strand, Ocean Park, for equity in modern residence or good vacant.

For Exchange—400 acres in Ventura county, all under cultivation; good improvements; 1 mile from railroad; water stock included; price $50 per acre; will exchange for alfalfa or general farm or orange or lemon grove near Los Angeles, or city improved to full amount; might assume some. This land offered is cheap at price, and any exchange must be good value.

For Exchange—$35 per acre for 600 acres level land, south of Corcoran; no alkali; 400 acres plowed and ready for crop; flowing artesian well belt. Will exchange for fruit land in Williamette, Rogue or Hood River country, Oregon; will assume.

For Exchange—$9500—Finest vacant ocean front lot in Ocean Park, within 200 feet of the big bath house; size 27½x100; would pay big today if improved with apartment house; finest location. Owner will exchange equity for Los Angeles property; might assume a little.

FOR EXCHANGE—
REAL ESTATE OWNERS AND AGENTS.
I wish to purchase a fine residence in a desirable neighborhood; also good income property up to $100,000; what have you as above that is actually worth the money asked, to trade for either of my large income orange and walnut or alfalfa and general agricultural ranch, well known and acknowledged as being the richest ranch property in the celebrated San Gabriel Valley. My ranch property has an abundance of water, and is practically level, having just sufficient slope southward to properly drain and irrigate same. The soil is over 50 feet deep, and is absolutely free from adobe, alkali or hardpan, and while it is now conceded, to be the choicest and best paying ranch in Southern California, it is also located where property is rapidly increasing in value, and is destined within the next few years to double, and it is even predicted to treble in value. Give full information regarding the property you have to offer in exchange. I am not an agent, but the owner, and will deal promptly when I find the property I desire. Address B, box 94, TIMES OFFICE. 6

FOR EXCHANGE—
$50 an acre, 1100 acres, practically all tillable, sufficiently improved to pay interest on investment; located 18 miles from city; suitable citrus, with small expenditure, would sell $200 acre; will take good mortgages, stocks and bonds to $30,000, balance time.

$8000—20 acres near Lakeside, San Diego county; 12 acres bearing citrus, incumbrance $3000; want city residence; will assume and pay some cash.

$5000—6 acres near Pomona, improved with 5-room modern cottage, alfalfa, variety fruits, incumbrance $2000; wants city residence to $3500.

$25,000—140-acre mountain resort, elegantly improved with enough bearing Valencias and other fruits to pay good interest; a fortune could be made by using for health and pleasure resort; within easy reach city, close to two railroads; want good mortgage, stocks, bonds or cash for half, balance easy.

Equities in city residences for city and country.

MR. TRENCH, with MARTIN I SMITH,
Successor to Smith & Dieter.
6 417 S. Hill st. F5403.

FOR EXCHANGE—
I have 5 acres of choice land, part in full bearing soft shell English walnuts, to exchange for city property; this is high class, only a short distance from the city and close to the electric car; an abundance of water goes with the land free of cost. If you are looking for something good in this line it will pay you to investigate. See MOON, 401-2-3 Citizens National Bank Bldg. A1915; Main 1872. 6

FOR EXCHANGE—FOR EASTERN INCOME. $150,000—80 acres orange grove, all full bearing navels, one of the banner groves in Southern California, owning its own packing-houses, located on two railroads, adjoining a good up to date town, a beautiful family residence and all necessary outbuildings, with stock and implements to run the place. This grove has netted $12,000 per year for the past ten years, and has a fine crop now on trees. There is a mortgage of $37,800 payable by ⅛ crop each year. Owner has poor health and unable to work, and will consider good eastern income, Los Angeles, Pasadena, Long Beach, San Francisco or Oakland, would not object to som evacant and will assume. W. A. TUCKER, 167 East Ocean ave., Long Beach. 6

WORTH INVESTIGATING.
I own an interest and have just secured an option on the balance of a coal mining and townsite proposition, consisting of 520 acres in the best coal mining districts in the State of Illinois, and want some one to join me in developing same; value of property, $75,000, which is 25 per cent. less than any adjoining property; to right parties I will consider some good real estate in exchange for any part up to $50,000; three adjoining mines netted over $100,000 each last year; can show you that there is over a million dollars in this proposition. $225 FOR $500 REED.

Big bargain at a little price. Don't fail to see it.
MANY OTHER FINE ONES.

An elegant Steck piano regular $600 instrument, just as good as new and not even marred by the slight use it has had. All these and many more have been accepted by us in part payment for Steger player pianos. We need the room for new pianos on the way and will sacrifice them now at above little prices.

WE SELL NEW PIANOS FOR LESS.

Don't buy pianos of traveling agents, or accept guarantees from those you do not know. The Fitzgerald Music Co. has built up one of the largest piano businesses on the Coast, purely on the merits of the pianos sold and upon the absolute fairness of its dealings. Prices are always the lowest possible and terms the easiest to pay. No big profits for us. No big bills for you. Note the range of price and quality we offer this week.

$300 PIANOS FOR $169.
$350 PIANOS FOR $196.
$450 PIANOS FOR $286.

WANTED—BY OWNER TO BORROW

$15,000 on $40,000 Residence.
$30,000 on $120,000 acreage.
$50,000 on bonds.
$150,000 on Spring-street property.

OR

$225,000 ON ALL ABOVE.

I am anxious to make either or all of the above loans, but especially anxious to make the Spring-street loan of $150,000 at once.

The mortgage is past due, and I would like to make arrangements THIS WEEK to pay it off. I will pay 7 per cent. for the $30,000 loan; 6 per cent. for the $50,000 or the $15,000, and 5 per cent. for the $150,000 on the Spring-street security. I'd offer more if the money were worth it, but I don't think it is. I've been in Los Angeles for 17 years and always been in "touch" with money—that is, I've touched some bank or individual for large loans every twice in a while during that period, and I know what a fair normal rate is on Spring-street security. It varies, of course, with circumstances, but when money is moderately easy, it's only worth 5 per cent.—Last year it was really worth 6 or 7 per cent.—but for 1910, 11 and 12, you mark the old man's prediction, it will "SEEK" Spring street and Broadway large loans at 5 per cent.! I want the money for these three years and 5 per cent. is, I think, all a sensible business man (that's me, the old man! See!) should pay. If an unprecedented, corn, wheat or cotton crop was, not only in "prospect," but actually "in the bin," wouldn't it be a chump who would rush out and load up for 3 years to come at a "famine-year price?" Why not the same with money?

You ask who made me so wise as to the "money crop?" Well, the old man has been spelling out those big words the papers use in the "money reports" East, and, dog my cats, if he can see anything to it but "cheap money." Now, for fear you fellows who are hanging on a leetle "too hard" (and if you don't look out you'll say "too long," first news you know) may think I've imagined a whole lot about cheap money, or I will say, "plentiful supply," of money,—(and if you can find an instance where the low rate didn't soon follow plentiful supply, then you telegraph the old man at his expense,) he'll give you a free press clipping bureau edition of the "money crop" news of one week only (not "3 weeks," that would even be worse) ending yesterday:

Firstly, from Henry Clews, who is "unquestioned" as to reliability when it comes to "honest dope" (whatever that is,) on "money crop," etc.—unless, perhaps, he might be questioned a little right now by the "fellows who lend," as his reports seem to be all in favor of the fellow who borrows.

Mr. Clews says on Sept. 3:
"By far the most important element in the stock market just now is the world-wide ease in money. This ease is not so much a consequence of increase in the gold supply as some would have us believe, although that factor cannot be ignored. The present glutted condition of the money market is chiefly attributable to the accumulation of funds which always follows panic, regardless of the production of gold. Business activity has been at a premium, and funds came out of hoarding as confidence revived. These two movements caused a piling up of idle funds in the banks, which now hold extraordinary reserves in spite of the fact that the crop movement has begun, and that usually currency is flowing freely to the West and South at this season. They also account for the record-breaking accumulation of gold in the American and European banks more than the enormous production of the Rand district.

"Crop Report," No. 2., from Associated Press. (I don't say the "Associated Press" couldn't be bought at any price, but I wish to assure the public, upon my solemn word of honor, that I have not bought it up for the past week in order to "color" these "money crop" reports to a "blue tinge.") Here's the report:
"Money continues to pile up here, some of the leading financial institutions reporting a heavy inflow from the Middle and Southwestern States. Demand for money is very light."

Crop Report, No. 3: "Money on call is almost a drug on the market, and scanty supplies of commercial paper are eagerly sought for investment. The railroad mortgage market is affected in the same way."

No. 4: "Preliminary estimates of the week's currency movement indicated a falling off in shipments to New York, but not yet sufficient to turn the tide of the movement in favor of the interior. Reports from Chicago confirm the lightness of the demand for funds from interior banks. The large surplus held by the New York banks leaves the subject of little interest from the banking standpoint."

No. 5: "There is a plethora of money in eastern centers, cash will be abundant for moving crops without affecting the security market. A declining tendency in interest rates on both commercial and mortgage loans is noted."

No. 5 is a clipping from a local paper whose editor's judgment is as clear as a bell, but if the is the "silent owner" of a bank I'll guarantee it's one that has failed to "qualify" to come under the supervision of the "Clearinghouse" clan—for it's clear to the well posted business man that his weekly utterances upon "the financial question" have not "passed through the clearinghouse," nor have his utterances upon anything been edited elsewhere than in his own sanctum. I would that I might be permitted to be instrumental in getting that editor himself edited into what I, wearing my hair a little longer than he, would consider "a new and improved edition" of himself, so that his convictions and splendid energies might go hand in hand (and I believe him to be too courageous for them to ever go oppositely) in the work of helping to remove from our city that which is evil; which never elevates but always drags down; which brings the tears to the eyes of the family and friends of its victims, but never wipes them away; which ONLY lives to destroy the family and fortune of its victims because it builds up the fortune of those interested in its traffic!

But, say, the old man will compromise this matter with you he'll "call off" the "sermon" if you'll "call on" him and put up the money for one of these loans! Whenever you see anything in any of the old man's ads, you may know it's unpremeditated and unedited, and that he writes out of the fullness of his heart and the emptiness of his pocketbook! and all he wants is—plenty of money and friends!

So, take his advice and don't "hold on" too long—like he did when real estate was up—he "held on" to this lot at $6500 until he has had to mark it down to $5000 a foot, and he now pleads with you, with tears in his voice, to turn loose of your $150,000 to him at 5 per cent. before your money, like eastern money, becomes a "drug" on the market, and the banks become "cut-rate drug stores."

I really expect to make this loan, and perhaps one of the others "this week," so, get busy if you want this, one of the very best, if not the very best "Central" loans in the city. The income from the property, though but slightly improved, is over 9 per cent. on the amount of the loan, and it's growing in value every day because it's right in the Heart of the Business Center. Look at it, Nos. 414, 416, 416½ and 418 South Spring st., then see the old man at his "desk room."
BOAZ DUNCAN,
447 Wilcox Bldg.

P.S.—See my Ad. in For Sale Country Property, today's Times. That 2000 acres up at Rialto will make you rich, if you'll take it, while I'm "all tied up." If you wait till I'm "free" I'll give you the merry ha! ha! if you mention my selling it then. Take it from me, that this is a straight tip. Look up the ad. for particulars. 6

FOR SALE—2000 SHARES OF AMERICAN Differential Axle stock at 16 cents per share. Company's price $1; it's a snap; a money maker. The company in its yesterday's ad. says: "It is the consensus of expert opinion that the earnings of this stock will be sufficient to pay dividends on $100,000,000 in a few years, and that at such time the stock will be worth $40 to $50 per share. Buy it at 16c; our party must sell tomorrow, Monday; it's your opportunity. We guarantee its transfer, and all privileges accorded any of this stock. Will sell it in not less than 500 blocks; $1 is company's price; ours 16c. We quote prices on all stocks.

And hundreds of others. See me on any stocks. To Mohawk Herald stockholders: Take no notice of advertisements unless signed by names. The man who advertises under a box number is unreliable. Leave him alone, but if any stockholder wants to sell, compelled by the need of money, then I advise the investing public to buy the stock at any figure that is low, for the Mohawk Herald is a splendid purchase under 50 cents. MacDermott still controls the stock. W. T. Mason left Banning last week for the mines with a full supply. We have received an offer from a mining engineer, who has examined the Anaconda and wants a lease and bond on same; also wishes to lease our mill. Extract from his letter: 29 Palms, Aug. 29.—"I have come to the conclusion that this section may be brought to light by the proper development I have made a thorough examination of the Anaconda and by so doing am not afraid to get my friends to spend some money on the same."
Come in and see the letter on file. The management of the Gold Palms Mining, Mercantile and Transportation Co. have purchased five additional claims, making eight in all adjoining the Mohawk Herald Anaconda on both sides. The stock will be advanced on September 12, to 10 cents per share. Buy it now at five cents. It is a winner. I say so. EDWARD MacDERMOT, 114 S. Broadway. 6

All Diseases of Men Are Curable By My Methods

Not one of those ailments peculiar to men can longer be classed among the incurable diseases. I have erased the last one from the incurable list, have perfected methods of treatment that accomplish what no other treatment ever has. This is a fact that stands proven and that even other physicians must admit. While I assert that all diseases of men are curable, I do not mean to imply that all cases will yield completely to treatment. I occasionally find complicated and far advanced conditions that have passed beyond the possibility of a cure by my own methods or any other methods now known to medical science. Such cases are very rare, and I never even attempt to cure them. I know what I am able to accomplish, and will not accept a case in which I feel the least doubt as to results being complete and permanent.

DR. TAYLOR,
The Leading Specialist.

The Man With Disease

Should learn—and the sooner the better—that what may seem a trivial disease very often has more serious and far-reaching effects. The man who tries to be his own doctor is always the patient that later comes to the specialist with the chronic, stubborn, deep-seated case, which is the hardest kind to cure. I cannot hope that all men will accept my statement that the quickest, the safest and the cheapest cure is had by consulting an expert specialist in Men's Diseases at once, but the intelligent man will readily be convinced of the value of this advice upon investigation.

Results Are the Test. Pay Me When Cured

I don't ask one cent until I have proven my ability. I know what my System will accomplish, and am willing to demonstrate it before accepting my fee. Incurable cases will not be accepted at any price. Every member of my staff is a graduate, licensed physician.

Weakness

No matter in what form these functional derangements commonly termed "weakness" may appear, the causative conditions are, in fully ninety-five per cent. of the cases, very similar. I have given the closest possible study to this remarkably prevalent ailment and find that in practically every case of prematureness, etc., there existed at some vital point of the pelvic system a state of chronic tenderness, inflammation, or congestion. My first step is a thorough examination to ascertain the exact location and nature of the disorder, after which by a system of carefully directed local treatment, I restore the affected part to its normal condition, which promptly results in full and complete return of power. In perhaps less than five per cent. of the cases do I find general impoverishment, lack of nervous energy, or any other condition or complication requiring constitutional treatment. Therefore, I may safely assert that not more than one case in fifty can be permanently benefited by the use of tonics, stimulants, electrical or mechanical appliances, and that fully forty-nine cases in fifty will be aggravated by such methods of treatment.

My cures are positive, complete, thorough and permanent, because by my method the real and only cause of the functional weakness is totally removed. The knowledge gained by close study and observation in thousands of cases enables me to recognize the exact requirements and treat accordingly, and in years I have not failed in a single instance to accomplish the desired results.

Varicocele

Varicocele affects the veins of the spermatic cord. An average of one man in four suffers from the affliction. The muscular walls of the veins weaken and relax, the valves cease to perform their functions, and local stagnation of the blood ensues. The first evidence of varicocele is usually a thickening, dilating, knotting and twisting of the veins on one or both sides, most frequently upon the left side, often accompanied by pains in the back, legs, thighs or chest, and a sense of dragging in the groin. Owing to the impaired circulation, a wasting away of the organs, accompanied by partial or complete loss of power almost without exception follows in severe cases where treatment is neglected, and even slightly developed cases cannot fail to have a damaging influence upon the organs involved as well as upon the general health. Safety in all instances demands a prompt cure, for varicocele is a disease that increases in severity the longer it is neglected.

I cure varicocele without pain and without detaining the patient from business. I have cured over two thousand cases without a single failure or unpleasant result. My treatment is original, and has been developed through seventeen years of practical experience. It restores the lost tone and elasticity to the weakened and dilated blood vessels, which results in normal circulation and re-establishes the normal processes of waste and repair throughout the vital system.

My special practice also includes Hydrocele, Stricture, Contracted Diseases, Contagious Blood Poison, Nervous Debility and all Reflex Ailments.

Examination and Advice Free

To men whose years are being lived in physical imperfection as a result of mistakes or misfortune, and who yearn to be the man that nature meant them to be, I extend an earnest and sympathetic offer of consultation and advice. My experience in treating men's diseases places me in a position to be helpful to you. In consulting me you will be asked no foolish and embarrassing questions. All information given you will have a direct and vital bearing. If your symptoms are of no consequence I will tell you so. If treatment is needed, I will tell you its cost, and the time that will in all probability be required to effect a complete cure. If I feel any doubt as to my ability to cure you, I will not take your case at all. I will not urge my services upon you. If you can see fit to place your case in my care, every promise I make shall be fulfilled.

Any Complaining Man Can Consult Me Free

IT COSTS you nothing to talk over your case with me.
If you are suffering from any complaint peculiar to men, come in and tell me all about it.

I'll tell you how I cure just such cases as yours, what the cost will be and about the time it will take.

My services are those of an expert who has devoted his whole life to the one study—men's complaints.

Very many men who are ailing do not know how really simple a things it is to get well in the hands of a specialist who knows his business.

I can and do cure any complaipt neculiar to men.
I treat every case privately.
I furnish all medicines free.
I have every appliance that could possible be necessary to cure men.
A small amount, wholly within your means, clearly understood in the beginning, is my fee.
I charge nothing for consultation.

BLACKMAIL ALLEGED.

STATEMENT IN CASE OF DOYLE.

ACCUSED REPLIES TO THOSE ASSAILING HIM.

Has Resigned His Position in the Broadway Department Store in Order to Devote Full Time to Routing the Draper Man and Woman. Lawyer's Declaration.

In reference to the suit brought by L. P. Draper against W. C. Doyle, the superintendent of the Broadway Department Store, for alleged alienation of the affections of Mrs. Draper, Mr. Doyle stated last evening that a week ago he tendered his resignation to Arthur Letts, his employer, in order that he may devote his entire time to the case, which he states is one of blackmail pure and simple.

Mr. Doyle claims that the first intimation he had of the matter was when he was approached by a certain individual who claimed that he had heard that such a suit was contemplated, but that he thought the matter could be hushed up for a pecuniary consideration. Mr. Doyle told his informant that he had no money to give away, whereat the informant suggested that Mr. Letts could undoubtedly be induced to loosen his purse strings in order to avoid any scandal. Perhaps it is needless to state that this and other offers of a similar nature from other parties were summarily turned down.

L. K. Wisehart, attorney for Mr. Doyle, states that Mr. Doyle, as soon as he saw that the blackmailing suits were to be filed, resigned as superintendent of the Broadway Department Store, because he knew that although the charges preferred against him were false, he owed it to himself and to his employer to give up his position until he had vindicated his character. Mr. Wisehart also states that all Mr. Doyle asks of the people is for them to suspend their judgment of the affair until he and his witnesses have been heard at the trial of the case. Mr. Wisehart further states that in his opinion the charges against Mr. Doyle are a mere frame-up by blackmailers who are hard up for money, and who adopted this plan as a means of relieving themselves of their financial embarrassment. Mr. Wisehart states that his opinion is based on a large amount of evidence which is in his possession, and which he would freely give to the public were it not for the fact that it would be showing his client's hand prematurely.

EMPIRE STATE PICNIC.

The New York State Society will hold a reunion and picnic at Eastlake Park tomorrow. The festivities will begin early in the forenoon and will continue until sunset. A large attendance is expected and members of the society from Orange county will attend in a body. There will be athletic sports of all kinds for the amusement of the picnickers, and handsome trophies will be awarded the victors in all the events. Addresses will be delivered by former residents of New York State.

RECEPTION FOR DR. LOCKE.

A reception will be tendered Dr. C. E. Locke and his family at the First Methodist Church on Tuesday evening. Dr. A. W. Adkinson, district superintendent, will deliver the address of welcome on behalf of the ministers of the conference; Rev. E. P. Ryland, president of the Church Federation, will extend a greeting on behalf of that organization; Wr. H. W. Brodbeck on behalf of the congregation of the First Methodist Church, and Dr. Locke will respond. There will be special music, and at the close of the set programme, the family of Dr. Locke, supported by official members of the church, will stand in line at the altar rail and will be presented to each person present.

DR. WALKER RETURNS.

Dr. Hugh K. Walker, pastor of Immanuel Presbyterian Church, returned on Wednesday from Catalina, where he spent his summer vacation, and will take up his regular work today, preaching both morning and evening. In the afternoon he will take part in the dedicatory services at Hollenbeck Home.

TO ATTRACT THE ARTISTIC.

President Stewart of the Chamber of Commerce has appointed the following Musicians' and Artists' Committee to take up the matter of formulating a plan for special literature to interest people in these professions to make their homes in Los Angeles: Charles F. Edson, chairman; James Slauson, T. E. Gibbon, L. Behymer, J. O. Koepfli.

EAST SIDE JUBILEE.

Thursday the East Side Improvement Association will hold a "jubilee meeting" in Conaty Hall, corner of Downey avenue and Daly street, to arouse enthusiasm for all works that tend to the betterment and improvement of that section of the city.

OPENING OF NEW TRACT.

Steel Pipe Will Carry Irrigation Water in Latest Subdivision at Beaumont.

As a direct result of the heavy demand for Beaumont lands, surveyors are now in the field platting another subdivision of 250 acres, to be known as the Edgar Vineyard tract. This will make the sixth tract put on the market in ten months. The land included is studded with live oak trees and takes in the old Edgar homestead and vineyard, formerly the property and home of Mrs. W. F. Edgar of this city. The property will be divided into ten-acre tracts and sold for grape culture. Twenty thousand feet of steel water mains from the Baker Iron Works of this city will be used to pipe water on the property.

Two excursions to Beaumont last week resulted in sales of lots and acreage reported at $3800. Riverside buyers took fifteen acres in the Cherry Valley West addition to plant apple orchards and other purchasers represented four eastern States.

Many buildings are being erected, including two cottages for the Valley Construction and Supply Company, costing $3000; A. M. Belford, bungalow, $1000; Albert Curler, two-story business block, $4500, and Mrs. J. S. Inkster, bungalow, $1500.

Recent purchasers include J. W. Powell, five acres, $750; William Buell, five acres, Cherry Valley West addition, $700; Mrs. Emma J. Buell, lot, $125; C. E. Blanford, five acres in Cherry Valley West addition, $700; Emmet Barber, lot $150; Miss Josephine Datin, two lots, $300; E. L. and Maud Baker, lot, $425; Mary Eady, lot, $125; A. W. Best, five acres, $425; Frank M. Ridsdale, ten acres in the Cherry Valley West addition, $1500; A. Meek, three acres, $259; Mrs. Katie Knight, three acres, $259; H. E. MacDonald, lot, $135; Mrs. Cunthia Sterling, two lots, $1255; Miss Nettie Tomaschke, five acres, $425; George Meyer, five acres, Cherry Valley, and lot, $1075.

GOOD BUSINESS REPORTED.

E. J. McCully Company reports good business. At lot on the north side of Thirty-sixth street, east of South Park avenue, 40x125 feet, was transferred by Humphrey Taylor to D. E. Howard for $800. Three lots on the north side of Vestal avenue, between Baster and Husted streets, 150x150 feet in all, were sold by Mrs. Mary E. Henry to Mrs. M. Richards for $1000. A lot 50x150 feet on Morcom avenue, between Tropico avenue and Cerro Gordo street was sold to James Crichton for the Wicks Realty Syndicate for $650. Two lots on Morcom avenue, between Baxter and Donaldson streets, 100x150 feet, were sold by R. D. McCully to Mrs. W. J. Hatch for $1200.

NEW CONTRACTS FILED.

THE MARKETS.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

Grapes were the leading sellers among the fruits on the last day of the week. Tokays, which made their initial appearance during the week, were dropped to the level of $1 on the final morning arrivals. Concords and Delawares were the most expensive among the varieties, and sold slowly on that account. The former are still holding well at $1.50, while the latter are bringing 25 cents less per lug box. Black Peru, Hamburgs and Muscatels all broke freely during the week, and the low-water mark was reached at 35 cents per box on several varieties. The Black Malvoisi is making an excellent impression in its first season on account of its long-keeping qualities as well as its fine flavor. The coming few days are expected to bring out the first Mission and Red Emperors, as well as few of the late Malagas.

With only 62 cases of eggs received, the market was very firm. There was no indication of an advance, however, and it is the opinion of a number of people who are familiar with the general egg situation that the present prices at their low stage, have been brought about by manipulation on the part of several dealers who are holding a large amount of eastern stock, and are getting a good price for it, while it is in demand. There were not many offerings and bids were also few.

Butter of all grades seemed plentiful yesterday morning, and when offered in quantity, there were no buyers to take it up. Both creamery grades and cooking butter as well as eastern extra creamery were refused. Prices were a trifle off color, and receipts were 18,121 pounds.

Swiss imported cheese was the feature of selling in that commodity. Two wheels were sold on 'change at the current quotations. There were good offerings of all the eastern and northern fresh cheese, and no reports on arrivals were received.

A car of Highland potatoes to be delivered during the first days of the week was sold on 'change. The spuds were traded as fancy and the price delivered in Los Angeles was given as $1.15, showing thereby a slight decline in values of the past two weeks. Local Burbanks were offered but not taken, and no spot extra fancy potatoes were obtainable when called for. Receipts were above the average, totaling 2336 sacks.

Onion prices were the same throughout the week, and 104 sacks were reported in. The Australian Browns, Yellow Danvers and Silverskins are the only obtainable onions at present.

Bean receipts were 392 sacks. Lady Washingtons and pinks were the only offerings. Sweet potatoes have been selling better and 157 sacks were reported in.

Lettuce was better represented the last of the week, and as a result there were fractional declines. Cabbage, too, was not as firm as it has been. Asparagus is about all in, and cauliflower is still being shipped from the north. Celery is arriving in larger quantities right along, and there are two varieties on hand, the oak heart and the golden top. They are shipped in from the Santa Ana fields. Bunch goods remain unaltered in value.

The long-expected advance in the price of beef on the hoof came yesterday. Hay-fed heifers and steers as well as cows, were all advanced ¼ to ½ cent a pound. This will cause little advance in the price of fresh beef, since there was a rise in anticipation of the present higher figures on live stock, several weeks ago. Hogs and sheep remain the same. The fish supply is still sufficient to go around, with less northern arrivals than usual.

LOS ANGELES STOCK EXCHANGE.

MARKET BRISK AT WEEK-END.

TRADE IN LEADING OIL STOCKS AND BONDS.

Strong Demand for General List Apparent and Prices Show Tendency to Seek Higher Levels—Deals in Home Telephone Preferred, Columbia and Olinda Land.

Business on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange yesterday was remarkably good for Saturday. There was trading in several of the leading oil stocks, two bonds were sold, the demand for the general list was strong, and prices showed a tendency to seek higher levels.

Two $1000 bonds of the Pacific Light and Power Company were handled at 88½. The demand for these continues good, and there was considerable activity "off board." The close was at 88@92, the bid showing a ½ point decline.

Ten shares of Home Telephone preferred changed hands at 46.50. The close was strong and fractionally higher at 46.50@46.75.

Three thousand shares of Columbia Oil changed hands at 93 1-2@93 1-4 cash. The close was at 93@1.00, unchanged from that of the preceding day.

One thousand shares of Olinda went at 17, on a buyer 30-day contract, and the close was at 16 3-8@16 5-8, showing a 1 7-8 points rise in the bid, and a drop of 1 3-8 in the asked price.

Associated Oil was not handled, but closed higher at 31.75@32.75. A strong bid of 1.50 was made for Brookshire Oil, which was offered at 2.00. Central was higher in the bid, closing with a 2 1-2 point gain, at 87 1-2@98. The asking price was off 1 point. Fullerton Oil closed 3 points lower in the bid, at 42.

Union Oil was unchanged in the bid and 1 point higher in the holding price, at 236.00@240.00. Union Provident closed at 232.00@238.00, up 1 point in the bid and off 1-2 in the asked price. United Petroleum remained unchanged at 415.00@450.00.

The bank stocks were practically unchanged from the close on Friday.

During the mining call three hundred shares of Furnace Creek Extension Copper were sold at 2 1-2@2 3-4. The close was at 2 1-4@2 1-2.

The exchange will be closed tomorrow and Wednesday.

AIDS FIRE SUFFERERS.

Los Angeles-Nevada Mining Exchange Helps in Relieving Rawhide. Stocks Record.

Usual week-end dullness was accentuated on the Los Angeles-Nevada Mining Exchange yesterday by the pre-holiday feeling. Trading was of small importance, although prices showed an inclination to rise.

Considerable demand developed for Florence, but only 300 shares were sold. The price was firm at 3.97½. The stock closed higher at 2.95@3.97½.

Combination Fraction was entirely neglected as far as trade was concerned, but closed with a 2-point advance in the bid and a 3-point gain in the asking price, being quoted at 1.50@1.53.

Goldfield Consolidated was quoted at 6.50@6.65, up 5 points in each quotation. None was sold. Jumbo Extension closed at 42@43, but there was no trading. A gain of ½ point was scored in the bid.

Johnnie Consolidated was an active stock, but at a very low price, 20,000 shares changing hands at ¾@7.00 a thousand shares, practically the lowest quotations ever made on this issue. The close was at 6.50@7.00 a thousand.

There was some trading in Blue Bell at 5⅜@5½. Eleven thousand shares of Baby Florence changed hands at 5@5⅛. California Hills sold at 1¼, and Dixie at 1½. Great Bend was a trader at 35. Mohawk Extension at 4½, and Milltown Fraction at 2¼.

The exchange wired the Relief Committee at Rawhide to draw on it to the extent of $300 to aid fire sufferers in that camp.

Some Interest in Tonopahs, and Florence Comes in for Considerable Business—No Eastern Orders Received—Exchange Closes Until Next Thursday.

[Special service to The Times by B. F. Taylor, No. 112 West Third street. Member Los Angeles-Nevada Mining Exchange.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 5.—There was very little doing on the exchange today. Most of the brokers took advantage of the three days' holiday next week and left their offices last night.

There was some trading in the Tonopahs on the formal call, and Florence came in for quite a volume of business. There were no eastern orders today, and Nevada was not active either in buying or selling. Following are the closing bid and ask prices with sales on the formal call:

GENERAL EASTERN.

EVENING UP IN THE WHEAT PIT.

USUAL TRADING TO CLEAR THE BOARDS FOR HOLIDAY.

Receipts at Duluth and Minneapolis for Day Are Enormous and Exceptionally Heavy Movement Is Bound to Result in Weakening Prices, It Is Claimed.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 5.—Business in the wheat pit was of an evening up character, as is usual preceding a holiday, and holders being more anxious to sell than shorts were to buy, prices steadily declined all day. Receipts at Minneapolis and Duluth were enormous, the total arrivals today at those points being 766 cars, against 447 cars the corresponding day a week ago, and it was predicted that the receipts at Minneapolis next Tuesday would aggregate from 2000 to 2500 cars. Despite an unusually urgent demand for cash wheat by millers in the Northwest, and the large sales of flour which have been made there the past few days, this exceptionally heavy movement naturally could have no other effect, it was claimed, than to weaken wheat values. Local exporters claimed that any material decline in prices would force liberal sales for export, but only small sales had been made during the day. Minneapolis and Chicago cash wheat premiums were unchanged, and St. Louis was 1-2 lower. The market closed weak, and only a trifle above the lowest price of the day.

Corn was dragged down slightly by the weakness of wheat. The selling of September was due to the turning out of about 180,000 bushels of contract corn from elevators during the past 24 hours. The market closed weak, with prices 1-8 to 1-2 lower.

Oats were weak on selling of September and December deliveries by cash houses. At the sample tables the demand was rather slack, and prices declined 1-2 to 1c. The market closed weak with prices off 1-8 to 3-8.

Provisions were dull and easy. At the close, prices were a shade higher to 7 1-2c.

Cash quotations were as follows: Flour was firm; winter patents, 4.10@4.60; straights, 4.20@4.40; spring patents, 5.70@5.75; straights, 4.20@4.50; bakers, 2.70@4.10; No. 2 spring wheat, 98; No. 3, 94@1.05; No. 2 red, 95½@99¼; No. 2 corn, 79@79½; No. 2 yellow, 79½@80; No. 2 white oats, 51; No. 3 white, 48½@50¼; No. 2 rye, 75@76½; good feeding barley, 60@62; fair to choice malting, 62@65; No. 1 northwestern flaxseed, 1.28½; prime timothy seed, 3.40; short ribs, sides (loose,) 8.87½@9.25; mess pork, per bbl., 14.60@14.65; lard, per 100 lbs., 9.67½; short clear sides (boxed,) 9.25@9.50; whisky, basis of high wines, 1.37.

GOOD IDEA.

WILL IGNORE LABOR DAY.

JOBBERS AND RAILROADS TO OBSERVE ADMISSION DAY.

Operators Recognize That the Observance of Labor Day Is Becoming Simply an Acknowledgment of the Principles of Unionism and the Violence of Its Methods.

Labor Union Day or Admission Day—which shall be celebrated? One signifies only labor unionism as at present observed. The other commemorates the introduction of California into sisterhood with the Stars of the Union. It has a historical significance that makes it a part of the record of the marvelous development of this great State, and is therefore worthy of annual commemoration.

The creation of Labor Day was a recognition of the rights of the laboring people of the State. The motive was a good one, as the very foundation of State and national greatness rest upon labor. The purpose for which the day was set apart for observance has, however, failed. The day has been taken possession of by the labor unions which have sought to create the impression that Labor Day was for their aggrandizement, a recognition of their importance. How slight is the foundation for such arrogance may be seen from the small position unionism occupies in comparison with the labors of the country. Statistics show that of the more than forty million laboring people in this country unionism can only claim about two million, yet this minority has obtained an undue prominence because of the noisy manner in which its claims have been put forward, and the violence with which its demands have been enforced. Indeed, so much violence has accompanied unionism that the observance of Labor Day by others than unionites becomes really an indorsement of this violence, and an acquiescence in all the methods whereby unionism attempts to take the control of industrial enterprises and dictate the hours they shall be operated, the wages that shall be paid, the conditions under which the work shall be done, and the amount of work that shall be performed.

The members of the large and influential Jobbers' Association of this city, and also the railroad companies, have therefore decided to take no part in the recognition of Labor Day, as those who demand the leadership of the events of the day have proved themselves hostile rather than friendly, to the industrial interests of the city. They will, however, observe Admission Day, and so far as it is possible, will close their establishments and give their employés a holiday on Wednesday, September 9.

Other States make much of those days that have a significance in their State's history. So strong is this feeling that a few years ago Massachusetts by legislative enactment abolished Fast Day which had lost its significance and inaugurated Patriot's Day in order that a historical event might be more properly celebrated. Labor Day has already lost its significance because of unionism. Let us all elevate Admission Day, a day in the celebration of which all may participate.

HAS FINE OFFICES.

Realty Firm Enters Handsome Quarters in Own Building at Fourth and Hill Streets.

The Wright & Callender Company now occupies one of the handsomest ground-floor real estate offices in the city. Last week the firm moved into its new offices on the ground floor of the Wright & Callender building, at Fourth and Hill streets, and immediately things in the real estate business began to look more prosperous to the members and employés of that concern. Handsome, but not ostentatious, the fittings of this place are conducive to confidence in the minds of all clients doing business with the company.

Solid mahogany desks, railings, counters and built-in seats give an air of solidity, while the handsome electric fixtures in ceilings, and on all desks, lend an air of daintiness. The walls are decorated in harmonious designs.

The information desk is immediately in front of the door, as one enters, while to the right, occupying the space in front of the large window, is the loan and business-property department, of which Mr. Andrews, vice-president of the firm, is the head. Behind the information desk is the rental department for both business and residence properties. A private desk is reserved for the manager. Adjoining is Mr. Wright's ground-floor office, with Mr. Callender's close by. The insurance department is next, fitted conveniently with built-in furniture, filing cabinets and racks for the map books, etc.

The residence sales department, in charge of George Giles and H. R. Kells, is a feature, there being plenty of room, easy chairs, and other comforts. Adjoining this is a private office for the use of either salesman. Across from this section is the bookkeeping and collection department, lighted well by a skylight. A large fire-proof vault is in connection.

The mezzanine floor is fitted up with a balcony, on which the business property department will be located later. Back of this, and opening off a short corridor, are three large Thermometer for the corresponding hours showed [illegible] deg. and 72 deg. Relative humidity, 5 a.m., [illegible] per cent.; 5 p.m., 63 per cent. Wind, 5 a.m., northeast, velocity 3 miles; 5 p.m., [illegible], velocity 11 miles. Maximum temperature, [illegible] deg.; minimum, 61 deg. Barometer reduced to sea level.

Weather Conditions.—The depression over the Colorado River Valley has deepened somewhat during the last twenty-four hours, while the pressure along the Pacific Slope has risen slightly. This distribution of pressure over the Pacific Slope, while causing fair weather in all sections, has caused a reappearance of morning cloudiness in the coast sections. East of the Rocky Mountains fair weather has prevailed, except in the Southern States, where local thunder-showers occurred Friday. At Atlanta, 1.42 inches of rain fell in the last twenty-four hours. The pressure distribution over the Pacific Slope is favorable for fair weather in Los Angeles and vicinity tonight, Sunday and probably Monday, with cloudiness or fog during the morning hours.

Forecasts.—Local forecast for Los Angeles and vicinity: Fair tonight and Sunday; north to west winds.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 5.—Conditions are favorable for cloudy weather in Northern California and probably showers in the Sierras, with fair weather in Southern California Sunday, with fresh west winds. Forecasts:

San Francisco and vicinity: Cloudy Sunday; somewhat threatening; fresh west wind.

Santa Clara Valley: Cloudy Sunday; fresh northwest wind.

Sacramento Valley: Cloudy Sunday; fresh south wind.

San Joaquin Valley: Cloudy Sunday; fresh northwest wind.

Los Angeles and vicinity: Fair Sunday; light west wind.

Arizona: Fair Sunday and Monday.

WELL AND TRULY.

CORNER-STONE OF LIBRARY LAID.

MASONIC CEREMONY IMPRESSES LONG BEACH CROWD.

Festival of Sea Ends With Night of Revelry—Girl Takes Poison in Mistake for Jamaica Ginger—Three Horses Cremated and Residence and Barn Burned.

LONG BEACH, Sept. 5.—In the presence of about 5000 people, the Grand Lodge officers of the Masonic order today officiated at the laying of the corner-stone of the new public library, the $30,000 gift of Andrew Carnegie.

Grand Master Perrine, Grand Senior Warden Oscar Lawler and Grand Secretary John Whicher arrived at 2 o'clock and were taken to the Masonic Temple. At 2:30 they entered carriages, and, escorted by the Knights Templar, Eminent Commander J. J. Morgan, proceeded to Pacific Park, where the exercises were held. On a temporary platform were seated the Grand Lodge officers, the Mayor, members of the City Council and library board, ladies of the Eastern Star and specially invited guests.

Mayor Windham, in an introductory address, congratulated the city upon the acquisition of a splendid educational institution. Grand Master Perrine spoke of the part Masons have taken in laying other corner-stones of public libraries in California.

The Masonic ceremony was then proceeded with, after which Rev. Charles Pease delivered the oration. Following a selection by the band, Charles F. Lummis, city librarian of Los Angeles, spoke on the value of public libraries as reference and historical depositories, and the exercises closed with the doxology.

FESTIVAL ENDS.

The Festival of the Sea closed in a blaze of glory with the advent of King Rex and his retinue, who started a night of festivity and hilarity, which the willing subjects took up readily. Fast and furious were the confetti battles which raged on the streets and pike during the evening. King Rex, whose identity was most successfully kept a mystery till tonight, proved to be H. S. Callahan, husband of the queen.

LONG BEACH NOTES.

Only the prompt use of emetics last night saved the life of Miss Louise Howe, daughter of Charles Howe, No. 446 Lime avenue. She was taken ill during the night, and going to a medicine chest, got what she thought was Jamaica ginger, but took a dose of peroxide of hydrogen.

Two fires occurred last night in the northern part of the city. The first destroyed the residence of Mrs. M. E. Tobin, corner of Catalina and California, together with the contents. The other burned a barn belonging to Walter Denning at No. 1028 Chestnut avenue. Three horses were cremated.

Senator Luis Martinez de Castro of Sinaloa, Mex., and his party were the guests today of Mayor Windham and J. F. Craig in a trip over the inner harbor. Tonight they were guests at Hotel Virginia for dinner of Messrs. and Mmes. B. P. Dayman, C. F. Van De Water and Stephen Townsend.

ANTS AT UPLAND.

Dreaded Argentine Insects Discovered in Citrus Grove—Specimens Sent to Washington.

UPLAND, Sept. 5.—A ten-acre orange and lemon grove in the eastern section of this city is infested, it is said, with the dreaded Argentine ant. Specimens of the pest sent to Berkeley brought forth the opinon by the authorities there that they are the genuine Argentine article. The orchard belongs to a woman named Myers, and it is understood she claims this same species of ant has been bothering her for over a year past. Local representatives of the Horticultural Commission have secured some of the insects and forwarded them to Washington. A small plum tree has been almost denuded of leaves and fruit by the ants.

W. A. Freemire is erecting a $5000 home on Euclid avenue, which will be one of the most attractive houses in the city.

Mahasei Sakai, who was employed at the Post & Klusman vineyard near Cucamonga, died very suddenly and a Coroner's jury decided death was due to a valvular disease of the heart.

Dana Leeke has gone to Colorado to take a two years' course in the State School of Mines at Golden.

EXPECTED FROM EUROPE.

P. E. Walline and daughter, Miss Fannie, accompanied by the friend of the latter, Miss Bertha Stevens, all of whom have been in Europe for the last six months, are expected home about the first of November.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Paulin have just returned from a six weeks' trip into Central and Northern California by automobile. They traveled 1700 miles with no more serious mishap than a punctured tire.

Messrs. A. C. Sikes and William Waddle have purchased the Denham property on San Bernardino avenue, Cucamonga, and contemplate a number of improvements.

EAGLES FLOCK TO AVALON.

AVALON, Sept. 5.—The Southern California Aerie of Eagles will hold its annual barbecue at the Isthmus tomorrow. No pains have been spared by the local branch in preparing for the large crowd that is expected. All parts of the State will be represented.

Hon. C. G. Conn of Indiana, who, last Monday, secured the largest bluefin tuna of the season, will leave for Annacapa Island in his launch Nevada this evening. D. L. G. Murphy of Converse, Ind., will accompany him.

A sheephead, measuring three feet in length and weighing twelve and one-half pounds, was captured today. This is the largest specimen seen since the death of "Pat," which took place three years ago. It is feared the fish will not survive in captivity.

The following Angeleños are week-

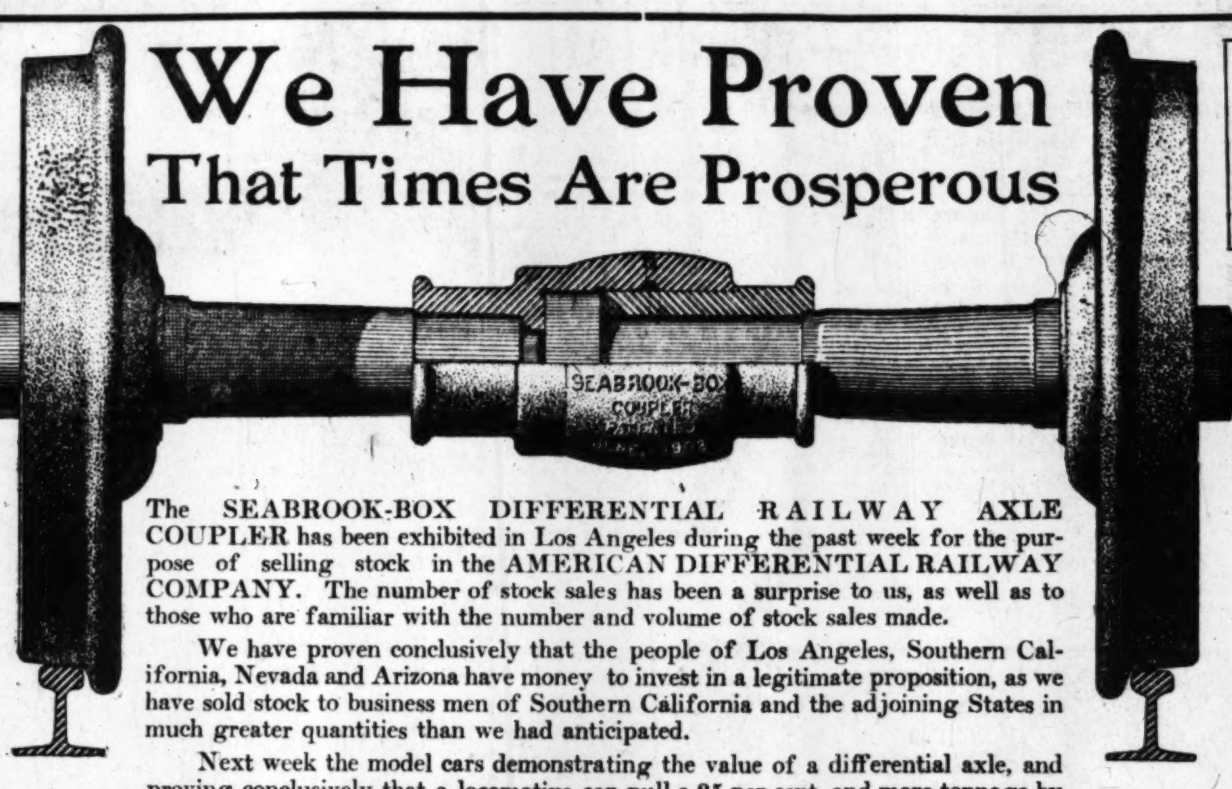
We Have Proven That Times Are Prosperous

B. R. Seabrook
Consulting Marine and Mechanical Engineer



The SEABROOK-BOX DIFFERENTIAL RAILWAY AXLE COUPLER has been exhibited in Los Angeles during the past week for the purpose of selling stock in the AMERICAN DIFFERENTIAL RAILWAY COMPANY. The number of stock sales has been a surprise to us, as well as to those who are familiar with the number and volume of stock sales made.

We have proven conclusively that the people of Los Angeles, Southern California, Nevada and Arizona have money to invest in a legitimate proposition, as we have sold stock to business men of Southern California and the adjoining States in much greater quantities than we had anticipated.

Next week the model cars demonstrating the value of a differential axle, and proving conclusively that a locomotive can pull a 25 per cent. and more tonnage by the use of the SEABROOK-BOX DIFFERENTIAL RAILWAY AXLE COUPLER, which will be exhibited in San Bernardino, and we invite the people of San Bernardino and vicinity to witness this demonstration.

Mr. B. R. Seabrook, the inventor, will be in charge of the demonstration during the time he is equipping on the Santa Fe Railway in their shops at San Bernardino. Mr. Seabrook will have with him a corps of engineers and mechanics who are competent to explain the device in its every detail. The device is noted for its simplicity, and it is the concensus of opinion that it will earn for the railroads of the United States at least two hundred and fifty millions of dollars per annum. We will leave you to draw your own conclusions as to what it will pay the stockholders of the company.

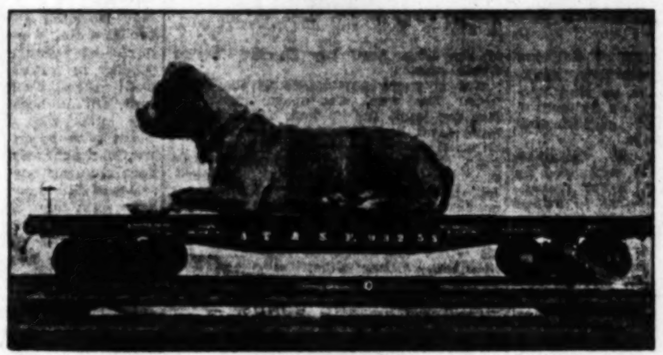
The stock is selling now at $1.00 per share and it may advance any day to $2.00 per share. We therefore advise that if you find it impossible to call at our general office at Los Angeles, or at our demonstrating room at San Bernardino, that you send in your subscription by mail.

This device is indorsed by railway master mechanics, master car-builders and other railroad officials throughout the United States. It is also indorsed by absolutely every mechanical engineer who has investigated it.

Our Board of Directors is composed of men who are thoroughly competent to handle a device of this kind. Mr. Seabrook, the inventor of the device, is a consulting marine and mechanical engineer, and has been general manager for a great many years of machine shops and foundries working from 600 to 1000 men.

Mr. James M. Aubery, president of the company, was for over twenty years manager of the Merchants' Dispatch in the cities of Chicago and Milwaukee. The other officers and directors of the company are each and every one of them competent in every way to fill the positions assigned to them.

It is the ambition of the officers and directors of this company to build up a company that will be a monument to themselves and to the commercial world. It is their ambition to have this company referred to in the future as the Bell Telephone and the Westinghouse Air-Brake companies are today.



The cut shown above is one of the small model cars, about five inches in height and 40 inches long. The small Boston terrier shown on the car will give you an idea of the height and size of the car.

It is the consensus of opinion with expert authorities that this company will be many times greater as a dividend earner than the Westinghouse Air-Brake Company has been. One thing is absolutely guaranteed, and that is that the officers will manage the affairs of the company in an honest, straightforward manner, and will endeavor to do at all times what is best for the stockholders. We therefore feel that it is a privilege for the public to have an opportunity to invest in a stock of this character.

For the benefit of those who have found it impossible to get to our demonstrating rooms on South Spring street during the past week, we have arranged to have a small model car demonstrated in our general offices in the Herman W. Hellman Building, and we shall be pleased to meet the Los Angeles public there, where the company are permanently located.

LOCAL FLYING MACHINES LEAVE ROOM FOR IMPROVEMENT.

Three Exhibited at Long Beach Interesting, but not as Reliable as Trolley Cars—All, However, Show Progress in Mastering Art of Aerial Navigation.

Many machines for air navigation have been designed in Los Angeles, but none has proved an unqualified success.

The three on exhibition at the Long Beach Festival of the Sea were all "gliders"—that is, they were all dependent on a flying start. One of them, J. S. Zerbe's "Bimini Baby," is a model of a forty-horse-power machine now under construction. It has three planes arranged in step formation, the highest in front. The frames are of half-inch steel tubing, and each plane has about 106 square feet of area. From the machine are suspended three bicycle wheels and a small pedal propeller. The wheels assist in starting the flight.

The "Dragon Fly," constructed and operated by Edgar Smith, is built upon bamboo frames, supporting superimposed planes set at angles. The machine is thirteen feet wide, four feet deep, and of a total height of six and one-half feet. The size was restricted because of the limited supply of bamboo obtainable. An automatic rudder is controlled by a spring mechanism and the operator maintains a horizontal position upon parallel bars and balances the flier by shifting his weight.

The model was finished only last week and did fairly well in easy trials.

The "Beetle," designed and operated by Frank Hetzel, is also built upon frames of bamboo, which support two superimposed planes twenty feet wide by five feet deep. They are about four feet apart in the center, but meet at what may be termed the "tips of the wings." Like the "Dragon Fly," a rudder is carried at the rear, and equilibrium is maintained by the operator. The rudder is operated by hand.

At the trial flight at Long Beach the platform erected on the grand stand did not afford room to attain sufficient momentum, and a rather hasty descent followed.

WORKER'S PAGE—Turkish Rug Making.

Real Story of the Turkish Rug.

HOME OF THE INDUSTRY IS IN SERVIA, WHERE THEY ARE MADE BY THE WOMEN AND GIRLS.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

YOU ARE proud of that Turkish rug of yours, aren't you, as you study over the richness of its colorings and wonder at the damsels, hooded and veiled, who wove it, each stitch with loving care, in some far-away oriental harem? Every time you look at it you can conjure up other pictures of the changeless East, pictures whose sources you must admit are to be found in the tales of the Caliph of Bagdad which you read in a far-distant childhood.

The home of the Turkish rug the birthplace, if you will, is at Pirot, over the frontier in Servia.

There are no factories, but the rugs are made by the natives in their own homes, where the carpet looms, mere wooden framework, are set up against the wall On the ground at their feet there is a tiny basin with shreds of colored wools. It will take just one month to make a small rug, such a one costing here $2.40. Four women work on it; they divide the sum equally. The threads of wool they make themselves. The dyes are bought and they color them likewise. Only women are engaged at such labors; the men meantime till the fields. At the age of 14, a girl begins to receive instruction from her mother.

In a given year the women of a family will make usually a dozen large carpets. Where these average two meters by a meter and a half in size, one can get them for thirty francs.

Remember, they work on these only in leisure time, for women have their household duties here, as they have anywhere else in the world.

The bobbin with the long white base thread is run through the cords, and then they push it down by means of a toothed "pusher," to translate literally. It is so simple and yet so delicate—a single thread misplaced destroys the harmony of all.

The women make the carpets from the wool of perhaps 15,000 sheep, raised in their district. The wool taken, many of the sheep are exported to London each year, bringing from $1.20 to $1.60 each. The major portion of the herd, however, is raised for this wool, though locally the meat, too, is eaten in the summer, when it bears no odor.

For the carpeting, then, two societies of the women of the countryside have been formed and a commercial company arranged whereby it pays these workers by the day. As a result the women are sure of a living and of purchasers—rather than working merely for a pastime, as they formerly did. Occasionally an exposition of the output is made at Belgrade and helps to promote business.

The annual output of "genuine Turkish" carpets here is estimated as worth, on the ground 30,000 francs. How many per cent. value is added by the importer and vendor may be judged when it is stated that we were ourselves offered $40 at home for a rug for which we had paid $2.

In Pirot one can have a rug or carpet made to order from the local pattern books. Four or five women then will join to work on a carpet, and it will take them perhaps ten months to complete a big one. Such a carpet then will cost from $80 to $100 at Pirot. The more complicated the pattern, obviously, the greater the expense. Some times little girls, as young as ten, are broken in on such carpet. A woman often clears the enormous sum of 6 cents a day at her labors.

Poor as these families are, they are rather averse to working out for strangers. They raise their own food and raise and work up the larger part of the wherewithal for their garments. The lamb meat here is but 6 cents the kilogram, and then most folk have their own sheep. So the rugs supply the funds for what else might be needed.

As to the sheep, they graze at a distance of five or six hours from town. Village boys turn shepherds, and live there, cutting the wool and cleaning it right out in the open.

Once a week, mothers, sisters, trudge out with a change of garments, and bread for the week. Otherwise, there is no variant to the monotone, the lads live in the huts out there, feeding and feasting on roast lamb or on goat's milk and the cheese they make from the latter.

A shepherd will suffice for two or three families. He goes out to stay from April 23 to October 26, and for this period gets $10 or $8, (they always put the larger sum first, over here, as they tell it.) for the six months' service. It makes us think of the little herd boy Bayard Taylor wrote about.

Nor is there any waste to the business. The wool, the meat, accounted for, the lamb fat is done up in petroleum cans, and shipped out to Turkey. Some times when the price of cans is high, the stomach of the lamb will be used instead, for shipment. Cheese, too, is made of the milk of sheep or goat and exported, $1000 to $1250 worth annually. When a woman's net wage is 6 cents a day, the value of the dollar rises considerably, one must remember. Other sheep products, too, are exported, taken by wagon, that is. Butter for instence, finds its way even into Macedonia.

Every one who buys a rug carries it on his shoulders when he travels, much as we might a steamer blanket. It is the custom, so who cares? And beside, they avoid duty by so doing. It counts with the wearing apparel.

Industrial Independence.

IT IS ALL WRONG FOR UNIONS TO DICTATE TO EMPLOYERS REGARDING ANYTHING.

THE closed shop required by unionism has become so onerous that employers are, one after another, really welcoming strikes as an opportunity to make a fight for their former independence in the conduct of their business.

It surely must be ignorance of what is politic which leads any employer to recognize any union or any walking delegate or to make any compromise whatever with any body of men as to the conduct of his own affairs. So long as the employer does the business and pays the wages, he must be absolutely free to conduct his business in his own way if it is to be a success. One compromise leads to a dozen others, one arbitration leads to forty others, and troubles multiply fast for the man who begins to concede to or arbitrate with any organized body of men. So long as men are not equal (they never have been and never will be so far as skill, reliability, integrity and industry are concerned,) just so long will it be utterly impossible to deal with men except individually. "The laborer is worthy of his hire," but some men always have been and always will be better than others and worthy of more "hire" than others.

It is perfectly right for a man to join a union if he feels that it is of benefit to him to do so, but it is equally right for employers to organize to resist the unreasonable, unwarranted demands of unions and unionism. It is all wrong for unions to attempt to dictate as to the conduct of one's business or to dictate as to whom one shall employ or as to whom one shall discharge. It is all wrong for unions to dictate how long a man may work, for whom he may work, or to try to dictate as to the price each man shall receive without regard to his worth or worthlessness. It is perfectly right for any man to quit any job which does not suit him as to hours or conditions of pay, but it is all wrong for him to attempt to dictate that any other man or that all men shall not engage under the conditions which he refuses.

Every union man declares that he opposes violence. Yet every act of unionism shows its contempt of law and order. Its force and strength lies entirely in violence and vile acts. The fear of ostracism and of damage to person and property is all and everything that forces good men and good workmen into unions. The good man always has lost by unions and it is only the bad men and bad workmen who gain by unionism.

It's the non-union men who get hurt and who never take the offensive side, but who are always put on the defensive by the villainous deeds of the dastards who control the destinies of most all the unions on earth. The motto of the officers, to whom men cannot or will not pay the fees and dues they ask for, is: "Get off the earth or starve. Slugging for you!"

A preacher stood up before a Sunday-school holding up 50 cents, saying: "Boys, I am going to give this to the one who answers my question best." Looking at one little boy, he asked: "Whom do you love best?" The answer was: "I love my mamma best." Looking at another little boy: "Whom do you love best?" The answer was: "I love my papa best." Looking down the aisle, he asked another one whom he loved best, and he replied that while he loved his papa and mamma, he thought he loved our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ the best of all. "Come up and get the 50 him the money and patting him on the head, he asked his name. "Ike Einstein," was the reply.

So it is in this labor war. Unions and unionism would, and do, crucify the employer, and for 50 cents will turn around and call him their savior.

One man alone can, if he has a backbone, instead of a wish-bone, and some sand in his crop, fight for his freedom and win it, but it is much easier and quicker when organization meets union for the fray.

Los Angeles has enjoyed industrial peace because unionism has not been allowed to secure control of industrial conditions. Detroit, another prosperous city, has honored the same thing. Mr. Hogan in the "Gateway" published in that city, some time ago, concluded an article on the Employers' Association of Detroit by saying:

"My observations lead me to the following conclusions.

"The Employers' Association is an important factor for good in the industrial life and progress of Detroit.

"The agitation in union-labor ranks against the Employers' Association is due to its policy of the OPEN SHOP.

"Detroit enjoys an industrial peace by reason of the existence of the Employers' Association in consequence of which outside manufacturers are attracted to this city.

Organized labor almost always is defeated in contests with Organized Capital.

"Labor unions in Detroit are losing members and influence, thereby indicating DISINTEGRATION.

"The demand for the CLOSED SHOP is an indication of weakness in the union.

"That OPEN SHOP conditions realize better returns to both employé and employer than are possible under CLOSED SHOP conditions."

The Labor Trust.

Col. N. F. Thompson, editor of the Tradesman, of Chattanooga, Tenn., says: "There is no element that enters into any trust in this country today; and about which politicians are calling so loudly for repression, that does not apply with equal force to the labor trust, and yet before this great menace to the liberties of our nation these so-called patriots are conspicuously silent. I believe the time has come for dealing with this trust precisely and impartially as it is proposed to deal with any others. It is the enforcing of the law against one class and permitting its flagrant violation in others that is doing more to undermine respect for law and authority in this country than all else combined. I regard the labor trust as really the most dangerous of all, because it is terrorizing public sentiment, intimidating the public press, browbeating politicians, and seeking to subvert all government to its infamous policies, and few dare openly oppose it."

Open Shop on the Lakes.

The open shop position assumed by the steamship companies on the lakes is proving satisfactory to every one except the unionists. Says the Duluth Herald: "Supply and demand maintain an even balance at the Head of the Lakes as far as the marine labor situation is concerned. There are few idle men on the docks or loafing around the lake carriers' shipping office at the foot of Fifth avenue west. Capt. James Curle, the shipping master, has found thus far that he is able to fill every order and still find no great surplus of idle men.

"What few idle men there on the cording to the shipping master. As is the case with every labor bureau or employment office, there are a few, who hang around, stalling that they want a job, and flee when there is one in sight. There are men, who sit around in the shipping office day after day, have been offered from ten to fifty jobs each and always find some excuse for refusing to take them. The shipping office is a good hangout, they want to keep up the appearance of wanting a job and still they want to steer clear of anything like work.

"The reports from lower lake ports that the unions may start trouble on account of dissatisfaction with conditions under the 'open shop' are not taken seriously by local agents of vessel lines. They say the engineers and masters, with whom the vessel owners must deal directly, are better satisfied now than they have ever been, and would not take kindly to a return of the old conditions. They say the masters and engineers have control of their men, whereas they did not under the union contract plan. No more work is done, they say, but it is done with better grace, as the heads may discharge or hire any one they please without consulting the union officials."

Strikes and Crimes.

The recent firing upon a trainload of strike-breakers near Birmingham, Ala., leads the Washington Star to say:

"There was no difference in principle between the murderous fussilade fired upon a trainload of strike-breakers near Birmingham, Ala., and an attack by a mob of 'sympathizers' on a car run in defiance of strikers through a city street. No reasonable advocate of the right to organize and strike will probably go so far as to claim that the men who fired on the train in Alabama were in any manner justified in their crime. The men upon whom they fired were being taken to operate mines in which the strikers had refused to work. There was no moral suasion, no effort to dissuade the strike-breakers from proceeding on their enterprise. Without warning a mob of murderers opened fire and killed. In just the same manner when a street railway corporation in its undertaking to operate its line notwithstanding the refusal of its employés to continue in work sends forth a car under guard an effort is made by a mob to prevent its passage. Murder is often done in such cases. Where is the line to be drawn? Where does the right to strike end? Where does the right of the man to work regardless of his affiliation begin?

"In this Alabama case murder has been done, just as deliberate murder as though a man slew another in personal conflict."

Workingmen's Demands.

So many demands for legislation and for recognition have been made by unionites and such representatives of the same as Gompers, that there is danger of losing sight of the comparative small number of workingmen included in the ranks of organized labor. The vociferousness of this branch of workers has secured for them an undue prominence. The American Federation of Labor represents, approximately, but 5 per cent. of the male wage-earners of the country, and organized labor all told represents approximately only 7½ per cent. of the same. Therefore, 98 per cent. of the American wage-earners are going about their business, making no demands for recognition that give them any special preference beyond other citizens of the country. These are the men, however, who are going to determine the election of the next President. They are the men who do not recognize the need of unionism to secure "rights" for themselves. They are not organizing political parties, nor holding conventions, but they have the good government on election day. The desperation of Gompers to secure recognition in the present national campaign is shown by his eagerness to line up the union-labor vote for Bryan, and for Democratic candidates for other offices. The defeat of Bryan under such circumstances means the national defeat of organized labor, and will greatly reduce the demands that will be made upon the coming Congress for such anarchistic legislation as the anti-injunction proposition. In a recent interview with Chairman Mack of the Democratic National Committee, Gompers submitted plans which he had formulated to effect an active campaign in the labor world in the interest of Democracy. The plans provide for the establishment of labor bureaus in several labor centers, with a central labor bureau in Chicago at the Democratic headquarters. The National Committee is to appoint only members of the American Federation of Labor as heads of these bureaus.

As this information comes from Chairman Mack, there can be no doubt of its authenticity, nor of the determination of Gompers to place the Democratic party in a position where it will have to grant any demands organized labor may make upon it. As he has been one of the chief disturbing elements in the labor situation of the country, by encouraging organization on representations that such movement would give unionites anything they might ask, it looks as if he were being driven to desperation to make good. The defeat of Bryan will be a defeat of Gompers anr attempted union domination in national legislation.

SALT MAKING WITHOUT LABOR.

AN INDUSTRY THAT SHOWS THE TRIUMPH OF INVENTION.

A Stream of Water Soaks Out the Salt from Its Underground Bed and no Human Labor Is Required Till After It Has Been Barreled for Shipment.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

Out in Saginaw, Mich., that old saw, "He couldn't earn his salt," used in reference to the slothful propensity of lazy persons, has lost its significance, for in a single plant a hundred baker's dozen of barrels of that useful commodity is mined, purified, crystallized and packed every twenty-four hours, and not a hand is raised. All the few men who are employed in the plant have to do is to watch the automatic machinery and keep it in perfect running order.

Some old geographies have a picture of a man lying on his back picking at the rocks over him, and the legend under the picture is "Mining Salt." This was the method years ago, when a lazy man really could not earn his salt; but today, the salt mine is a very small round hole in the ground that goes straight down nearly a thousand feet without a turn, and is too small for a man to crawl into. Instead of a pick, a stream of water is used, and the salt comes to the surface not in chunks, but in a liquid state.

The water is forced into the well through a small iron pipe, under heavy pressure. At the bottom this water becomes saturated from the rock salt into which the well has been driven, and as more water continues to come down the pipe, and there is no other outlet, the water, now brine, comes to the surface through the tubing with which the well is lined.

It is gathered at the opening and is pumped into an elevated tank for storage. This brine is 98 per cent. strong; but is far from being pure. Besides salt it contains more or less iron and other inpurities, which must be removed before pure salt can be extracted. To remove these impurities, the brine is filtered, and this is also done without the aid of man. The brine is drawn from the storage tank into filters, which are merely large trays containing scraps of metal and other filtering material. These trays are placed one on top of another until the stack reaches a height of twenty feet. The brine flows by gravity into the top of this stack of trays and percolates through the filtering mass into troughs of wood below.

The trough carries the brine, still untouched by a man's hand, into great, solid concrete settling tanks. The remaining impurities are precipitated by a solution of lime, to which the brine is treated while in the settling tanks. The brine, now as pure and as clear and as blue as the ocean, and a thousand times more salty, is ready to be converted into crystals of salt. It is first pumped into a wooden building called the "salt house," where it is heated with steam pipes and prepared for the "grainers."

The "grainers" are long, narrow tanks, where the salt is "grained" or crystallized. These also are made of concrete, those at the Saginaw plant being the first "grainers" constructed of that material, the older tanks being made of wood. The "graining" is accomplished by heating the brine, for which purpose pipes are hung in the tanks, being completely submerged by the brine. Steam is turned into these pipes, and the "graining" proceeds rapidly. A thin crust of salt forms on the steaming surface, but it soon breaks and sinks, giving place to another crust.

The salt crystals settle rapidly to the floor of the tank, where ingeniously-constructed rakes scrap them into piles, which are delivered to a trough on the outside of the tank. Here another set of automatic rakes force the salt along the trough until it reaches a hopper set in the bottom of the trough. Through this hopper the salt drops onto a wide, swiftly-running rubber belt, which catches the salt and carries it to the storage building.

In the storage building the belt deposits its load into a vertical conveyor, and the crystals, still untouched by human hands, are lifted to the ceiling, where other belts take them and carry them to various parts of the building, dropping them into great white piles. It is inspected by State inspectors, and is then ready to be shipped.

Although the barrel in which it is shipped costs twice as much as the salt it contains, the salt is shipped by this method. Automatic conveyors take the salt from the pile, weigh it out into 280-pounds lots and deposit one lot in a barrel, the barrels coming up to the feed hopper on a moving platform. As soon as the barrel is full, or has received its load of 280 pounds, it moves along to a machine that puts in the head and nails it securely. The same machine stamps the brand and the name of the maker on the head of the barrel. From this machine the barrels pass on to the shipping platform and into the car door. Thus from the under crust of the Lower Peninsula of Michigan to the barrel in which it is shipped, the salt of the earth is converted and conveyed without the touch of humand hands.

Men whose vitality is exhausted, who have some private disease or weakness lurking in their system, who are prematurely old while still young in years, broken down wrecks of what they ought to be, and want to be strong and to feel as vigorous as they did before they wasted their strength, to enjoy life again, win back the vim, vigor and vitality lost, should consult us before it is too late.

It is humiliating to know that your manly strength is slipping away, to be weak, nervous, fretful, gloomy; have pains and aches in different parts of the body, your sleep disturbed, weak back, headache, despondency, melancholia, too frequent urination, palpitation of the heart, unable to concentrate your thoughts, memory, easily fatigued, specks before the eyes, aversion to society, lack of ambition, will power dizzy spells, vital losses, poor circulation, to feel cold, lifeless and worn out, primarily induced in many by abuses, excesses and overwork.

Vigorous manhood is the stepping stone to success in life. The man who has preserved the vitality him by nature, or, having lost it, has again regained it by securing proper treatment, is enabled to all barriers which impede his progress, both commercially and socially. It forces men to the front in all of life. Do you want to be strong, possess nerves of steel, self-confident, strength in every muscle, grit, energy and endurance in order to make your life complete? We have gladdened the hearts of of young and middle-aged men, restoring them to perfect specimens of physical manhood. If you are in these essential elements of manhood you should consult us at once.

Varicocele

No case of varicocele ever was or ever can be cured without an operation. Our operation is absolutely painless, devoid of all danger, and the result absolutely certain. By permission we can refer you to many of the leading business men of Los Angeles who have been cured by our method. If you have been "up against" doctors who advertise to cure Varicocele without an operation, and have spent your hard-earned money for naught, come in and have a friendly talk with us. We will gladly explain why Varicocele cannot be cured without an operation and explain the technique of our painless operation. Only one week's detention from work is necessary and the cure is complete and permanent in every instance.

Kidney and Bladder Trouble

Dr. Harrison & Co. are phenomenally successful in these troubles. Every case that comes to them is carefully examined and the true cause found for existing conditions. It is then easy for us to treat the case understandingly. Not all cases are easily understood. Not all men know how to treat them. Our success in curing demonstrates the positive proof of our ability.

Stricture

Pain is entirely eliminated under the treatment we have developed and perfected for the absolute cure of stricture by our new. improved PAINLESS METHODS. WE HAVE CURED MANY CASES THAT RESISTED ALL OTHER FORMS OF TREATMENT. CALL AND INVESTIGATE. BY PERMISSION WE CAN REFER YOU TO MANY CURED CASES IN TOWN. We do not pretend to work miracles, and cannot claim the almost supernatural skill of some of our would-be competitors, such as "dissolving" strictures as easily as the warm rays of the rising sun dissolves the snow.

Our Cure for "Weakness"

Nearly every man suffering from so-called vital weakness has a curable cause which is at the bottom of the trouble. The main causes are stricture, varicocele, enlarged inflamed prostate, results of abuses and excesses, badly treated disorders, etc., which obstruct the functional centers. When a man applies to us suffering from weakness we find and remove the cause, just the same as an expert engineer or electrician finds and removes the cause when machinery fails to do its work. We have no difficulty in curing these cases; we have cured them by the thousands. We have the necessary knowledge, skill and experience to find the cause and give the proper treatment, thus putting the organs in a normal condition, when the weakness disappears, which was only a symptom of the real trouble. We were the first specialists in the United States to publicly announce Prostatic Diseases as the Primary cause of Weakness. By our new, original and improved methods we have cured hundreds of cases pronounced incurable by other specialists. And today we are the only specialists curing Vital Weakness under an absolute guarantee. Prematureness, Loss of Power, are invariably due to local disorders, and cannot be cured by internal medicines or electrical appliances. Our treatment quickly removes all abnormal conditions in the organs involved and invariably results in complete restoration of functional activity.

We will cheerfully pay One Thousand Dollars to any physician or layman who can produce a case of weakness occurring in any man of good habits under the age of 65, not complicated by any organic disease of the heart, liver or kidneys, or by the sequalae of chronic venereal diseases, that we cannot completely cure in from four to six weeks by our new and improved method of local treatment. The local treatment is entirely painless, and does not involve the use of "instillations, suppositories," etc. We will effect the cure without prescribing a single drop of medicine and without using a single pill, tablet or granule, in the treatment of the more obscure forms of weakness, which may be classed as Psychopathic, Neuropathic, Congenital and Traumatic, we offer a modern and eminently successful line of treatment.

Psychopathic weakness is usually due to some form of mental aberration; Neuropathic weakness is due to diseases of the brain and spinal cord; Congenital weakness is due usually to mechanical organic impediments; Traumatic weakness is due to local inflammation due to abuse, venereal infection or injuries; asthenic weakness usually follows exhaustive diseases of various kinds.

Nature accomplishes nothing by force. Her work is wrought through gentle influences. We see evidences of this truth everywhere. Nature has a way of overcoming every disease. Sometimes she fails. The physician's duty is to help when nature falters, and to help by reinforcing the natural recuperative influences. This is often a delicate task. The treatment must be accurate, mild and gentle. Otherwise it works harm. Exciting tonics, fiery caustic and cruel cutting have no part in my practice. I have mild and harmless methods that cure by nature's plans, and that cure thoroughly and permanently in the briefest possible time. Why take chances? I offer you that which you are seeking, a quick and permanent cure through painless and harmless treatment.

May be inherent or contracted. When the system becomes tainted with the poison it may manifest itself in many ways—ulcers, scrofula, eczema, stiff and painful joints, eruptions, copper colored spots on the body, little ulcers in the mouth, swollen or inflamed tonsils, loss of hair, decay of flesh and bone. If your symptoms are any of these we invite you to take advantage of the treatment we offer, which will completely eradicate the last taint of poison from the system. You are cordially invited to consult us in person, we will give you such advice as will be for the betterment of your condition. Our treatment has been acquired through 25 years' arduous work. AMONG THE ARCHITECTS.

Jobs Planned by the Various Local Designers Include Many Classes of Buildings.

The last issue of the Southwest Contractor and Manufacturer, the new trades paper, contains the following items of building news:

B. C. Corbett has completed plans for a one and one-half story nine-room house for I. W. Lord, No. 240 Occidental boulevard, to be built in the vicinity of his present residence.

A. L. Haley has been commissioned to prepare plans for an eight-story reinforced concrete apartment-house building for a Mrs. Mason, who proposes to build on a lot 150 feet deep with a frontage of seventy-two feet on Union avenue, 160 feet north of Ninth street. This building, for which the preliminary plans are now being drawn, is to be modeled after the modern French apartment-houses, and will have individual balconies for each apartment, with French windows.

A. L. Haley has plans for a five-room residence to be built for C. D. Hooper on West Jefferson street.

A. L. Haley is superintending the alteration of the Foster flats at No. 1635 West Seventh, for the owner, Mrs. Lillian Barker. The six-room flats are being rearranged as three-room apartments.

A. L. Haley has completed the preliminary plans of an apartment-house to be built by Dr. C. C. Smith at Eighth and Main streets, Riverside. The structure is to contain eight three-room apartments, with baths and buffet kitchens.

Train & Williams have completed plans for a two-story residence to be built for John Rupp at Hollywood, and bids will be received next week.

F. M. Tyler has prepared plans for a seven-room bungalow to be built on Pine street, Hollywood, for L. C. Haynes.

A. B. Benton has the preliminary plans for the Y. M. C. A. building at Riverside ready for approval and it is expected some action will be taken by the Building Committee within a few days. The association is planning to erect a $60,000 structure; the funds, we are informed, have been raised.

Miss Clara C. Alden has completed plans for a six-room cottage, and also for an addition of seven rooms to the present residence of S. H. Herrick of Riverside. The cottage is to be built as a rental investment and will have concrete foundation, slash grain Oregon pine interior finish, electric wiring, modern plumbing, pressed brick mantel, solar heater. The seven-room addition is to have concrete foundation, pine interior finish, complete plumbing, electric wiring.

W. J. Saunders prepared the plans for the two-story reinforced concrete store, office and apartment building to be erected by C. A. Weaver at Glendora. The apartments are to be provided with individual kitchens and baths. Metal lath partitions, cement plastered, composition roofing, lavatories, sanitary plumbing are specified. It has been found necessary to change the original plans and contractors' bids will not be received for another ten days. The general work may be done by day labor.

B. M. Morris has plans for a ten-room double house, divided into two five-room flats, to be built at Sierra Madre for W. A. Evans.

W. H. Crane is preparing plans for an eight-room bungalow to cost, with garage, between $7000 and $10,000. J. B. Althouse is the owner.

C. E. Shattuck is preparing plans for a two-ane-one-half-story frame residence for A. Greene, to be built on Arapahoe street between Ninth and Tenth streets. It will contain twelve rooms, furnace, automatic water heater. The interior finish will be slash grain Oregon pine, oak floors, plate glass, baths, electric wiring and fixtures, sanitary plumbing, blue brick.

The contract for building the eight-story reinforced concrete building at Second and Hill streets, to be occupied largely by the Union League Club, with stores on the first floor, has been signed by F. L. Spaulding, who will superintend the construction for the syndicate.

J. F. Keller has purchased a lot on Orange street, Santa Ana, on which he intends erecting a modern residence as soon as plans can be secured.

It is reported Fritz Kloke has started the erection of a residence on his ranch north of Calexico, to cost $15,000.

J. A. Fitch is planning to build a substantial residence on the corner of Holt avenue and Palomares street, Pomona.

Quayle Bros of San Diego have completed plans for a two-story and basement residence for H. E. Pratt, to be built at National City. The interior finish will be hardwood.

Lillie E. Bradley has obtained a permit to erect a $2100 residence at No. 829 E street, Santa Ana.

H. E. Fouch is to build three modern cottages, two on Ninth, between D and E streets, and one on Ninth, near Olive, Colton. W. E. Carson has the contract.

C. S. Chestnut has filed with the Board of Supervisors an application for a franchise for a transmission line through the principal streets and highways of the valley east of San Bernardino. It is said this is the first inkling of a gigantic light, power and telephone scheme to cover the entire upper end of San Bernardino county. The franchise is advertised for sale, bids to be received by the board until September 23.

Sealed bids will be received by the Board of Supervisors until 2 p.m., September 21, for the construction of a pile trestle bridge over the San Gabriel River at Alamitos Bay.

Plans are about completed for the proposed bridge which the County Supervisors intend to construct over the Santa Clara River at Bardsdale, Ventura county. The main structure will 500 feet, and the south approach 1600 feet.

It is reported the Southern Pacific will soon start work on the construction of a new steel and concrete bridge over the Ventura River at Ventura.

A petition is being prepared asking the Board of Supervisors to construct a bridge over the Santa Ana River at the point known as "The Narrows," near Riverside. This proposition was agitated a year ago, but sufficient funds were not available.

The Pacific Electric line will build a concrete passenger station at La Habra, and also freight depots. The sites have been purchased.

The Pacific Malleable Castings Company has decided to construct its factory buildings at Riverside by force account. The concrete foundations are completed.

It is planned to increase the size of the public library building at Santa Monica by an addition covering a ground space equal to the present structure. Andrew Carnegie has been approached with a request for another $12,500 donation for a larger building.

It is stated the Ventura Industrial Securities Company is making application for a street railway franchise at Ventura, and intends also to construct a wharf, factory and power house.

It is reported the State engineering department is preparing plans for a proposed training school building for the Normal School at San Diego, to cost $60,000. An appropriation of $30,000 will be asked of the next Legislature for a larger building and equipment.

J. B. Stannard has completed plans and is taking bids for the construction of a ten-suite apartment house to be built for Dr. A. S. Baker at Fourth and Juniper streets, San Diego, Mission style, 100x100 feet with plastered exterior, concrete block foundation, tile roof, baths, concrete floors in kitchens, screen porches and stairways, cobblestone mantels. It will cost $15,000.

J. B. Stannard has completed plans and construction work is about to commence on a two-story and basement apartment house containing sixteen apartments to be built on Grape street, between First and Second streets, San Diego, for Montana parties. It will cost $10,000.

Quayle Bros. are preparing plans for a one-story brick and steel business block to be located at the northeast corner of Fifth and B streets, San Diego. The owners are Griffing, Paul and Phillip Bancroft. The building will have a frontage of 225 feet on Fifth and 95 feet on B street, with plate glass show windows on entire frontage and will cost $10,000.

Petitions are being circulated asking the Council to establish a municipal water system at Long Beach. This may be done either by purchase of the existing plant or by establishing a new one.

An appropriation of $5000 has been made by the United States government for developing water and improving the irrigation canals of the Soboba Indian reservation. W. H. Stanley is superintendent.

The stockholders of the Banning water company have authorized the directors to expend a sum not exceeding $15,000 a year for water development. An increased flow is to be developed immediately.

FOR CHICAGO PROPERTY.

James Stafford has exchanged the property at the southeast corner of East Main and Bloom streets, consisting of a lot 71½x136 feet, improved with two small store buildings, one five-room cottage, and one six-room cottage, and the property at No. 134 North Johnson street, consisting of a one-story six-room cottage, on large lot, with William J. Culen, for the latter's property in Chicago, consisting of a four-story brown-stone front apartment building on Lincoln avenue, and a two-story frame store and apartment building on Racine street, on lot 25x150 feet. CATARRH AND BRONCHIAL TROUBLE—GAINED TWENTY POUNDS.

Chas. H. Duering, who lives at 1212 E. Washington St., Los Angeles, says: "I have been a terrible sufferer from CATARRH and BRONCHIAL trouble for the past four or five years. I had pain in my lungs and was SHORT OF BREATH, especially if I did heavy work. My bronchial tubes were always sore. MY NOSE WAS ALWAYS STOPPED UP. I had to breathe through my mouth my catarrh was so bad. I had lost thirty (30) pounds in weight and was weak and run down. This was my condition when I came to Drs. Shores & Shores two (2) months ago. Their treatment helped me from the start. My lungs don't pain me any more, and I breathe good through my nose. I HAVE GAINED TWENTY POUNDS in weight, and feel strong and able to do A GOOD DAY'S WORK AS A CARPENTER. Thanks to Drs. Shores' wonderful treatment. Any one doubting this testimonial is at liberty to call on me and I will gladly verify this testimonial.

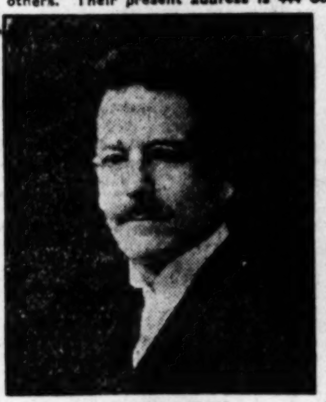
ASTHMA AND CATARRH. GAINED TWENTY-ONE POUNDS IN SIX WEEKS.

H. C. Weaver, who lives at 342½ North Chicago street, Los Angeles, says: "I have been in bad shape for four (4) years from Asthma and Catarrh, and a generally run-down condition. Was able to work only one-half of the time, owing to my weakened condition. I was unable to sleep well. Many nights I would be compelled to sleep sitting up in a chair and would wheeze and cough all night. My nose would also stop up until I could not breathe through it, and I would hawk and spit, etc. This was my condition when I came to Drs. Shores & Shores six (6) weeks ago. Drs. Shores helped me from the first. I AM NOW ABLE TO DO A FULL DAY'S WORK IN THE SHOP AS A BLACKSMITH and feel fine in every way. I have gained 21 POUNDS in weight, and it gives me great pleasure to recommend Drs. Shores to all sufferers, for they have done wonders for me. Any one doubting this testimonial is at liberty to call on me, and I will gladly verify the truthfulness of this testimonial.
(Signed) "H. C. WEAVER."

Read the testimonials of Evangelist H. D Kenney and wife. They are well and favorably known from one end of the Pacific Coast to the other. They have tried Drs. Shores & Shores' treatment for Catarrh and recommend it to others. Their present address is 444 South Grand avenue, this city.

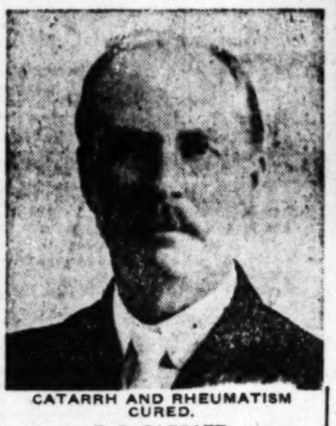


H. D. KENNEDY.

Mr. Kennedy says: "Being a public speaker, my catarrhal troubles naturally affected my throat, having huskiness of the voice and other troublesome symptoms in the way of mucus dropping in the throat, with irritation and dryness. I applied to Drs. Shores & Shores for relief, and after one month's treatment I can truthfully say I am greatly benefited in every way, and I can recommend the treatment to any one in need of the same.
(Signed) "H. D. KENNEDY."

MRS. H. D. KENNEDY.

Mrs. Kennedy says: "I have been greatly distressed with catarrhal troubles for a good many years, it having badly affected one of my tonsils, and I had all the usual symptoms that go with catarrhal trouble. I can truthfully say that after using Drs. Shores & Shores' treatment a little over a month I am greatly benefited. My voice is greatly improved and I feel better in every way.



CATARRH AND RHEUMATISM CURED.

E. D. GARRATT.

Read the testimony of E. D. Garratt, a prominent business man, who lives at 1222 Arnold st., city:

Mr. Garratt says: "I have been a great sufferer from catarrh and rheumatism. My nose would stop up until I could hardly breathe, and there was a continuous dropping in my throat, with roaring in my ears until I was so dizzy that I could hardly stand on my feet. I also had to hawk and spit to clear my throat, and suffered from a general debility that brought on a severe attack of rheumatism which almost laid me up at times. I tried many doctors and all sorts of patent medicines, but got no permanent relief until I consulted Drs. Shores & Shores. Their treatment was wonderful, and I am now happy to state that I am entirely cured, not only of my catarrh, but my dizziness and rheumatism are all gone."

TERRIBLE THROAT TROUBLE AND CATARRH.

E. E. GARLAND, 1741 Newton St., Los Angeles, says: "I have been a very sick man for two (2) years with catarrh and a bad throat trouble from an old case of grippe and quinsy. When I came to Drs. Shores & Shores six (6) weeks ago I could scarcely speak above a whisper, and my throat was so bad it hurt me so I could scarcely eat, it was so painful. I had lost thirty (30) pounds in weight and I was very weak and run down. Drs. Shores' treatment helped me from the first. IN NINE (9) DAYS I could eat a good square meal, the first in a year. I have steadily improved, gained sixteen pounds in weight and feel stronger in every way, my catarrhal troubles are much better, and my throat does not pain me any more, and I can now do a good day's work as a carpenter, thanks to Drs. Shores' skill. Their treatment has worked wonders for me, and I recommend them to all afflicted as I was. Any one doubting this statement is at perfect liberty to call on me and I will cheerfully verify this testimonial.
(Signed) "E. E. GARLAND."

CATARRH OF THE HEAD AND THROAT.

This form of catarrh is most common—resulting from neglected colds — quickly cured with little cost by Drs. Shores' famous treatment.
"Is your nose stopped up?"
"Does your nose discharge?"
"Is your nose sore and tender?"
"Is there pain in front of the head?"
"Do you hawk to clear the throat?"
"Do you sleep with your mouth open?"
You can be easily cured now—don't let it run into complications.

THE BRONCHIAL TUBES.

When catarrh of the head or throat is neglected or wrongfully treated, it extends down the windpipe into the bronchial tubes and after a while attacks the lungs. Quickly cured with little cost by Drs. Shores' famous treatment.
"Have you a cough?"
"Have you a pain in the side?"
"Do you raise frothy materials?"
"Do you spit up little cheesy lumps?"
"Do you feel you are growing weaker?"
Don't risk neglecting these warnings—stop the disease before it reaches the lungs.

CATARRH OF THE EARS.

Catarrh extends from the throat along the eustachian tubes into the ears, causing partial or complete deafness. Quickly cured with little cost by Drs. Shores' famous treatment.
"Is your hearing failing?"
"Do your ears discharge?"
"Is the wax drying in your ears?"
"Do you hear better some days than others?"
"Is your hearing worse when you have a cold?"
Don't neglect this until your hearing is irreparably destroyed.

CATARRH OF THE STOMACH.

Catarrh of the stomach is usually caused by swallowing poisonous mucus, which drops from the head and throat at night. Quickly cured at little cost by Drs. Shores' famous treatment.
"Is there nausea?"
"Do you belch up gas?"
"Are you constipated?"
"Do you bloat up after eating?"
"Is there constant bad taste in the mouth?"
Now is the time to be permanently cured. Drs. Shores are curing hundreds every year.

57 YEARS A SUFFERER FROM CATARRH IN ITS WORST FORM CURED.

F. E. De Merritt, 13½ S. Fifth St., Alhambra, Cal., says: "I have been a terrible sufferer from catarrh of the head and throat. When I first came to Drs. Shores for treatment it had got so bad a piece of bone had come out of my left nostril and the odor was so bad it made me sick when I would stoop over. I had continual running into my throat and at night I could not breathe through my nose it was so stopped up. I have had catarrh ever since I was seventeen (17) years old. I am now in my seventy-fourth (74th) year. I have tried many kinds of catarrh remedies without benefit, and I want to say that after five (5) months' treatment from Drs. Shores & Shores I feel perfectly cured. I feel that the afflicted ought to know about Drs. Shores' wonderful treatment so that they can be cured as I have been. Any one doubting the truthfulness of this testimonial is at liberty to call on me and I will gladly verify the truthfulness of the same.
(Signed) "F. E. DE MERRITT."

JACKSON W. BUCHANAN, CURED OF CATARRH AND BRONCHIAL TROUBLE.

Read what Mr. Jackson W. Buchanan, who lives at 118 So. Avenue 18, this city, says: "I have had catarrh for ten or fifteen years, but last spring following an attack of pneumonia, it extended from the nose and throat into the bronchial tubes. The stuff that I spit up was something fierce, and I was about all in when I applied to Drs. Shores & Shores for treatment. I coughed day and night and lost in weight and flesh until I was almost a skeleton. I am happy to state that the treatment has entirely cured me and I feel like a new man.

Prolong Your Prime of Life

Human beings mature in about 20 years and according to natural laws governing animal life the average age of man should be six times the length of his development. That is 120 years. The middle age, which is now only a short period of a person's life, should compare favorably with some fine oak or elm, which, having attained its maximum, remains the same without any perceptible decline for scores of years. The premature ageing of the body, which shows to a marked degree in many persons upon their reaching the thirtieth or fortieth year, has very recently been found by Prof. Eli Metchnikoff, chief of research of the Pasteur Institute, Paris, to be due to the irritant poisons, or toxins, secreted by harmful microbes in the digestive organs. These poisons force their way into the blood in steadily increasing quantity and strength, and the system finds it more and more difficult to purify itself and resist the onslaughts of this deadly poison, resulting in decline and decay. The remedy prescribed by Prof. Metchnikoff is the prevention of the toxin secretion in the intestines, to transform man's internal flora, from an uncontrolled to a cultivated condition. The most harmful and dangerous microbes are those which cause putrefaction. These swarm in the intestinal organs, and their toxin is destructive to the health. The harm done by these microbes can be nullified by mixing with them certain milk bacilli which are hostile to their propagation for reasons evolved by modern science. These beneficial bacilli have been termed by Prof. Metchnikoff the Bacilli Bulgaris. They are indispensible to those who have reached their maximum development, to arrest the "age disease" and retain their youth and vigor as long as nature intended. They are not the "Philosopher's Stone," or "Elixir of Life," but only a simple prevention against premature decline or decay, and a help to healthy evening of life.

A culture of the Bacilli Bulgaris, together with directions for making the milk food, "Snow Cream" will be sent to any address for $3.00. Snow Cream, so called on account of its similarity to pure mountain snow, is a dainty and pleasant food, and its wonderful ability to curb the activities of the putrefaction germ, is speedily made manifest in the vast improvement in general health. Easily made in every home, pleasant to the taste and inexpensive, the first $3.00 being the principal outlay, nothing ought to prevent the general use of this remarkable food.

Prof. Metchnikoff is himself a living example of his own theory. Approaching the year of 70, he is as vigorous and well preserved as a man of 45, and his rapidly growing following in Europe bears testimony to the beneficial qualities of the Bacilli Bulgaris, the component of the health food, Snow Cream.

The Times Scholarship Contest will end at midnight, Monday, September 14. To be counted, subscriptions and coupons must bear a postmark not later than that hour and date. The last coupon will be printed in The Times next Wednesday morning.

One week from tomorrow evening and the great race of 1908 will end—and the votes of the people who have interested themselves in behalf of the contestants will decide who the winners shall be.

Monday evening has been chosen for the closing instead of next Saturday, for Saturday is a half holiday and a difficult time for transacting important business, so in response to numerous requests, Monday, September 14, has been made the closing date.

Yesterday smashed every record in scores for the present contest. Nearly 100,000 points were registered by the banner band of half a hundred young workers, and the astonishing number of sixty new annual subscriptions were handed over the counter on this red day of the year.

The "Blue-eyed Marguerite," plumped down the champion gain of the entire contest, 24,000 points, every point representing new business, seventeen new annuals, and fourteen new subscriptios for six months each. No wonder this dear little lady sits enthroned at the top today, and it will be a strong pull that will take her away from the first place.

There is much speculation as to who will sit on that top perch at the final innings. Friends of three top-liners, Marguerite Jones, Hazel Franklin and Alice Capron, are eager and enthusiastic for their particular favorites and there are spectacular plans for winning the first place for each of these girls. Just below there are Monrovia and Pomona to reckon with, and with the rumors that are rife neither a prophet nor the son of a prophet could say of the future.

Marguerite wins the first prize for new business brought in between August 24 and September 5, as her entire gain from new subscriptions during that time amounts to 27,820. Marguerite gets the hammock, and it's a beauty from the Tufts-Lyon Arms Company, those well-known purveyors of the highest class of sporting goods on the Pacific Coast.

Hazel Franklin comes second in the special prize contest for the new business and she is the winner of the basketball to be supplied by the same reliable house. Hazel is a redoubtable basketball player. She will be delighted with her new possession, and one can imagine this splendid forward dropping that ball through the netting on many an exciting occasion.

The score for the new business stands as follows: Marguerite Jones, 27,820; Hazel Franklin, 17,240; Ellen Robinson, 14,088; Thomas McKinley, 12,795; Leo Domke, 12,642; Mary Pearl Pottol, 11,580, and Ralph Warren, 10,880.

Splendid scores were the order of the hour yesterday, and excitement mounted up higher and higher as the day wore on. That hustler from Pomona, Thomas McKinley, called at headquarters for the first time yesterday just to get acquainted and to hand in 9500 points, including four new annuals and seven annual renewals.

Leo Domke, the promising young pianist who is working to cultivate his unusual ability as a musician, came next to the top liner of today in the size of his day's phenomenal gain. Leo reported 13,910, with eighteen new months and seven new annuals.

Ellen Robinson, Gladys Hill and Laura Easton had gains of nearly 5000 points each, while Mrs. Fiery, that good friend of Margaret Chung's, in Pomona, sent in over 5000 to help this worthy Chinese contestant whose aims are so precious in the eyes of the missionary workers.

Ida May Benjamin, the little Methodist girl of Covina, sent in nearly 4000 points, including two annual subscriptions, and there were a number of other delightful gains.

FOR CONTESTANTS.

In order that the contestants may gain an intelligent idea of the various educational institutions in which scholarships are offered, The Times will print from day to day, some account of the special features and advantages to be found in the different schools. Today the University of Southern California College of Law is presented for consideration, and mention is made of the latest expansion move of the Woodbury Business College where a number of former contests have received business training.

COLLEGE OF LAW.

To meet urgent needs the College of Law has secured new and commodious quarters on the fifth floor of the Mutual Life Insurance building, corner Third and Hill streets. These quarters comprise three large lecture rooms having a seating capacity of 350 men, general and private offices of dean and secretary, a series of four library and study rooms, a rest room for women students and a large lounging room for men.

It will be a matter of interest to the friends of the Law College to know that during the past four years it has made more rapid growth than perhaps any other professional school in the West, being now the largest law school west of Chicago. The college has attained such a standing in this State that the Legislature recently passed a law admitting all graduates of the U.S.C. College of Law to practice without the usual examination for admission to the bar.

Many exceptional advantages have contributed to this result, not the least of these being the personnel of the faculty. Each subject is taught by an attorney of standing and experience, who is actively engaged in practice at the bar and who is a specialist in his particular branch. The faculty, consisting in all of thirty-seven instructors, are judges of the Appellate and Superior courts, as well as other lawyers of prominence in the profession. The method of instruction followed is a combination of lecture, text-book and case systems, with practical experience in briefing and pleading.

Lecture hours are so arranged that students are enabled to gain considerable experience in law offices while carrying on their studies and by reason of favorable location there are also opportunities to study the procedure of all the courts. Besides the use of the college library, students have access to the Los Angeles county law library on the same terms as the members of the bar.

One of the unique features of the course is the moot, or practice court, and other features of undergraduate work are debating clubs, oratorical associations and instruction, fraternities and athletics. During 1907-08 separate Law School baseball and basketball teams were organized and made excellent records. A tennis association was also formed. These organizations, as well as a football team, will hereafter be a regular part of the college life.

Owing to a great demand from those who found it impossible to attend classes in the daytime, there has this year been inaugurated an evening course or "Night Law School," as a separate department. The course is so arranged that the entire field can be covered in four years, leading to the same degree as the day three-year course LL.B.

There has also been added this year a post-graduate course to be taught by me nof wide reputation in the legal profession. This course leads to the degree of Master of Laws and is open to those having previously received a degree of LL.B. from any law school which is a member of the American Association of Law Schools.

The present success of our College of Law is largely attributable to the energetic and intelligent efforts of Gavin W. Craig, the secretary of the college, who has during the past four years been intrusted with its active management. Mr. Craig has recently been appointed by the Superior Court to the office of Court Commissioner.

WOODBURY BUSINESS COLLEGE.

The Woodbury Business College, through its officers, faculty and students, has issued over 5000 invitations to an informal reception to be held next Thursday evening at 8 o'clock in its splendid new home in the mammoth Hamburger building, Eighth-Hill-Broadway. Orchestra music, vocal and instrumental selections, humorous reading and addresses by prominent citizens of Los Angeles will occupy the early part of the evening, and the latter part will be devoted to dancing, in which Woodbury students, past and present, and their friends will be the participants.

The college is certainly to be congratulated on its present quarters, which are perhaps the finest of their kind in the United States. This is the fifth expansion that the Woodbury has made during its twenty-five years in this city. The moving was done so expeditiously that not one minute of time was lost from the regular school work. The classes continued in their recitations in the old building until 3 'clock Friday afternoon and the following Monday at 9 o'clock all were regularly at work in the new location. The new quarters are admirably adapted to the purpose. The administration offices and the various shorthand rooms occupy the Eighth-street side of the building, and the immense commercial department is located on the Hill-street side. Glass partitions separate the various rooms in the shorthand department and the sight of hundreds of students at work is an inspiring one.

THE PRIZES.

Besides the valuable scholarships for which the young people are working, The Times offers fifteen cash prizes for those making the highest scores next to the top liner, who will receive the prize piano. The cash prizes, totaling $1200, are arranged as follows:

No. 1	$200
No. 2	140
No. 3	125
No. 4	110
No. 5	100
No. 6	90
No. 7	85

No. 14	25
No. 15	25

THE PIANO.

The first prize to be awarded to the winner of the contest in addition to a choice of scholarships is a splendid Fairbanks piano from the Southern California Music Company, valued at $400. It is a beautiful instrument of superior construction, handled by an old and reliable company as a special feature, and is doubly guaranteed. It is known among musicians for its exquisite tonal qualities and responsive action. The case may be of rich mahogany or dark oak.

LAX PARENTS TO BE PROSECUTED.

COMPULSORY EDUCATION LAW WILL BE ENFORCED.

Kern School Superintendents Will Swear Out Warrants Unless More Attention Is Paid to the Statute. Standard Oil Company Buys Knob Hill Property.

BAKERSFIELD, Sept. 5.—School Superintendents D. W. Nelson and Leo G. Pauly of Kern announced today that they will make an effort to strictly enforce the compulsory education law this term. Many parents have neglected to send their children to school, and both principals will swear out warrants unless more attention is paid to the law.

Everything is in readiness for the opening of school Monday. Teachers' meetings were held in both Bakersfield and Kern yesterday and organization of the faculties perfected. A large percentage of the applicants for entrance to the High School passed the examinations.

G. Escallon, an elderly Frenchman, who arrived from Los Angeles a few days ago, was found dead in his bed in the Universal Hotel in Kern this morning. He was about 60 years of age.

PIONEER TO RETIRE.

Capt. F. F. Weed, a pioneer operator in the Maricopa field, is to retire. He has disposed of the product of the four wells of the Maricopa Road Oil Company to the Associated, and has leased the remaining ten acres of his property in the southwest quarter of section 1 in Maricopa to the Gate City Oil Company, a Stockton organization. The Gate City is to drill four wells, from which Weed and his associates expect to derive a substantial revenue.

NEW OIL TERRITORY.

The Jackson Company, on section 11, 21, 30, in McKittrick, is perforating well No. 2. The result of the first pumping will greatly interest operators on adjacent property.

Jack Brinkman, the perforator, returned today from Tehama county, where he went to expert supposed oil territory. It is understood he made a favorable report, but he refuses to make known the location.

STANDARD'S NEW BUY.

The rumor that the Standard has bought the valuable Knob Hill Company in the Midway is verified, despite denials, by the building of a waterline on the property by the big corporation. In the Midway water troubles the Standard frequently expressed a desire to aid the operators, but asserted that the common carrier law prohibited it supplying the water. How this can be done in the case of the Knob Hill and not the others is not understood, unless the Knob Hill is now Standard property, and this is accepted to be the case.

The Santa Fé, which has been supplying the water for the work of the Interstate Land Company of Los Angeles on the east half of section 14 in the Midway, over which a controversy is pending with E. E. Jones et al, has suddenly discontinued the service, and now W. P. Cunningham and his associates have had to shut down. In the meantime, Jones and his partners, who are allies of the Standard, have resumed operations, and will make an attempt to overcome the lead of Cunningham, who is down several hundred feet with his well.

TEHACHAPI DIVORCE.

Edward Cummings, a prominent Tehachapi rancher, was today granted an interlocutory degree of divorce, on the ground of desertion. He obtained the custody of two minor children, aged 5 and 4 years.

George A. Corti, a prosperous west-side rancher, and Miss Flora Davis, of a prominent Kern county family, were married at the Panama Congregational Church last night. They will reside near Panama.

THOUSANDS DIE.

WIND KILLS DUCKS.

VISALIA, Sept. 5.—A report has been received here that 20,000 ducks, nearly all teal, are lying dead about 100 yards from the water of Tulare Lake, having evidently been driven in during a recent wind storm. As all are fat and in fine condition, much good hunting is anticipated this year.

Articles of Incorporation of the First Baptist Church of Visalia were filed today. The incorporators are E. M. Bliss, Della Gilroy, M. S. Featherstone, Lydia B. Sowell and James Monroe Dye. The trustees are Lydia B. Sowell, James Munroe Dye and William Canan.

Corcoran, in Kings county, is to have a newspaper. An enterprising newspaperman from Los Angeles will establish the journal.

DROWNED IN FIT.

Lucy Carolina Hart, wife of H. W. Hart, a prominent rancher of the Alta district near Reedley, was drowned in Kings River, Wednesday. She fell in while in an epileptic fit. The deceased was 54 years of age and came from Nebraska two years ago.

The session of the San Joaquin Valley G.A.R. Association, which convened at Leemore Wednesday, ended tonight.

The Mexican War Veterans and the California Territorial Pioneers will hold their annual reunion September 9. An address by Rev. I. H. Teel and a musical programme will be given at the Christian Church in the morning, while routine business will take up the afternoon. In the evening the members will attend a theater. Mrs. N. E. Burland, Rev. I. H. Teel and S. Mitchell are the committee in charge.

Father Foin, of St. Mary's Catholic Church, who has been ill for four weeks, has recovered and announces services for Sunday.

nionite Methods Cause of Much Indignation.

A boatmen's union is the latest organization at Avalon, which proposes to dominate sportsmen, to blacklist any who employ boatmen outside the union, and to say where anglers shall be permitted to fish.

All summer there has been a good deal of feeling among the boatmen in regard to Clemente fishing. The men who had launches which were able to undertake the Clemente trip, had nothing to say, but those whose fishing outfits were not built for deep-sea fishing, and could not with safety undertake the rough passage between Catalina and Clemente, have been dissatisfied, and have made many threats. Some time ago a petition was drawn up by the boatmen to present to the Light Tackle Club, in which they strongly deprecated the Clemente fishing and went so far as to say that unless the club disqualified anglers who brought fish from Clemente they would try to prevent their patrons from going there.

The petition has never been formally presented to the club, but the union boycotts certain dealers at Avalon, it is charged, and have declared war against the Tuna and Light Tackle clubs, and declare that all boatmen who go to Clemente with their patrons are "scabs." They blacklist any business man at Avalon who owns a launch and takes friends out fishing, which they claim deprives them of patronage. Up to date the clubs have ignored the whole matter, on the principle that the union would hang itself, but a well-known St. Louis business man, who has been in the habit of coming to Catalina to fish every year, has called the bluff, and announces that he is going to fight the thing to a finish if it takes ten years.

"Next season," he says, "I, with five of my friends, will have a union of our own. We are having twenty-five light anglers' boats made, each with a small two or three horse-power engine, just big enough to troll. These boats will be rented for a small sum per day, and the whole bunch will be towed to the fishing grounds by a big launch. This will enable a man to fish for a reasonable sum, in place of the [illegible] per day now charged by the boatmen's union.

RULE OR RUIN.

"We will have three or four large launches, and one will make daily trips to San Clemente, and boats will also go to Anacapa Island, or anywhere else that anglers want to go. Why, what do you think these boatmen had the impertinence to do? When I returned from Clemente, the other day, they called my boatman a 'scab,' and have combined to ruin him. This is true of some of the best boatmen here, who have been taking their patrons to Clemente this season—Al Shade, [illegible] Joe, Clover, the owners of the Garfield, Zeus, San Toy, and all boatmen who have had the independence to do anything that the union does not like.

"They tried, I understand, to get the Banning Company to 'refuse to let people go to San Clemente,' as though the owners of Catalina owned the ocean or could control the movements of the people who choose to come here. Did you ever hear of such unmitigated gall? I never did, and I am done with these fellows from now on. They seem to think they are the whole thing. The Tuna Club and Light Tackle Club, against whom they have declared war, have done more to put bread into the mouths of these men than anything else. The Tuna Club has in ten years, I am told, spent [illegible] directly in the interests of the boatmen, and the Light Tackle Club expended $1000 last year in advertising the fishing in the interests of the boatmen, and now the club is a [illegible]

"The boatmen seem to think that the clubs are run by the Banning Company when, as a matter of fact, they have not the slightest connection with the Bannings. The Tuna Club is a private gentlemen's club, the same as any other. Its members are elected and any angler is eligible, yet the boatmen call it a 'scab' club because any of its members, 400 in number, dare to go to Clemente to fish. If these two clubs with their 700 members would form a union themselves and all advise their friends who come over here to employ the blacklisted boatmen there would be things doing.

"San Clemente is a government island, and next year you will see more people going over there than ever before. The clubs will maintain a permanent camp there and establish and maintain honest rates. Parties will be made up for Anacapa and elsewhere—in other words, the man who comes to Avalon to fish will go where he wants to go and new boatmen of the [illegible] type will be employed.

UNION A BOOMERANG.

"Just the other day," continued the [illegible] St. Louisan, "I heard a boatman tell his patrons not to fish with light tackle as they were being [illegible] by paying $2.50 for a brass button worth 20 cents. The facts are the button is a gift of the club and does not cost anything, and when an angler gets a gold button fish, the club exchanges the 'brass' or bronze button for a gold one worth $3 or $4. The [illegible] paid is the life dues in the club.

"The boatman's union is the worst thing ever started, the most impudent demand ever heard of, and will only injure the men themselves, as the tip will be passed not to employ them. I know of ten men who came over to go fishing and were so disgusted with the demands of these boatmen that they left. I understand [illegible] has discovered tuna at Anacapa and has just returned from his trip there with a splendid specimen. That marks him with the brand of a 'scab' and makes George Farnsworth, his boatman, a 'scab.'

"Just wait till next season and I [illegible] so that anglers can have a good [illegible], clean-mouthed boatman, at [illegible] of less than half the charge [illegible] and our boatmen will make more than these men do now, for we will pay them a stated salary [illegible] whether they take people [illegible]. They will be ready to take [illegible] to fish when or where the [illegible] who hire them wish to go. The blacklisted boatmen who form [illegible] will be made to feel [illegible] control the situation. [illegible] going to get the fall of [illegible] tired of unions and [illegible] against every man [illegible] enough to save up a [illegible] fought unions in St. Louis and I don't mind taking a hand [illegible] Island."

IN EAGLE ROCK VALLEY.

Handsome Country Place Transferred for Fifteen Thousand Dollars.

Improved Car Service.

Because of the improved car service in Eagle Rock Valley, there have been many realty sales there recently. The most important one, reported by the Edwards & Wildey Company, is that of the handsome estate known as "Rosemary," to Alexander Keating from W. K. Cowan, for $15,000.

The property consists of a modern two-story residence of eight rooms, a two-story garage, electric lighting plant, etc. The grounds, of three acres, are artistically laid out and covered with large old trees.

Other sales by the Edwards & Wildey Company are as follows: To Sarah H. Reed, lot 60x160 feet on the south side of Mariposa street, for $600; to Don E. Johnson, lot 75x160 feet, on the south side of Ridgeway avenue, for $700; to W. K. Cowan, lot 68x160 feet on the south side of Ridgeway avenue, for $650; to R. M. Morrison, lot 63x130 feet, on the south side of Lawrence avenue, for $500; to Ellis L. Griest, lot 55x125 feet, on the east side of Eddy avenue, for $325; to Lyda A. Little, lot 55x125 feet, on the west side of Rowland avenue, near Las Flores, for $375; to Cynthia Buck, lot 55x125 feet, on the west side of Rowland avenue, for $375; to George W. Cotteral, lot 50x130 feet, on the east side of Virginia avenue near Colorado street, for $550. Most of the purchasers intend to build homes.

REAL ESTATE NOTES.

Emil Firth has completed the street improvements in Oxford Square, consisting of four miles of concrete walks, curbs and gutters. Large palms have been planted in the parkways and ornamental electroliers erected on street corners. The streets are seventy feet wide and the improvements are of the best construction. The lots are 171 feet deep. Only high-class residences will be allowed in the tract, which is situated on the high plateau between Wilshire boulevard and Pico street.

The E. J. McCully Company recently moved into ground floor offices in the Pacific Mutual Life Insurance building, northwest corner of Third and Hill streets. These offices have been tastefully fitted for their especial use. Among other features they contain a large fireproof vault, which they have placed at the disposal of their clients.

The McCarthy Company has opened a branch office at the corner of Manchester and Moneta avenues for its Moneta, Manchester Avenue and Main Street Tract. Harry Samm will be in charge.

Splendid Progress on the "Nicodemus"

BIRDSEYE VIEW OF "CAMP NICODEMUS."

The Nicodemus Oil Company, One of the Newest Producers, is Located Two and One-Half Miles South of McKittrick, Cal.

Two producing Wells Now in Operation and the Third About to be Brought in.

The Company Owns its Own Pipe Line from Its Wells to the Railroad.

Activity In the Oil Fields of McKittrick, California.

The "Nicodemus" is One of the Newest Producers. Two Wells Now Operating and the Third Will Probably be Added to the Lease Within Ten Days or Two Weeks. The Company Owns a Private Water Line Supplying Three Great Reservoir Tanks, One 15,000 Gallons and Two, each 5000 Gallons. Preliminary Arrangements Now Being Made for Drilling Well No. 4.

It seems incredible almost, that in so short a time, the old deserted Belgium oil wells of McKittrick occasioned, not alone by the low price of oil that obtained a few years ago, but because of a long legal battle on the old Belgium properties, but finally after the entanglements have been straightened out and adjusted, should become, to all appearances, an old settled, prosperous community where activity is everywhere apparent.

In addition to the 160 acres of deeded land owned by The Nicodemus Oil Company, it has secured two 20-year leases and controls an additional 20 acres or 60 acres of land in the very heart of the oil producing belt of this favored part of California.

The Standard Oil Company pipe line passes within 300 feet of the corner of the company's land, but fortunately the "Nicodemus" is not dependent upon the Standard Oil Company as purchasers of its product. They have their own private pipe line 2½ miles to the railroad loading station at McKittrick, and at the present time are selling their production to the Associated Oil Company, delivering their oil by gravity.

Mr. J. M. Kellerman is president of The Nicodemus Oil Company, and there is no one who is acquainted with the oil industry in Southern California during the last twenty-five years that doesn't know of Mr. Kellerman. He is one of our first citizens, one of the heavy property owners of Los Angeles and has made his money out of the oil business. He is practical. Can run a tower, dress tools or do anything in connection with the drilling of a well and at the same time enjoys a most enviable reputation not alone for his ability but for his integrity and fair dealing in all matters.

"There is no possible reason," said Mr. Kellerman the other day, in an interview, "why The Nicodemus Oil Company should not take rank with some of the best producers in California. I made a careful examination of the territory before purchasing my present holdings of stock and accepting the presidency of The Nicodemus Oil Company."

Mr. Willis George Emerson of the Emerson Realty Company, well known in Los Angeles as one of our most careful and successful men of affairs, is one of the vice-presidents, and Mr. W. L. Tubbs, a wealthy Santa Anaian, is also a vice-president. Mr. J. E. Wickham, late of Iowa, but now a resident of Los Angeles, is the treasurer of the company. Mr. W. E. Donaghoe is secretary and Mr. W. O. Emerson is assistant secretary of the company.

"We have every reason," said Vice-President Emerson, in an interview the other day, "to believe that within two or three years at the farthest, that the shares of The Nicodemus Oil Company stock will be traded in on the local exchange at several dollars per share. Anyway, from $5 to $7 per share and we hope at a much greater figure. We have abundance of reasons for this belief," continued Mr. Emerson. "For instance, we have sufficient territory in the well known and proven oil belt for at least 100 wells. Supposing, for the sake of argument, that we only put down fifty wells within the next three or four years, and that the production of each of these will give us an average of 150 barrels per day. It is well known that the wells in the McKittrick district average from 100 to 450 barrels per day, therefore estimating 150 barrels per day is not unreasonable. Fifty wells at 150 barrels daily production would give us 7500 barrels every twenty-four hours. While it is true that we have reason to believe that the field price of oil under contract will be 75c per barrel within the very near future, and while oil is now selling at 62½c per barrel, field price, let us estimate the price of oil at 60c per barrel; thus, 7500 barrels at 60c per barrel will give us $4500 per day. As our wells pump night as well as day, and also on Sundays, it perhaps would not be unreasonable to figure 360 days for each year, or a gross income of $1,620,000 per annum.

"With such an income as this, a dividend of $1.50 a share per year could easily be paid. Or a profit of 15 per cent. on a valuation of the stock at the price of $15.00 per share, the par value of our stock being $1.00 per share, besides creating a handsome surplus fund.

"There is not an officer in the company," continued Mr. Emerson, "receiving a penny of salary. We are all waiting and working earnestly, economically and carefully, and are willing to bide our time until we receive a compensation in the way of dividends on stock. In this way the smallest stockholder is treated with the same fairness and the same consideration as the largest stockholders. Fish is not made of one and fowl of the other, but all are treated on an absolute equality.

"In regard to the price of the stock, we have sold a very limited amount of the treasury stock at 35c a share; however, the company, when it began business, was a close corporation and started with something like $12,000 in its treasury and no debts. Recently the price has been advanced to 50c a share and there is not a share of stock that can be bought at a penny less than the price of 50c a share.

"The future of the oil business in Southern California," continued Mr. Emerson, in reply to an inquiry from a reporter, "is assured. That the production is in reality growing less all over the country, if not in Southern California, while the commercial uses and demands for oil is continually increasing, beyond question proves that the oil business will grow more profitable year by year because the price will advance rather than recede. This is the consensus of opinion of the very closest observers with whom I have conversed in financial circles.

"It must not be forgotten," continued Mr. Emerson, "that oil is produced continually from the ground twenty-four hours in the day, thirty days in the month and twelve months in the year, while The Nicodemus Oil Company's property is centrally located in what is considered 200-barrel territory—that is, the average well will produce an average of 200 barrels per day of twenty-four hours.

"Southern California," concluded Mr. Emerson, "furnishes one-fourth of almost all the oil produced in the United States, and there are a number of companies with headquarters right here in Los Angeles that are paying as high as 180 per cent. annual dividends on their shares of stock (par value $1.00 per share, the same as the 'Nicodemus,') that are now selling as high as $21 per share. Thus it will be seen our prophecy in regard to the 'Nicodemus' company is not without a precedent.

"Mr. A. P. Maginnins of the A., T. & S. F. Ry. Co., is one of our directors and stockholders; also Mr. J. R. Lane, of the J. R. Lane Dry Goods Company, of this city. At Santa Ana, in addition to Mr. W. L. Tubbs, one of our vice-presidents. Mr. J. W. Bishop, a prominent merchant of that thriving city, is one of the directors of The Nicodemus Oil Company."

EIGHT MONTHS' BUILDING BRISK.

Six Million Six Hundred Thousand Is Total.

August Has Third Largest Record of Year.

Gains Shown by All Outside Cities.

Building operations in Los Angeles amount to $6,613,416 for 4802 permits for the eight months, January to August, both inclusive.

The valuation of new buildings in August reached a total of $954,271, this amount being the third largest total for buildings this year. Last month was surpassed by the record of March of $1,005,463, and by that of July, which had a total of $1,352,290.

Likewise the number of permits issued last month, 676 in all, is the second largest number this year, the record of 755 for March exceeding the number for August. June is third in the total of permits with 626.

This record of nearly a million dollars with close to 700 permits issued, tells of anything but inactivity. The building business of the city shows a steady, and continued movement, which all tells of unrestricted growth in this, the Queen City of the Coast.

In the eight months just closed the frame, one, one-story and a half, and two story structures number 2639 and have a valuation of $3,938,370. Most of these buildings are homes and this is the most encouraging sign of the building activity. When there are close to 3000 new homes built in a city within eight months the population must be growing by leaps and bounds. Of course some of these structures are frame flat and apartment buildings, but these will house more people than the same number of frame residences. The valuation of the one-story frames alone is $2,190,294 for 2137 permits. The buildings of the intermediate height number 213 and are valued at $527,426, while the two-story houses will cost $1,220,650, there being 289 of them.

THE MONTHLY RECORDS.

The building activity in Los Angeles by the month, for the first eight months of the year is as follows:

Month.	Permits.	Value.
January	467	$ 469,104
February	550	579,163
March	755	1,005,463
April	599	664,950
May	558	830,320
June	626	757,856
July	571	1,352,290
August	676	954,271
Totals	4802	$6,613,416

AMONG OUTSIDE TOWNS.

The building permit record for all Southern California cities, with the exception of Los Angeles, was larger for August than for the same month last year, says the Southwest Contractor and Manufacturer. The totals for the principal outside cities are as follows:

Pasadena: August, 1908, $187,947.50; August, 1907, $171,000; architects report more new work in their offices than for a year and a half past.

San Bernardino: August, 1908, $37,845; August, 1907, $20,870; total for year up to September 1, 1908, $396,070, as against $143,658 for the same period last year.

Riverside: August, 1908, $130,368; August, 1907, $26,415; total for year up to September 1, 1908, $362,156 as against $184,860 for the same period last year.

San Diego: August, 1908, $183,813, which brought the total for the first eight months to $1,466,308. This is an excess of $67,808 for the same period last year.

Long Beach issued a total of $53,215 during the month of August this year.

Colton issued permits aggregating $94,080 during August, 1908, bringing the total for the year until September 1 up to $219,000.

Escondido is estimated to have constructed buildings valued at $86,000 during the first eight months of this year.

FOR SPEED IN BUILDING.

Fabricating Plant for Concrete Reinforcement in Process of Construction.

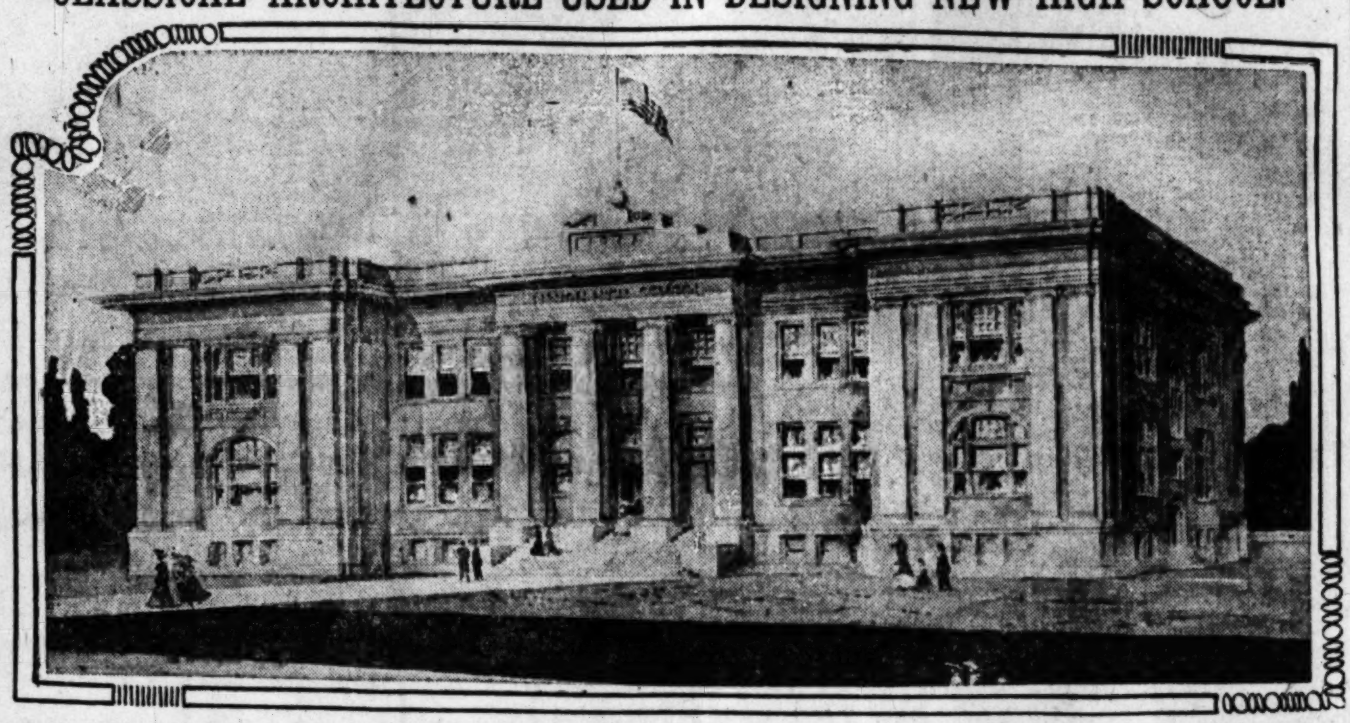
In order to facilitate the use of reinforced concrete in the construction of buildings of all sizes, a reinforced fabricating plant is being built at the corner of Atlantic and Lawrence streets, on the site formerly occupied by the Barber Asphalt Company's plant.

This plant will consist of warehouses for storing the various kinds of corrugated steel bars, and machine shops for fabricating the reinforcement ready for setting into the forms, in such a manner that there is no danger of dislocating any of the bars. It is said all this will be done at considerable less cost than the contractors can do it themselves.

REALTY MAN BUYS.

H. G. Cotton & Co. have sold for Lorenzo Leland to W. B. Merwin a lot on Pasadena avenue, Pasadena, 100x240 feet, for $8000. Mr. Merwin, who was recently married, intends improving this at once with a handsome residence.

CLASSICAL ARCHITECTURE USED IN DESIGNING NEW HIGH SCHOOL.



Work has been begun on the Glendale Union High School, the main contract of $45,807 having been awarded to G. S. Bliss. The total cost will be about $52,000.

The building will be a beautiful two-story classic structure, located on Fifth street, one block from Brand boulevard in Glendale, and occupies a block of land 320 feet on Fifth street and extending from north to south a distance of 590 feet. The building over all is 90x131 feet. There is a basement under the entire structure.

Entrance will be by a wide flight of stairs into a vestibule twenty-five feet wide, and then directly into the main corridor extending the length of the building. In this corridor will be the lockers of the students, arranged along the walls, thus doing away with the old-time cloakrooms, and incidentally preventing the loss of numerous articles.

The main floor will contain a suite for the principal, and another for the teachers. Three large recitation rooms will open off the corridor, averaging in size 27x29 feet each. A library 17x28 feet, an da study room with accommodations for 100 pupils are also on this floor. The main auditorium, with a seating capacity of 450, and a stage with dressing-rooms at one end, occupies the greater part of one side of the structure on this floor also.

The basement will be utilized as a gymnasium and athletic department. The domestic science room, and the sloyd department will be there also, as well as girls' and boys lunchrooms, with a buffet kitchen connecting, the usual toilets and bicycle rooms, and the heating and ventilating plant.

The second floor will be occupied by the scientific departments. There will be chemical, physical and biological laboratories, and a lecture room seating 150 pupils. The recitation rooms and two private laboratories for physics and chemistry are located on this floor in connection with the department. The commercial department, with rooms for typewriting, and the commercial courses, and the art department, with classrooms for the mechanical drawing and freehand classes, and a dark room for photographic work are provided for in the plan.

The exterior finish is to be of buff pressed brick, with staff composition ornamentations. The building will be heated by steam and ventilated by a fan system. The recitation periods will be regulated by a programme clock.

Norman F. Marsh is the architect. He is also the architect of the South Pasadena High School building, regarded by educators as one of the best arranged in the country.

THE WHISTLE!

BY OWNERS AND DEALERS.

MUCH ACTIVITY EXPECTED IN COMING MONTHS.

Sales Reports Show Trend of Business, and Arguments Are Advanced That This Is Indication of Hustling Times to Come—Residence Property Greatly in Demand.

According to the numerous reports of sales, the local real estate market is showing a decided improvement. Realty men are really looking more hopeful, and predictions that considerable activity will be felt within the next four or five months are heard on every side. The activity so far is apparent only in the residence properties, but this is as it should be. As is usual, real estate prosperity starts out in the small lines of properties, and gradually works into the main sections of a city. While there will not probably be a repetition of the boom in business property, a good deal of buying and selling is expected. This will be tempered with conservatism, and most of the purchases will be made with the full intention of at once improving with substantial business and apartment-house structures. Following sales reports tell of anything but a "dull market:"

Claremont Grove Sold.

The Hambright Company reports the sale to C. C. Foster of a ten-acre orange grove two miles west of Claremont for $14,500. The grove is known as the R. J. Noble property.

In Wilshire Boulevard Section.

W. L. Craig of the Pittsburgh Real Estate Company reports the following sales: James H. Woods to George S. Marygold, a lot 50x150 feet on the east side of New Hampshire street, fifty feet north of San Marino street, improved with a new eight-room bungalow. This is one of the highest lots in Wilshire Boulevard Heights, and overlooks the entire section. Mr. Marygold is secretary of the Southern California Music Company, and bought the property for a home. The consideration was $5750. William F. Bigelow sold to Robert Wilson a lot 50x140 feet on the south side of West Thirty-fifth street, between Western avenue and Harvard Walk, improved with a modern six-room bungalow. Mr. Wilson bought the property for a home for a consideration of $3650.

Corner on San Pedro Sold.

The Hambright Company reports the sale of the southwest corner of San Pedro and Twenty-seventh streets, 52x125 feet, to A. Jamieson for a consideration of $12,500. This is a business corner, and was purchased by Mr. Jamieson to improve.

On East Fifty-seventh.

The Cornell Company has sold for Henrietta C. Howard to Stephen E. Hudson the property at No. 1154 East Fifty-second street, for $2300. The lot is 40x135 feet to a fifteen-foot alley and is improved with a five-room cottage.

Sales in Glendale Tract.

L. L. Bowen and W. C. Norman are placing on the market a subdivision of ninety-three large lots at Glendale. The property is bounded by First street, Central and Remington avenues, and is 700 feet west of the car line, on Brand boulevard. Five lots have been sold, as follows: Robert N. Ross, a Central-avenue corner, 52½x160 feet, to alley, for $1000; J. W. Carthcart, inside lot on Central avenue, 52½x160 feet, for $800; G. N. Warwick, south front lot on Milford street, 55x157½ feet, for $500; Edith B. Sheldon, north front lot on same street, 50x157½ feet, for $525. Mr. Warwick will begin building a five-room bungalow as soon as street work is finished.

In Barrow's Tract

W. C. Norman, the owner, with W. M. Garland & Co., reports sales in Block C, Barrow's tract, which is bounded by Barrow, Stoll, New Hampshire and Austin streets, about 400 feet west of Vermont avenue, and on the West Seventh car line, Heliotrope Drive branch, as follows: To Mrs. H. B. Belt, lot 50x198 feet, $900; to R. W. Wheeler, lot 50x198 feet, $1100; to P. W. Wallace, two lots 50x198 feet, $2100; to L. V. Schenck, lot 50x198 feet, $1100; to S. H. BUILDING TOTAL FOR AUGUST IS RECORD-BREAKER.

September Starts Well With Sixteen Permits to One Firm—Many Homes Being Built—Two Schools and Several Business Structures Also Started.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SAN DIEGO, Sept. 5.—August building permits were a record-breaker for the year 1908, the total value aggregating $183,813, or larger than those of July by $108,128. The permits largely represent residences being erected for newcomers. More building is now going on in the residence sections of the city than ever before.

Permits issued in August numbered 119, compared with 99 in July. September bids fair to continue the August record, as on the first day sixteen permits were granted to the Pacific Building Company for buildings aggregating $30,000 in value. The class of houses being erected vary in prices from $1500 to $5000.

Since the first of the month permits have been taken out and work begun on two new schoolhouses. J. F. Atkinson of Los Angeles took out a $25,000 permit to construct the Brooklyn Heights school, and John Campbell of this city took out a $30,000 permit for the Logan Heights school.

Plans have been completed for a $10,000 one-story brick-and-steel building, to be erected on B and Fifth streets, at a cost of $10,000. There will be eleven storerooms in the building. Work will begin immediately.

Plans have been completed and work started on a $6000 residence Pratt at National City. will be located on a comm tion o fa hill a half-mile town.

COLORADO RIVER LANDS

Blythe Ranch Lands at $35.00

Will Equal in value $200 Property Purchased Elsewhere When Both are Improved

In the final analysis the man who can sell his services at the highest figure is the man who will win in the race for independence. You can put yourself in a position to do this by buying Blythe Ranch lands now, and crediting your labor account the difference between the lower and higher price per acre, multiplied by the number of acres you take up. And you will not have to work any harder, either.

PALO VERDE VALLEY SOIL

is famous for its fertility, which is constantly renewed by a rich deposit of vegetable silt from the Colorado River. An inexhaustible quantity of water is at all times obtainable for irrigation from the same source, and the water rights follow the land without additional cost.

THE BEST CLIMATE FOR AGRICULTURE

in Southern California exists at Blythe. As a consequence the widest variety of soil production is possible and the early maturity of crops there insures the highest market values. Transportation is provided in all directions through the lines of the Santa Fe at Parker and the Southern Pacific at Glamis, also by Steamboat between Needles on the north and Yuma on the south.

BLYTHE CITY LOTS

offer unusual opportunities for profitable investment if secured now. Extensive improvements are to be made there this Fall. We are at present selling lots there for from $100 up, which will soon be worth many times the amount. A bank building, brick yard, Baptist Church, seed and implement store, livery barn, meat market, and real estate office will be constructed at Blythe this Fall. All Blythe Ranch titles are perfect, and the Company, in addition to its 40,000 acres of unsurpassed land, holds riparian rights to 17 miles along the banks of the Colorado River.

Read the editorial on Colorado lands in "The Times" of September 3, then call or write us for descriptive literature; or better yet, join one of our Monday or Friday excursions and investigate on the ground.

CUTS SECOND FROM RECORD.

Auto Makes Marvelous Speed on Circular Track.

New World's Mark for Mile by Ralph de Palma.

Christie Attempts in Vain to Regain Laurels.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MINNEAPOLIS (Minn.) Sept. 5.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Driving his Fiat Cyclone at a dare-devil pace, Ralph de Palma broke the world's record for a mile on a circular track at the Minnesota State Fair today, negotiating the distance in 51 seconds, one second faster than the former record of Walter Christie, made on the same track last year.

In a match race for the record, Christie went to the track first, turning the oval in 52½ seconds. De Palma followed and set the new mark. Chagrined at the success of his rival, Christie requested the privilege of one more trial, but could do no better than 52 1-4.

The two men met again during the afternoon in a three-heat race, but De Palma walked away from Christie, hugging the rail for big advantages, while Christie, more cautiously took wide sweeps at the turns. Although he gained perceptibly on the stretches, he could not overhaul his reckless competitor.

The remaining races of the afternoon were for stock cars and were run in very slow time.

The best performance of the afternoon in the minor events was a match race for professional motorcyclists, a Harley Davidson driven by Walter Davidson finishing a bare half second ahead of an Indian driven by C. W. Van Sickle. The time for the five miles was 5:15.

COMPLAINTS.

DRIVER ROARS ABOUT TIMING.

ASSERTS MISTAKE WAS MADE IN MINOR HEIR RACE.

Declares the Great Horse Paced a Faster Mile Than Dan Patch and That Officials Did not Get the Last Quarter Correctly—Says Pacer Can Do Better.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LIBERTYVILLE (Ill.) Sept. 5.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] C. E. Dean, who returned from Minneapolis this morning, was loud in his censure of the timers at the Hamline track yesterday. He says that they did not give Minor Heir credit for what he really did.

"Minor Heir made the mile in 1:59½ according to my own watch and forty others," said Mr. Dean. "I had my stop-watch in my hand and was driving to break Dan Patch's mark of 2:00 unpaced and I had it beaten easily. My time for the quarter was 0:29½ and it was exactly what the timers hung up. The half was made in 0:59½ by my watch and theirs. The three-quarters was paced in 1:29½ and that was exactly what the official timers hung out. As I passed the wire my watch showed 1:59½. Then the judges hung up 2:00¼ and I was deprived of earning the extra $500 hung up if I beat Dan Patch's mark.

"I had forty men come to me and tell me that they caught the time in 1:59½ and the slowest time was 1:59¾, so that it would seem that something was wrong with the timers in the stand.

"I also want to say that Minor Heir's performance yesterday was equal to 1:55. The track was so muddy at noon that one could not walk across it, but at 6 o'clock it had dried out and I said I would make the effort. I had to stay out about three sulky lengths from the pole down the back stretch, and in the home stretch I was in second position. With a good track I would have made the mile in 1:57 or better. Minor Heir, I think, is the equal of Dan Patch and if the track is good at Milwaukee next week he will beat 2:00 easily."

GLENDALE TENNIS.

Hollywood Takes the Doubles and All but One of the Matches in Singles.

Hollywood defeated Glendale in a one-sided tennis match yesterday afternoon at the Country Club courts at Glendale, the visitors capturing the doubles matches and all but one of the singles matches. Many enthusiasts were present, and in spite of the apparent superiority of the Hollywood players, the losers were given loyal support by the rooters.

The annual championship tourney of the San Fernando Valley Club will be played off on September 19 and 26, and a large number of entries is expected in the events, which include junior and senior singles, ladies' singles, men's and mixed doubles.

Summary of games:

Men's singles—Lewis (Hollywood) beat Howe (Glendale,) 6-1, 6-1; Shaw (Hollywood) beat Blue (Glendale,) 6-5, 6-2; Bannister (Hollywood) beat Balthis (Glendale,) 6-0, 6-2; Eastman (Hollywood) beat Stanton (Glendale,) 4-6, 6-4, 6-3; McLafferty (Glendale) beat Tinley (Hollywood,) 10-8, 6-4, Hoover (Hollywood) beat Keating (Glendale,) 6-2, 6-4.

Men's doubles—Eastman and Hoover (Hollywood) beat Stanton and Balthis (Glendale,) 6-0, 9-7.

Tinley and Lewis (Hollywood) beat McLafferty and Howe (Glendale,) 9-1, 6-2.

Sale of Thoroughbreds.

SHEEPSHEAD BAY (N. Y.) Sept. 5.—At the sale of yearlings belonging to the Kingston, Larchmont, Maplehurst and Mill Stream studs at Sheepshead Bay today, remarkably good prices were realized. The star sale was a chestnut colt by Imp. Meddler, out of Homespun. He was sold to A. Joyner, acting for H. P. Whitney, for $10,700.

KENNY FENTON HONORED.

Granted Four Stars in Addition to 'Varsity Emblem—Change in Executives.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Sept. 3.—In recognition of four years' service on a 'varsity team, "Kenny" Fenton, the idol of Stanford undergraduates, was last night awarded the four stars, in addition to his 'varsity emblem, by the Executive Committee of the Associated Students. Fenton has doubly earned the right to wear this coveted ensignia, as he has played four successive years on both the 'varsity football and baseball teams.

G. N. Richardson of Oakland was appointed yell leader for the ensuing year, with P. H. Johnson of Los Angeles named as his assistant. The vacancy in the Executive Committee, caused by a failure of S. H. Bellah of Hanford to return to college, was filled by the appointment of S. A. Lindauer of Deming, N. M.

LAST CALL.

PREDICT CROOKEDNESS IN ARCADIA'S RACING.

IT IS reported that the officials of the Arcadia race track will meet in this city a week from tomorrow to make plans for the coming racing season, for, of course, there will be racing at the Lucky Baldwin plant.

Local sports have now come to accept as true the story in The Times three weeks ago that "Col." A. W. Hamilton, who acted as presiding judge for several years, will be kicked out of the pagoda to give place to Joe Murphy, an eastern judge of some reputation, who has been acting at the Fort Erie track and other places. Hamilton is conceded to be a "nice, pleasant old gentleman," but the sports declare he cannot see across a race track, and that Barney Schreiber, horse owner, bookmaker and part owner of the Arcadia track, intends to get a judge that can see. The complaints against Hamilton date back to the Cigarlighter races at Ascot Park several years ago, and extend to the Hereafter races at Arcadia last winter. The sports say he cannot tell the crooked races.

A new associate judge in place of Ed Cole is also talked of, because the story goes that Cole, while acting as judge, bet large and small sums on various horses while judging the races in which these beasts contested. Three or four men have been proposed for Cole's place, and a decision may be arrived at when the meeting is held on Monday of next week.

All of the "boys" along Spring street are predicting that the coming racing season at Arcadia will be a fierce one in the way of crooked jobs. Last year some awful deals are said to have been put through, and as this year is supposed to be the last one, it is not unlikely that the bookmakers will trim the suckers to a frazzle. The bookies did remarkably well last winter, and as they have about cleaned the books in Seattle, they will come to Oakland and Los Angeles on velvet.

The old Ascot track has had its last running race, and in all probability the buildings will be torn down this winter and the land cut up into lots. Those interested in the track had been hoping for months that the Supreme Court would decide against the city in the "shoestring" strip case, which would throw Ascot out of the city and give the track an opportunity of doing business, but the decision settled that particular hope. As neither harness racing or automobile contests would pay here, there seems to be no particular use for the big buildings.

There will hardly be any loss in the obliteration of the race track, for the land has greatly increased in value over its purchase price, and this increase will more than pay for the cost of the plant, leaving out any profit that may have been made off the racing.

MOVING BEAUTY.

GAY LINE OF MOTORS BRILLIANT SPECTACLE.

Long Beach Celebrates Closing Day of Festival of the Sea by First Exclusive Automobile Parade—Tissue Paper Is Secret of Beauty.

THE automobile often has been a feature of the parades for which Southern California is famous, but it remained for Long Beach, as one of the festivities marking the last day of the Festival of the Sea, to have a parade exclusively of motor cars. It has been held against the automobile that it is too strictly utilitarian to lay claim to beauty, that it is impossible to hide its steel and brass with flowers and greenery. Long Beach not only achieved the grst exclusive automobile parade, but proved that the purring monsters of the road can be transformed into slow-moving masses of bloom and bunting.

The secret is tissue paper. Pasadena in her midwinter fete struggles with real flowers, with their fatal fault of wilting when placed over hot engines or dragged along running boards. In summer, the residents of Long Beach who planned and constructed the decorations used rolls and rolls of tissue paper. There was one little electric machine made into a soft mass of alluring pink poppies, delicate as a ball gown—all at the cost of deft fingers and a hundred rolls of paper. Another carried red and green masses of fluffy beauty—again the tissue. The chariot of the Queen, on humbler days a silent and inconspicuous electric, became through the aid of the versatile paper a mass of billowing white like sea foam, crowned with yellow. Sunk in the white were the Queen and her tiny attendant.

To the aid of the tissue paper the designers of some cars brought bunting and streamers. The gay colors and the harmonious combination of hues lent holiday aspect to the work-a-day outline of the machines.

Two entrants at least were brave enough to use real flowers. The men of the fire department, always the favorites of people with extra blooms in their gardens, smothered the famous Long Beach automobile chemical engine in ivy, geraniums and asparagus plumosus. J. L. Dobbs made his car into a purple and green bower, using nearly a thousand blooms and six hundred feet of smilax. The use of real flowers and the beauty of these two entries brought first and second place to their entrants.

There were slightly over fifty machines in line, and about a third of them were decorated. The parade formed up town, came straight down to the ocean front, and then described a figure eight away from the ocean, then directly at right angles, and then to the ocean again.

In the lead were heralds in gay costume, mounted on horses. These horses were the only exception to the rule of everything automobile. Even the bands were in motor cars. There is always something to tickle the risibilities in any parade. In Long Beach's automobile function the band was it.

Machines are constructed to carry quite a few people, but not a full band. Neither are they made to take bass drums and trombones. But the band divided itself as well as possible, and climbed aboard. Everybody got a place to sit but the man with the big drum. There was mighty little room for him, and none for his noise machine. But he solved the problem. He stood on the running board, put the drum on the fender, and when the machine was started and he felt himself losing balance, he hooked his chin over the standards that support the top and stuck his head between the bows. Thus supported, he beat the drum lustily and grinned all the way down the street.

But another difficulty arose. It is embarrassing to have a piece of music separated—the umpah, umpah-umpah-pah-pah down the street a half a block, with part of the air being tootled at one curb and the flourishes being thrown in from another part of the compass. This happened when one or the other of the machines containing the band had to slow up. But the musicians carried their part bravely through.

The fire department had a place of honor at the head of the line, and the automobile chemical engine, in red and green, made a spot of color as it came down the street. The Queen, Mrs. Augusta Callahan, was also at the front of the line. She drove an electric, all a mass of white tissue paper flowers, a beautiful little machine.

Another electric that attracted great attention was the one driven by Miss Mary L. Holladay. It was entirely covered with pink and white tissue paper poppies, body, running gear and top. Even the wheels were wound

SWORDFISH WINS IN SHARK FIGHT.

A seven-foot shark and a big swordfish engaged in a battle royal off the wharf at Playa del Rey Friday afternoon, as a result of which the swordfish impaled the shark through the head with its sword, which was broken off in the struggle, the victor escaping while the shark was captured by a number of pier fishermen, who went in a boat and snagged the monster with a boat hook.

The shark is one of the largest specimens ever taken in southern waters, and has the teeth of the man-eating variety, it is reported. The fish attracted a crowd of curious visitors.

TIME-ANNIHILATORS.

BIKE FLYERS' MECCA HERE.

Eastern Stars to Appear on Local Track.

De Rosier and Goerke Among Speedy Visitors.

Dare-Devil Derkum Hopes for Victory on Thor.

Eastern cracks who have never before appeared on a local race course are to be seen in action Wednesday afternoon at Agricultural Park during the meet of the Los Angeles Motorcycle Club. Never before have the big motorcycle riders thought it worth while to come to Los Angeles to ride. The fact that several world records have been annexed on the local track has made such men as Jacob de Rosier, Walter Goerke, Frank Kellogg and Frank Mitchell anxious to ride here.

Everything points to a successful meet, and as some of the best men in the country will be seen in action motorcyclists and lovers of the racing game will make Los Angeles their Mecca on September 9. The card is one of the best ever arranged.

Paul J. Q. Derkum will be one of the attractions. He will not have things all his own way, as in previous meets, but for the first time in his life will race with men who have reached the top rung. The speediest speedsters in the world are here to race against the dare devil flyer who has made the most phenomenal entry into the professional list of any man now on the track.

Just what Derkum will do on Wednesday is an open question. As never before in his life he is training for his special stunts. That he realizes it is not to be mere child's play to try conclusions against such veterans as De Rosier and Goerke is evidenced by his anxiety to get himself into the most perfect shape possible.

Those who have seen Derkum flying around the track on an Indian motorcycle will be surprised to find he has changed mounts. He will ride a Thor in the Wednesday meet. He has been practicing for several days on the machine of his latest choice and says he is satisfied with the results he is getting. The local flyer expects to make his fastest time on this machine, and the one he has selected seems speedy enough to carry him to victory, even against such cracks as he will be called on to meet.

Heretofore Derkum has not trained consistently. It was not necessary, as he was an easy victor in almost every race in which he rode. Of late his special stunts have been riding exhibition miles, and this has a tendency to make any man careless. All his boyishness has been thrown aside now and for the past two weeks he has set himself assiduously to getting himself into condition.

Knowing they must race against a man whose mettle has been proved, the eastern men have arrived in time to try their machines on the track. Saturday afternoon they spun around the course in record time, and tomorrow and Tuesday they will make the dust fly.

Frank Kellogg, brother of Stanley Kellogg, is one of the fastest amateurs who will be seen on the track. He has already proved his ability to ride, and will be seen here for the first time. Frank Mitchell is another fast amateur who will enter several events.

Benjamin Bresee is one of the fast riders who is expected here today. Much is expected from the work of this motorcyclist, who is one of the veteran riders.

C. C. Hopkins, manager for Walter Collins, reached this city on Friday and will remain here until after the meet on Wednesday. J. D. Hurley, vice-president of the Thor motorcycle factory, is also here.

Another of the fast amateurs is Will Baumgardner of San José. He is expected here tomorrow. Among the local riders who will try for honors are C. Balke, Raymond Seymore, J. H. Shafer, W. G. Hoag, G. B. Bueneman, E. E. Earhart, C. W. Risden, Frank Loge, Irwin Knappe, W. G. Hoag, G. B. Blaylock and others.

The meet has been sanctioned by the Federation of American Motorcyclists, and all records will be official. That several world marks will be lowered seems to go without question, as the track is one of the fastest in this country.

Seldom has such a constellation of stars been gathered together as those now here for the Admission Day races. Motorcyclists who have made names for themselves in hard-fought events, riders who have clipped seconds from already low world marks, [illegible] country will be ready for the starter's gun on race day.

The management promises to do everything in its power to prevent delays. The course will be kept clear and the crowd will not be allowed on the track during a race. The winners and the time made will be announced after every event.

The Los Angeles Motorcycle Club has carefully prepared for the crowd that is expected. The meet on Wednesday should bring a throng from nearby towns, besides those who will attend from this city. For the motorcyclist Agricultural Park will hold superior attractions, and a record-breaking attendance is expected.

Entries for the several events closed at midnight. There are forty-eight fast men who will take part Wednesday afternoon. Among the number are the names of well known racing men who will contribute to the interest of the meet by tearing off fast miles both in competition and exhibition races.

SIMPLE ENOUGH.

THIS BOY RUNS FATHER'S AUTO.

SIX-YEAR-OLD ALSO MAKES A GOOD CHAUFFEUR.

Lad of Nine, Can Crank and Run Oldsmobile, and Was Caught by Parent Giving Demonstration in Back Yard—Younger Driver Skillfully Operates Car on the Road.

That an eight-year-old boy can operate an automobile, even in the narrow confines of his father's back yard, was demonstrated last week, when little Horace White, while his father, Rev. H. W. White, was absent, entered the garage, cranked the machine, and sent it humming around the garden.

Dodging fruit trees, spinning along the chicken-yard fence, the little lad fearlessly kept the machine on the move, executing difficult turns with the skill of a veteran. Several times he barely missed the clothes-line post, but this only added to his enjoyment.

Tiring of having this great time alone, he thought of his companions, and, tooting the horn loudly, he soon had assembled a number of kindred spirits, who piled themselves into the car and continued the excursion.

Rev. White returned just in time to see a small object emerge from beneath the car, oil from head to foot. With the ability to run the machine the lad had acquired a taste for oiling and polishing.

Another young enthusiast is William Robinson, the 6-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Robinson, of No. 1622 Oxford avenue, who drives the first two-cylinder, two-cycle Oldsmobile that was sent to California by the factory.

Mr. and Mrs. Robinson have just returned from a jaunt to Riverside, much of the distance being covered with the child at the wheel.

The yungster, who is better known as "Bud," is not yet strong enough to crank the engine, but can pass wagons and obstacles as skillfully as his father.

Bud has laughing blue eyes and golden hair, and when driving scorns a hat. He is a familiar sight on the country roads, where he is well known to many of the autoists.

He is to have a machine of his own in the near future, which is to be given to him by his grandmother, Mrs. W. D. Robinson.

FRANCE AGAINST ITALY.

Florio Cup to Be Run Today Has but Seventeen Entries, All from Two Countries.

The Florio Cup contest, which will be run today over the Bologna Circuit, in Italy, has developed into a struggle between racing sections of the French and Italian industries. It was sure when the French were so disastrously defeated in the Grand Prix that they would seek to regain their lost laurels, and it was hoped that the German cars would meet them again in Italy. But not a single car from any other nation than France and Italy has been entered.

Seventeen cars will contest over the course. In the drawing for position, Duray got first start, and sent his Lorraine-Diétrich away with a clear field. The entire order of start is as follows: (1) Lorraine-Diétrich I (Duray,) (2) Motobloc I (Pierron,) (3) Mors I (Jenatzy,) (4) Fiat I (Lancia,) (5) Bayard-Clément I (Gabriel,) (6) Itala I (Cagno,) (7) Lorraine-Diétrich II (Minoia,) (8) Motobloc II (Gauderman,) (9) Mors II (Demogeot,) (10) Fiat II (Nazzaro,) (11) Bayard-Clément II (Hautvast,) (12) Itala II (H. Fourner,) (13) Lorraine-Diétrich III (Trucco,) (14) Mors III (Garcet,) (15) Fiat III (Wagner,) (16) Bayard-Clément III (Fitz Shepard,) (17) Itala III (Piacenza.)

Dr. R. Shiffman of Pasadena has purchased a Chalmers-Detroit "Thirty," and will have the car fully equipped with every accessory.

PERILS OF DEATH VALLEY.

Canvas Road Over Quaking Bog Carries Car for Fifty Yards—Angelenos Work Their Passage.

For several days Robert Montgomery of this city has been explaining to friends the story of his terrible journey into Death Valley. It was feared that misfortune had overtaken the party when no word was heard from them for almost a week. They are now busy pointing out the dangers of a journey by automobile over the treacherous sand of Death Valley.

Hardships that would have forced many to turn back in despair were faced by the Los Angeles motorists after reaching the heart of the Valley of Death. Over many miles where no roads exist the heavy touring car was worked almost inch by inch. With hand blistered and almost exhausted they reached Skidoo, after days of almost superhuman effort.

Those who composed the party besides Montgomery, were John Young, who drove, Robert Lank, George Mack, Howard Brawley and M. Squires. They left Los Angeles for a quick run to Skidoo by way of Death Valley, they reached the little mining camp among the hills after several hardships and then drove to Goldfield, Rhyolite and Rawhide.

The trip was made in a big Thomas Flyer and the car did all that was expected of it. Instead of roads, the machine was forced across quaking bogs, and for eight miles a road was built foot by foot. The only way progress could be made was to lay brush and sticks on the sands, and then stretch pieces of tent cloth. The car was sent ahead on this makeshift road only to sink to the pan again when the canvas path was passed. They returned to Los Angeles after visiting Goldfield, Ryholite and Lida.

LOW-PRICED OLDSMOBILE.

Car Which Was Promised When Auto Cut Was First Announced Arrives from Factory.

One of the latest arrivals on automobile row is the $2000 Oldsmobile, which has been received by the H. O. Harrison Company. The new car has a thirty-two-horse-power motor and a wheel base of 107 inches. The car is large and roomy and seats five people comfortably. The machine is finished with the regular Oldsmobile features, and is in red and striking in appearance.

The cylinders are 4½x4¾. It has a three-speed, selective type transmission, the same as has been so successfully used in other Oldsmobiles. The wheels are 32x4. The springs are semi-elliptic.

The car comes equipped with all lights, oil and gas, and a generator. The crank shaft is drop forged and the brakes internal on the hubs and transmission.

Bluebird to Race.

The races scheduled for September 22 at San Francisco are attracting considerable attention. The Chalmers Detroit Bluebird which has been in Los Angeles was shipped, yesterday, to San Francisco and will appear in the long and short races on the Tanforan track. After the races there the car will be brought back to Los Angeles and the Western Motor Car Company will use it in the Thanksgiving Day hill-climb at Riverside. This is the first entry to be declared for the Box Springs event this year.

Run from Bay City.

The third four-cylinder Buick runabout to make the trip from San Francisco to Los Angeles during the last month arrived Friday. F. Myers who made the journey reports a pleasant time with no trouble to mar the run. He found the roads good for the northern half of the trip, but rather rough south of Son Luis Obispo. H. E. Noxon with his wife recently made the run to the Yosemite in one of the little cars and says he never spent a more pleasant vacation.

According to late statistics there are 34,850 automobiles in service in France.

EXCELSIOR.

GUARDS ALONG BALDY COURSE.

SCORE OF HENCHMEN WILL AID KISSELKAR CREW.

Trim White Steamer Arrives for Century Dash, Little the Worse for Rough Experience—Ryus and Guild Strong Pair Who Will Operate Fenner's Racer.

Twenty men will help Leon T. Shettler in his effort to beat the White Steamer to the top of North Baldy on September 20. This score of faithful henchmen will be posted along the course to warn Latham of the approach of teams. There will also be some one in each town through which the Kisselkar will pass to tell the nervy pair on the car just how the race is going.

Never before have such preparations been made for a century dash. Tuned to the minute and looking exceedingly fit the Kisselkar roadster, which has been stripped for the dash will carry no unnecessary weight and will be given every advantage possible without infringing the rules. The White Steamer will also be given every advantage possible.

Equipped with auxiliary springs front and rear the car is insured against breakdown if the already well-wrapped springs break. In addition to this Shettler will have a complete repair outfit with which he says he can replace any of the springs in five minutes.

Early Tuesday morning Latham and King shot away for the mountain summit in Tobasco, No. 1, the car on which Shettler will base his chances for winning the race. Shettler and party in a Reo accompanied the racing machine, reached Shoemaker's ranch that night, and remained here until Wednesmorning, when they continued the run to the summit.

On the return journey the party encountered a severe thunderstorm and were drenched. The torrents of rain which fell in the high altitude washed out parts of the road, which will be repaired before the race.

This morning the Kisselkar, equipped as it will be on the day of the race, can be seen at Leon T. Shettler's premises on Grand avenue. This week the car will be taken to Shoemaker's ranch and Latham and King will spend the next few days driving over the road and familiarizing themselves with the course.

Fenner's new White steamer, which is to race the Kisselkar, is here. The machine was shipped from Turlock, Cal., after the accident which put it out of commission there. H. D. Ryus sent the machine through a fence while trying to establish a new record from San Francisco to Los Angeles.

Repairs will be necessary before the racer is in shape to be sent over the Baldy course. The car will probably be repaired in a few days, and then Ryus will be able to take the kinks out of the machinery. Meanwhile "Black Bess," the old steamer, which has twice won the strenuous climz, will be used in the try-outs.

F. C. Fenner went to the hilltop on Saturday, accompanied by H. C. Guild, the mechanic who is here from San Francisco to ride in the race. Guild is an experienced autoist, and his place at the side of Ryus will add to the chances of the White, it is thought.

Ryus and Guild are to spend a large part of the intervening days before the race speeding over the course. The two will be ready to take every fair advantage possible on the morning when the gasoline and steam cars will fight for supremacy.

South Germany will be the scene of the 1909 Prince Henry automobile endurance contest.

"At the Auburn factory I found the 1908 output entirely sold. Every department is busy getting material together for the new cars, and September 15 a night and day force will be put on in order that deliveries can be made early.

"A large addition is being made to the Auburn plant, which will result in doubling the capacity. The heads of the Auburn Company are interested in what is being done on this Coast, and I was congratulated on the great run we made from San Francisco. Los Angeles ranks well up among the Auburn agencies, Kansas City being the leader. The Missouri city is hilly, and a car is forced to do the hardest kind of work."

TROPHY OF TOURIST TOUR.

Perfect Score Winners on Long Run to Bay City and Return Receive Gold Medal.

Trophies of the tour of the Tourist, handsome triple-plated gold emblems, have been presented to the perfect score winners this week. Owners of Tourist cars who made a perfect 1000-mile run to the Bay City and back are now the possessors of mementoes of the long tour. The drivers of each car which came through the trying grind without mishap have been honored by the Auto Vehicle Company.

Encased in a plush-lined box the gold-plated medal is a handsime souvenir of the trip. The trophies were designed by J. S. Conwell, manager of the company, who engineered the long run. To Mr. Conwell is due the success of the great undertaking. Though he was ably assisted by a score of others, he first conceived the idea of the run when others feared the undertaking would be too great.

Tourist owners throughout Southern California have expressed themselves in unstinted praise of the efforts of the popular manager. The labor of the trip, however, was great and it will be necessary for Mr. Conwell to take a much-needed rest. He will leave for the East soon.

Those who received the Tourist trophy are: W. D. Newerf, Los Angeles; C. A. Dundas, Riverside; B. H. Dyer, J. S. Conwell, J. F. Hubbard, C. W. Sahland, V. S. Beardsley, Los Angeles; R. M. Bowzer, San Diego; W. N. Congdon, Santa Ana; Mrs. W. J. Burt, Los Angeles; J. B. Gooch, Corona; G. W. Lull, Los Angeles.

GOSSIP ALONG GASOLINE ROW.

P. A. Renton, of the Renton Motor Car Company, will leave soon for a visit to the Great Smith factory at Topeka, Kan. He will also spend some time in Chicago purchasing new machinery for his repair shop and then will visit the Overland works at Indianapolis, Ind.

An agency for Winton automobiles has been opened in the garage at Vermont avenue and Twenty-fourth street.

H. O. Harrison expects his 1909 Peerless cars here in about a week. The machines should have arrived two weeks ago.

D. F. Robertson has been added to the selling force of Leon T. Shettler. He will hande Kissel Kars exclusively.

Mrs. Emma A. Summers, the "Oil Queen," has purchased an elegant sixty-horse-power Thomas Flyer. She has recently taken up motoring.

There has been such a demand for the four-cylinder Buick runabouts that the Western Motor Car Company found it necessary to wire for twenty-four machines last week.

The Amalgamated Oil Company, the southern branch of the Associated, has decided that motor cars would be a great advantage to the field men, and in the future the men who have a large territory to cover for this company will skim about in four-cylinder Buick runabouts.

D. T. Althouse of this city is touring New York and New England States in his new Packard, which he secured at the factory. After the tour he will ship the car to Los Angeles.

H. P. Taylor of Goldfield, Nev., has ordered a 1909 Peerless car of the H. O. Harrison Company. He will be the first to receive one of the new 1909 output expected here in a few days.

John B. Miller's Packard landau will be here Monday. This will be the second car of the kind on the Coast, the other being owned in San Francisco. Mr. Miller rides from Pasadena daily, and wants a car which can be open in fair weather and closed on winter days.

LITTLE SPARKS OF MOTORDOM.

When the palace of Abd-el-Aziz was sacked recently in Morocco, the invaders were astonished to find twelve automobiles and 100 bicycles.

Miss Ethel Roosevelt is following the example set by her sister, Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, and becoming an enthusiastic advocate of the automobile.

Pittsburgh now claims to have more automobiles to its population than any other city in the Union. There are said to be 1198 cars, valued at $5,000,000, in the city.

The distances on the route laid out for the proposed double transcontinental contest, total 7217 miles, the biggest run is 285 miles, over the plains of Nebraska.

The experience of the Canadian army Service Corps with automobile transportation at Quebec's recent tercentenary celebration will probably result in the establishment of an automobile corps like that in England.

Two steam taxicabs, the first in America, are now runnning in Boston. Ten more are to be in commission before September 15. The machines are of twenty horse power and each carries four passengers.

More than 500 cars are now in use in Calcutta, and India is daily becoming a very important market for motor cars. The native princes are buying high-grade cars, and their example is being copied by the wealthier merchants and the Parsees.

The first transcontinental automobile tridal tour on record is being made by Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Newton of Chicago. They stepped into the car from a Chicago parsonage and proceeded to New York. They will return to Chicago by train and cross the country to San Francisco by motor.

The Motor Union of Great Britain and Ireland has now established agencies in Boulogne, Dieppe, Havre, Bordeaux and Marseilles, and will furnish all American tourists with a driving license and certificate of registration for his car before driving on French roads.

Thirteen different regiments from the thirteen original States, uniformed and armed, will guard the course through Fairmount Park during the long-distance races to be held during Founders' Week in Philadelphia, October 5 to 10.

There is now one motor omnibus for every two-horse omnibus plying in London. Licensed vehicles are taxicabs, 1508; hansoms, 5329; four-wheeled cabs, 3768; motor omnibuses, 1046; horse-drawn omnibuses, 2281; total, 13,932.

Magnalium, the new aluminum alloy of German origin, has a tensile strength of from 18,000 to 25,000 pounds per square inch. It is hard, as a rule, although some of the alloys are very ductile, and can be hammered, forged, rolled, drawn, etc.

British motorists who have been hoping for several years that the government would establish a central highway department, are much encouraged by the fact that Chancellor of the Exchequer Asquith is seriously considering this plan.

NEWS OF LIVE MOTOR CLUBS.

A committee has been appointed by the Royal Automobile Club of Great Britain for the promotion of an exhaust competition.

Auto owners of Sheboygan, Wis., will give the orphans and poor children a tour, following the example of the Milwaukee A. C.

The Minneapolis Automobile Club now has more than 700 members out of 1500 motorists in the city, and has begun another campaign for membership.

An effort is being made by the Sacramento, Cal., Automobile Club to have the State fulfill a promise made ten years ago, to furnish material to macadam, the road from Sacramento to Folsom on the condition that the county of Sacramento do the work.

What is probably the queerest automobile club in the world has been formed by the inmates of the Daughters of Jacob's Home for Aged Men and Women, in New York. All its members are more than 100 years old and the president is 107. The club will make one automobile trip a year, the expenses to be borne by the home.

Why?

Won't the Diamond, Goodrich or Fisk Tire Co.'s sell Bullock's auto tires?

—Is it because they will not recognize Bullock's as auto supply dealers?

—Is it because Bullock's prices on auto tires are fair prices? Hundreds of auto owners recognize that a most complete auto supply stock is on the third floor.

—Fair prices are right prices.

—Then why?—the eternal question—but the fact remains

That Bullock's Will Continue to Sell Diamond, Fisk and Goodrich Tires at Right Prices.

For the interests of our customers are our interests. We maintain our right to conduct this business according to right methods without dictation from outside sources.

It is interesting to note the general drop in prices of auto tires on September 1st.

—Is it "an acknowledgment?"

—Bullock's prices have been, they are and always will be fair prices. They mean safe savings.

—That this store belongs in the ranks of the biggest and best auto supply stores of the country is attested by its great complete stock of only standard auto supplies. You can save safely at Bullock's. The following are our regular prices. They speak for themselves.

HORSESHOES.

LUCK AGAINST BRISWALTER.

Loses After Pitching a Fine One-Hit Game.

Bad Errors by Easterly and Delmas Are Fatal.

Groom Gives but Three Swats in Nine Innings.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND, Sept. 5.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Briswalter had the hardest kind of luck today, for he pitched a no-hit game until the second man faced him in the ninth inning, and then lost. Errors by the visiting twirler's supporters lost the game to the locals, who gingered up and played in their old form today. The score was 1 to 0.

Groom pitched a great game as well, allowing only three hits. Perfect fielding by the Beavers and a single score in the very last inning broke the winning streak of the champions.

The lone run was brought home by Cooney. He got to first on an error by Delmas, stole second and reached third safely by virtue of a bum heave by Easterly. He scored when Johnson knocked a single over second base.

The game was a splendid pitcher's battle, and was fought as stubbornly as any contest to be seen in a long season.

First time up, the Angels did not plant a man on first. Barnard went out, Cooney to Danzig. Oaks was out, Groom to Danzig. Dillon went out, Cooney to first.

Casey, in Portland's half, fouled out to Dillon. Cooney took a pass and was forced at second on Johnson's fly. Danzig hit a fly that was caught by Barnard.

In the second inning, after the visitors had gone out in quick order, Raftery was passed by Briswalter, and went on to second on Bassey's sacrifice, but that was as far as he got. Ryan went out at first, Bernard to Dillon, and Madden flew out to Dillon.

Briswalter drew a pass in the next inning, after Delmas and Easterly had been put out. Bernard, the next man up, almost broke the willow when he landed against the Spalding for a good long drive, but Raftery pulled it down and retired the side. Again, in the fourth, Groom walked a man, Oakes being selected. Dillon flew to Bassey, Wheeler to Johnson, and Smith singled to right, advancing Oakes, but Ellis struck out. In Portland's half, Johnson, Danzig and Raftery were put out at first.

Delmas and Briswalter tried hard in the fifth, and lifted the ball into the right field, where Ryan was waiting for just such efforts. Easterly struck out.

In Portland's half Bassey struck out. Ryan's grounder was fielded by Bernard in fine shape, and Whaling died at first.

In the following inning, Los Angeles got another hit. After Bernard had knocked a fly into Casey's hands, Oakes drove a neat single to third. This could not be made to count, however, for Dillon and Wheeler whiffed. Three grounders knocked by Groom, Casey and Cooney finished Portland in the last half of the inning.

The Angels went out one, two, three in the seventh. Johnson in Portland's half, flew to center, but Danzig got safety to first on Wheeler's fumble. He was caught a moment later, while leading off first. Raftery flew out to Dillon.

The last of the three hits scored by the visitors came in the eighth. Easterly struck out, but Briswalter doubled to right. Bernard died at first, and Oakes fanned.

After Bassey was out on a fly to center, Ryan was passed by the Los Angeles twirler. Whaling struck out and Ryan was forced at second on Groom's grounder to Delmas.

In the ninth, Dillon struck out, Wheeler flew to Groom, and Delmas was retired at first on a grounder to Cooney. Then came Johnson's timely single, a Texas leaguer that brought home the winning run.

JONES WINS GAME.

TRUCK EAGAN HITS HOMER.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 5.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Even Truck Eagan's home run, which was one of the longest, if not the longest, on the San Francisco grounds, could not save the Commuters from defeat today. It gave the tailenders a chance, all right, but the Seals had gathered in one tally in the first and another in the fourth, which sufficed to give them a 2 to 1 game. Oscar Jones almost had his bad inning in the ninth when the Oak's bunched a couple of hits, but he got over the trouble. There were less hits off Nelson but one base on balls and an error were costly to the hopes of his team.

A couple of sharp doubles by the Oaklanders when the Seals were on the bases, held down the tallying and the game was pulled through in speedy order, just an hour and a half from the time game was called. Umpire Flynn had another chance to work, at the request of President Ewing, who wanted to see him in action. The new "Ump" was there with the Silk O'Loughlin mannerisms and got away with his work in nice shape. Jack O'Connell, who has a bad leg as a result of being hit with a ball, worked the bases.

In the first inning, Mohler walked and was sacrificed by Curtis. Zeider hit to right and when he drew the fire of the fielders by starting for second, Zeider came all the way around.

In the fourth, Melchoir was safe on Miller's fumble of a slow grounder. The San Francisco outfielder took second and third on outs by Williams and Beck and was tallied on Berry's center-field hit.

Truck Eagan pulled off his home run stunt in the fourth. The ball went over the center field fence but there was no one ahead of Eagan when he worked the pitcher for the long hit.

The Seals were given a good scare in the ninth. Eagan started with a single that hit the fence and went to second on an out by Slattery. La Longe's single advanced Eagan but Miller was out to the infield and Van Haltren retired the side.

ST. LOUIS WINS GREAT CONTEST.

DEFEATS DETROIT BY ONE RUN IN TEN INNINGS.

Ten Thousand Fans Were Unable to Get Into the Park—Most Brilliant Game Ever Seen in the City. Both Howell and Summers Pitch Classy Brand of Ball.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 5.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Ten thousand baseball fans were turned away from Sportsman's Park this afternoon, unable to obtain standing room in the enclosure, two hours before the second game of the Browns-Detroit series was called. St. Louis is baseball mad as it has not been in years. Since the world's championship series with the old Chris Von Der Ahe Browns and the New York Giants, there has not been anything like the crowd that clamored for admission to the game this afternoon.

It is the beginning of the end of the pennant battle in which Detroit has held first place for many weeks. The Browns are second and have taken two of the three games with their arch-enemy. Should they win the game tomorrow they will be in the lead.

Today's game was the most brilliant exhibition of the baseball ever witnessed in St. Louis, the locals taking the game in the last half of the tenth inning, 2 to 1, after Detroit had scored their one run in the first half of the same round. It was a game of almost perfect baseball on both sides. Howell, for St. Louis and Summers for Detroit, were the pitchers.

The score:

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 5.—A batting rally by New York in the sixth inning gave the visitors a victory over Philadelphia today, 5 to 1. The visitors took rather kindly to McQuillen's curves, but a triple play saved him in the second inning, and New York scored a run in the third on a double by McCormick and a single by Bridwell.

In the sixth inning New York hammered McQuillen's delivery hard and the latter became very wild. Doyle opened this inning with a single and steal, and scored on Bresnahan's double. An error by Bransfield on Donlin's bunt was followed by a single by Devlin, and a single by Bridwell and two force outs. With three runs in, McQuillen made a wild pitch and gave two bases on balls, forcing in another run.

Foxen, who pitched the last three innings, held New York in check, only ten men facing him. The triple play was the feature of the contest. With Donlin on second and Seymour on first, Devlin hit to Dooin, who tossed the ball to Knabe, forcing out Seymour. Donlin rounded third and started for home, but Knabe headed him off. Donlin run up and down the line and was finally put out by Dooin. The latter then snapped the ball to Grant and retired Devlin at third base. Score:

New York, 5; hits, 11; errors, 2.
Philadelphia, 1; hits, 6; errors, 1.
Batteries—Mathewson and Bresnahan; McQuillen, Foxen and Dooin.
Umpires—Klem and Emslie.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 5.—More than 11,000 spectators seemed to enjoy the affair at Exposition Park this afternoon, when the Chicago champions walked away with the game from Pittsburgh by a score of 11 to 0.

The fourth and fifth innings resembled a comedy of errors, the home team succeeding in placing five errors to their credit. These, with seven hits secured by the visitors, gave four runs in the fourth inning and five in the fifth.

The batting streak cropped out again in the ninth inning, when Chicago added three hits to their credit for two runs.

The home team did not seem to make any effort to score after the fifth inning.

Reulbach pitched a splendid game for Chicago, allowing but four hits. Score:

Pittsburgh, 0; hits, 4; errors, 5.
Chicago, 11; hits, 11; errors, 2.
Batteries—Vail, Young, Leever and Sullivan and Gibson; Reulbach and Kling.
Umpire—O'Day.

MANAGER BOUNCED.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CINCINNATI, Sept. 5.—St. Louis gave Cincinnati a scare by scoring four runs in the ninth inning, a misjudged fly and an error assisting the visitors. Manager Ganzel was put off the field for disputing a decision. Hoblitzell and Beecher, new men, made a good impression with the local team. Score:

Cincinnati, 6; hits, 9; errors, 3.
St. Louis, 5; hits, 11; errors, 1.
Batteries—Spade and McLean; Higginbotham, Sallee and Ludwig.

Playgrounds Wins.

The Echo Park playgrounds baseball nine blanked the Security bankers' team at Echo Park yesterday afternoon, the score being 4 to 0. Rheinhardt, after pitching five innings for the visitors, retired in favor of Coles, and the youngsters made good their victory with three timely doubles by Finley, Bryan and Best.

FOUR UMPIRES.

WORLD'S SERIES INDICATORS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CINCINNATI, Sept. 5.—For the world's championship baseball games there will hereafter be four umpires. The National Baseball Commission today announced the decision to this effect. Two shall be named from the National and two from the American League staff of umpires, and their service is to be subject to the decision of the chairman of the commission.

A recommendation to this effect made some weeks ago by the commission has been approved by both leagues and the rule was thereupon drawn up and announced, being section 16 of the rules and regulations covering such contests.

BUNTED THIRD STRIKE.

BATSMEN IS NOT OUT.

A dispute has arisen in some of the amateur leagues over the fact that in a recent game a batsman bunted on his third strike at a wild pitch, and was called out after reaching second base. The umpire certainly made a poor decision on this play, for there is nothing in the rules by which a batsman can be called out on a bunted third strike, if the catcher drops the ball.

In the game at issue the batsman had two strikes on him. The next ball heaved happened to be a wild pitch, and seeing this, the batsman bunted at it, and ran like a deer. The ball went behind the catcher, and before he recovered it the runner was on second base, and the umpire called him out. There is no rule giving him any right to do this, and the runner was certainly not out.

The Coast League umpires invariably call out a man on a bunted third strike, even if the catcher drops the ball, but there is no rule on it. If a batsman makes his third strike bunting at a wild pitch, there is no apparent reason why he should not run as many bases as he can. The catcher loses by this condition, for he is supposed to catch everything a pitcher throws. If the pitcher heaves wildly, and the batsman strikes at the ball for his third strike, the pitcher must be given the credit of a strike out, no matter if the heave is over the grand stand, for the rules do not provide for a batsman reaching first on a wild pitch.

DISPUTE ENDED.

FIRST NATIONALS WIN.

The First Nationals won the silver cup and championship of the Bankers' League series yesterday afternoon from the Citizens nine by default. According to the schedule the First Nationals should have played the Farmers and Merchants, while the Citizens were due to cross bats with the American Nationals.

At the league meeting last last week, however, it was decided to play off the tie for first place between the Citizens and First Nationals yesterday, and the Citizens by forfeiting the game, lose the championship.

Reasons are offered by players of both teams as to the inability of the Citizens to play the deciding contest. The sudden departure of Pitcher Bridwell of the Citizens made a big hole in the team, and it is reported that the Citizens offered Bridwell all his traveling expenses provided he would remain over a week to play the crucial game. Bridwell refused, and the Citizens informed the First Nationals that McKnight, a player who had entered the bank but a few days previous, would pitch the final game.

The First Nationals refused to accept the substitute, as they claim the Citizens had Pitcher Cole, who had played all season, to occupy the box, and further intimated that McKnight was a professional, and above all, it was unsportsmanlike to attempt to play a new man at the end of the season.

The dispute was brought before a called meeting of the league, at which a majority vote upheld the demands of the First Nationals, and refused to consider the desires of the Citizens to flip a coin for the possession of the cup, or that they be allowed to use any league pitcher in the final contest.

The First Nationals claim their team was selected from men who have been employés of the bank for at least two years, and further assert the original agreement stated that no team in the league could sign new players after the opening of the season.

The final standing of the teams for the season is as follows:

	Played.	Won.	Lost.	P.c.
First National Bank	15	11	4	.733
Citizens' National	15	10	5	.666
National Bank of Cal.	12	6	6	.500

CHASE IS TRADED.

ATHLETICS GIVE UP DAVIS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] President Farrell of the New York Americans has practically consummated a deal with Connie Mack of the Philadelphia Americans, whereby he will give Hal Chase, the hard-hitting first baseman, in exchange for Harry Davis, first baseman and captain of the Athletics.

Farrell wants Davis for manager and captain of the Highlanders and thinks Davis's executive ability will bring the Highlanders out of the rut that they have fallen into. The terms of the deal are not known, but it is expected that they will soon be announced.

Chase is considered the greatest first-baseman in the game today, and would greatly strengthen the Quaker team while Davis's head work should supply the managerial ability that the Highlanders now lack. Chase quit the team in a huff, announcing his dissatisfaction, and said that he was going to California to play on the coast.

RUN BASES AT WILL.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 5.—Chicago put itself within one game of the lead today by defeating Cleveland, 7 to 0. Walsh, pitching his fifty-first game of the season, was practically unhittable, allowing only five singles and striking out eight men.

Joss was hit fairly hard, and his support was discouraging. Bemis and Stoval put Joss out of the running with costly errors. Land, Cleveland's new catcher from Toledo, was no improvement over Bemis, and Chicago continued to run the bases at will. Perry played a remarkable game at short, handling fourteen chances out of fifteen offered. Score:

Chicago, 7; hits, 10; errors, 1.
Cleveland, 0; hits, 5; errors, 6.

CAT AWARDS MADE.

Long Beach Fanciers Make a Very Creditable Exhibit of High-Class Felines.

The cat show that was held at Long Beach last week in connection with the Festival of the Sea, proved a very successful one and showed that no matter how small the list of exhibitors may be, there is always great interest taken in fine cats. After the awards were made the cats were left on exhibition the remainder of the week and proved a great attraction for the many visitors at the Festival.

The show was a very creditable effort for the Long Beach fanciers, who furnished all of the entries except two. Mrs. Leland Norton, who acted as judge, treated the exhibit as one general class, using the regular classification of the national rules in making the awards, thus giving the cats records under which they may be regularly entered in future shows.

The prize-winners and exhibitors were as follows:

Long-Haired Cats—Mrs. C. E. Chene, first prize, blue and white female, "Blue Beauty;" second prize, orange tabby kitten; first prize, cream Maltese kitten. Miss Margaret Old, first prize, white male, first prize, white female. Mrs. J. D. Mercer, Los Angeles, first and third prizes, orange tabby kittens. Mrs. Roy N. Carr, first prizes, white gelding, "Snowball." Mrs. Kate A. Burns, first prize, yellow and white gelding, "Snowy Jim," Drexel Kennels, a non-competing exhibit.

Short-Haired Cats—Mrs. A. Fenner, first prize, tabby and white gelding, "Beauty Frisco," weight twenty pounds.

Novelty class—Mrs. J. J. Osmer, first prize, Australian Tigercat, "Nash." This fine animal has a heavy coat of tipped fur, weighs fifteen pounds, and is fifteen years old. He has an interesting history, which includes a shipwreck outside Golden Gate in 1898 from an Australian vessel, when he swam a mile to shore and was found by his present owner on the rocks off Point Bonita Game up the Coast.

The Decker ranch, twenty-two miles up the coast from Santa Monica, has furnished game for several hunting parties of late. Charles Gill, in company with Burt Brady and James Decker, secured two bucks, one of which weighed 175 pounds without the head, and is said to be the finest specimen found in those mountains for years. Another party, consisting of Gordon McLain, Charles McLain, Otto Spaulding and Harry Bess, killed a fine three-point buck, brought in a five-point Hawk brought down deer, from the same

ALL ANXIOUS FOR BIG FIGHT.

Sports Figuring Ketchel to Thrash Papke.

Weight of Money Makes the Former a Favorite.

Principals not to Enter Ring Before Three O'clock.

The great bunch of sports throughout the country that take an interest in the prize fights will know tomorrow afternoon how wild their guesses have been, for that is the time that the middleweight championship contest will be decided between Ketchel and Papke at the Jeffries arena south of the city.

There is no question but that the fight is one of the most important in the country at this time, for Ketchel and Papke are disputing the middleweight championship and there is practically no other man to say them nix but the black wonder, Sam Langford. After the two white ones settle their differences tomorrow afternoon, the colored man will be the one to put away, before the winner can be considered the real middleweight champion. Langford says he will agree to stop Papke in three rounds and that he will fight Ketchel and thus it will be seen that the battle tomorrow afternoon will leave but one man to fight Langford.

Stanley Ketchel,

Middleweight champion, who will defend his title against Billy Papke tomorrow afternoon.

Ketchel has a better record than Papke, in that he has had more fights and has knocked out more men. Ketchel is naturally the favorite in the betting because he beat Papke some months ago but it is hard to see why he should be 2 to 1 or 2½ to 1. Papke is far from being a dub and as he is not a man who attempts to advertise himself by trying to knock out his sparring partners, many are led to believe that he may be a better man than the odds indicate. The fact that he readily made a match with Ketchel shows that he is not much afraid of the "man eater."

It is useless to guess which one will win and those who predict an easy victory for Ketchel have not seen either man fight. There has been a lot of talk about what each will do but the only way to know is to see them fight. There is no question but that there will be a big crowd of sports at the ringside for the fame of the men has traveled far and wide.

"BIG JIM" TO ACT.

Jim Jeffries will act as referee. He stated to The Times some weeks ago that he was through with the job of refereeing fights, and there has been some surprise expressed that he should consent to act to morrow, after having made this declaration. When asked about this yesterday, Jeff stated that he did intend to quit, and that tomorrow would be his last appearance. He said that he was really forced into this Ketchel-Papke fight by the weight of events.

The weight for the battle will be 158 pounds, with both men to weigh in at noon. Reports from the two training camps indicate that neither will have any trouble in being at the required figures.

Papke did his last hard work yesterday, and his programme today will consist of a little road running. Ketchel will go through his regular stunts today at the Southside Club.

The fight bugs will appreciate the good sense of Manager Long in not clogging the main event with a lot of preliminaries that no one cares for. There will be but one prelim, and this will be eight rounds between Jimmy Austin and Young Togo, the Jap. They will probably weigh 110 or 112 pounds. This prelim will begin at 2:15 o'clock, and the main event at 3 o'clock, and not a minute earlier.

FUTURE SCRAPS.

After the Ketchel-Papke fight the next one will be the ten-round main event at the McCarey Club on the night of Tuesday, September 15, the principals to be Freddie Welsh and Phil Brock. With this will be a six-round and a ten-round preliminary. On September 25 the McCarey club will stage Battling Johnson and Jim Barry for ten rounds, and McCarey is figuring on Leonard Lauder and Frank Carsey for Friday, October 2.

The next fight of the Jeffries club, as announced, will be twenty-five rounds on September 29 between Kid Wolgast of Milwaukee and Danny Webster of this city, and this looks like a slasher, as both boys are fast. Manager Long of the Jeffries club is trying to arrange several other fights this month.

INDIANS' COACH BECOMES ACTIVE.

WARNER INSTILLS ENTHUSIASM INTO SHERMAN BOYS.

Successful Season Predicted as Material Is Excellent—Good Schedule of Games to Be Arranged. Hard Daily Practice Has Begun and Men Feel Excellent.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

RIVERSIDE, Sept. 4.—Coach W. F. Warner, who is to have the training of the Sherman Indian football team this season, had the boys out on the gridiron for their first practice this week. It is too early yet to forecast what kind of a team will be developed, but Warner expects that by October 1 he will have eleven players selected who will make Occidental, Pomona or any other college team in Southern California look to its laurels.

Sherman will not be able to play Stanford or Berkeley, as these colleges are playing Rugby, but it is believed that a team can be put out that will make a good record among the Southern California schools. Warner coached the Sherman team in 1904, developing an eleven that defeated every team it played against with the exception of Berkeley.

The schedule of games will not be made public until after the return of Superintendent Hall, who is in the North looking up new pupils for the school. The first game will be played early in October, and the Riverside High School team will probably be the opponent. The candidates for the eleven will be given hard daily practice from now on, and the weeding process will begin in about two weeks.

Since Coach Warner's successful work with the Sherman Indian team four years ago he has been engaged in the East. For two years he coached the Colgate College team of Utica, N. Y., and last year had a team which tied West Point and Cornell and defeated Syracuse, a college ten times the size of Colgate. He is popular with the Indians and gets better work out of them than any other coach Sherman ever had.

CASTAWAYS PRACTICE.

RUGBY PLAYERS EAGER.

A dozen candidates for positions on the Castaway Rugby football team, held the initial practice of the season at the grounds at Eleventh and Flower streets, yesterday afternoon. The men limbered up with a brief period of handling the ball, passing and punting.

Two games have been arranged by Capt. Tom Higgins of the Castaway with Redlands and San Bernardino high school teams, the first contest to be played the second Saturday in October at Fiesta Park.

Among the new men who appeared for the first practice was R. A. Robertson, a Canadian player who will be a likely candidate for the team. Robertson is exceedingly muscular, and while not greatly experienced in the English game, is in splendid condition from a season of cricket.

Lewis, one of the best halfbacks who ever played in England is also counted on to make a strong player, while Watson, a member of the crack Vancouver aggregation, will be a valuable player.

Oakland Open Letters—No. 1 to Automobile Buyers

THE OAKLAND MOTOR CAR CO. pledge themselves to continue their unique policy of respecting American intelligence by advertising without EXAGGERATION or deception.

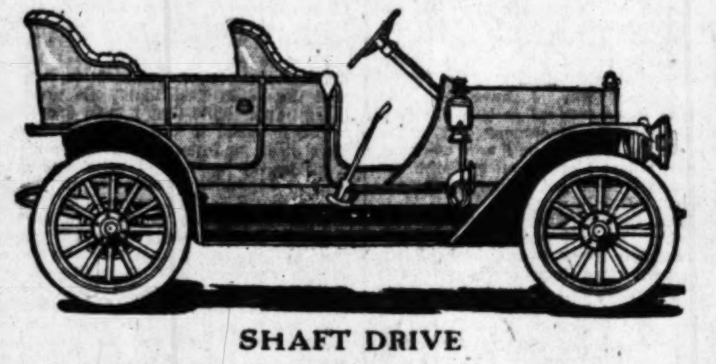
Their publicity campaign for 1909 will consist of a series of accurate, uncolored accounts of the performance of Oakland Cars under exceptionally exacting conditions, alternating with plain untechnical explanations of the principles of construction and the mechanical features that make such performance possible.

This is the first announcement of the 1909 Oakland Models. No such extraordinary automobile values have ever before been offered to the public.

The New Oakland 4-cylinder "Forty" at $1600, and the Oakland "Twenty," with its incomparable two-cylinder vertical motor, at $1250, usher in an era when highest grade of automobile construction goes hand in hand with prices in the reach of the average buyer.

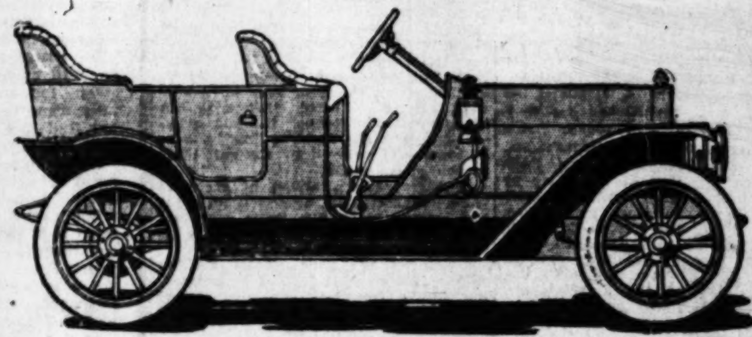
20 H. P. Touring Car or Touring Roadster $1250
20 H. P. Runabout $1200

40 H. P. Touring Car $1600
40 H. P. Touring Roadster $1600



SHAFT DRIVE

This is the new OAKLAND Model B, refined in construction and design, and ready for 1909 demand. Last season it created a big sensation with its vertical two-cylinder 20 H.P. vibrationless motor. It is the lightest car of its power and capacity on the market. Weight 1,650 pounds. Price, $1,250. Full equipment includes two gas lamps, two side oil lamps, one tail light, generator, horn, tools, jack, pump and batteries.



SHAFT DRIVE

Our big surprise this year is a four-cylinder car at an astonishingy low price. NOT A LITTLE TRAPPY FOUR, but a big FORTY H.P. MOTOR of the simplest, most substantial design ever put into an automobile.

The same OAKLAND virtues, great strength combined with light weight (1900 lbs.) straight line drive, long wheel base (110 in.), and quiet, smooth operation, at a price of $1600 makes the OAKLAND "40" the materialized dream of the power-worshiping driver. Nothing but the scientific OAKLAND construction makes possible LESS THAN 50 lbs. weight to each H.P.

Why the Oakland Costs Less to Run

OAKLAND prices are lowest because every dollar of total cost in shaft-drive OAKLANDS buys more miles of satisfactory service than can be secured from any other motor car in the world.

Strength, efficiency, light weight, and simplicity means less gasoline, less oil, less tire cost, less repairs, and less attention for every mile traveled and every passenger carried.

The mechanical efficiency is higher and the weight lower in an Oakland than in any other car of equal strength, capacity and roadability. The efficiency is higher because their mechanism is simpler and more substantial. The weight is lower because every part is made of the material best adapted to the duties of that particular part, and every part is shaped and placed to best fulfill its duties and to require the least material.

If the Brooklyn Bridge or the Singer Building were as unscientific in construction as is the average automobile, they would fall of their own weight.

OUR MOTORS & THEIR DESIGNER

Mr. Brush's record is unparalleled. Inventor of the only car that ever sold for six consecutive years and still sells without material change.
His later designs of widely differing types promise to eclipse the record of his earlier work.
The "experts" prophesied "That Oakland motor will be no good."
Ask them now, or investigate the OAKLAND "20."

THE PERFECTED OAKLAND CONTROL is only one case where the carrying of OAKLAND principles of construction farther has meant an undreamed-of approach to the ideal.
To assert that the control o fa gasoline car can be made SIMPLER—EASIER—SMOOTHER than the control of an Electric sounds too impossible to carry conviction.
Watch for the OAKLAND open leter No. 2, or take a ride in a '09 OAKLAND "20."

To prove our claims of reliability for the OAKLAND, we entered the Glidden Tour, 1667 miles of the hardest going to be found. The OAKLAND made a perfect score—more than which no car at any price accomplished. In this tour the OAKLAND carried a full load, four persons, as many as was carried by the largest cars in the run. FUTURITY GOES TO SIR MARTIN.

Colt Beats Maskette in the Flatbush Stakes.

Weight for Weight the Filly Is Outclassed.

Race Indicates Winner Is the Best Two-Year-Old.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—Under nearly equal weight conditions, John E. Hadden's colt, Sir Martin, and James R. Keene's Futurity winner, Maskette, met this afternoon in the rich Flatbush stakes at Sheepshead Bay, and Sir Martin won.

As in the Futurity, Sir Martin had run well while giving the Keene filly nine pounds, shouldering 127 to her 118. It was thought today, with the handicap removed, he might take her measure, and he did.

The result has given rise to a belief in some quarters that after all the question of the best two-year-old of the season is not yet settled and perhaps is one alogether of weight if not of distance also, the Flatbush stakes, which Sir Martin won today, being seven furlongs to the Futurity's six.

In the race today Wedding Bells jumped into the lead at the start by a length and a half, with Maskette and Sir Martin in close attendance. At the bend into the stretch, Maskette took the lead by half a length, with Sir Martin second. Schilling put Sir Martin under a drive and catching the Keene filly at the furlong pole, took the lead and won easily by four lengths. Maskette was a length and a half before Fayette.

J. R. Keene's Ballot won the Century stakes, mile and a half, and in doing so a new track record of 2:30 3-5 was made. This time is very close to the world's record for the distance, which is 2:30½, made by Goodrich at Chicago several years ago.

Sheepshead Bay Races.

SHEEPSHEAD BAY, Sept. 5.—Results:

Five and one-half furlongs: Roseben won, Tom McGrath second, Demund third; time 1:19 2-5.

Two and one-half miles: Sametus won, Ironsides second, Maladea third; time 5:09 2-5.

Seven furlongs: Sir Martin won, Maskette second, Fayette third; time 1:27 2-5.

One and one-half miles: Ballot won, King James second, Dorante third; time 2:30 3-5.

One and three-sixteenth miles: Miss Crawford won, Monfort second, Dark Night third; time 2:00 4-5.

Five and one-half furlongs: Summernight won, Rosslare second, Lasata third; time 1:07 3-5.

HARNESS GOSSIP.

GOOD HORSES ARE SOLD.

Several horses changed owners last week at Agricultural Park Joshua S. and Billy W. were both bought early in the week by Joshua Snowden from Sam Watkins. They were included in the sale of the stable that Snowden & Watkins were partners in. Thursday Watkins saw Maben work Joshua S. a mile with the last half in 1:03½ and regretting having parted with him, bought him back. He also made an offer for Billy W., but it was refused. Joshua S. now looks as if he could, after a couple of more workouts to stay him up, step a mile in 2:09 or better. He is entered in the matinée September 12, probably in the class with Dewey, Lohengrin and others and should prove a hard horse to beat, as he is very steady and game.

Walter Maben took a day off and slipped down to Riverside and bought the five-year-old mare Eugenia D., a full sister to Zomatta, that has been racing so well for Will Durfee down the Grand Circuit this summer. She took a record of 2:28 flat this spring, but has shown quarters better than 34 seconds and looks and acts like a high-class trotter. She is the same color and conformation as her sister and has very much the same way of going. E. F. Binder, from whom Maben bought her, has two or three other likely prospects, but will not part with them.

Pop Mosher was offered $500 for his Zombro yearling by a man from Phoenix, Ariz., but declined to part with his colt for less than $650.

Jake Levy bought Early Bird, 2:17½, about a month ago for the 2:18 class trots at Phoenix, El Paso and other places through that circuit, but she has been taken sick and will not be able to get in shape in time for the races this fall. Levy is in the market for a trotter eligible for the 2:20 classes and has one in view that he thinks will do. The other horses in the string—Boton d'Oro, pacer, with a trial of 2:08½, and the trotter Golden, 2:11¼—are both working well under Miller, the active member of the new racing firm of Levy & Miller. Levy's old matinée standby, the pacer Shecam, will be entered at the next matinée at Hines. He will also start here September 12.

Frank Williams has returned from Chico with Queer Knight and Era, the latter by Zombro and owned by William Morgan of Pasadena.

J. S. Stewart has also returned with his two-year-old pacer Ester D. after winning a stake race at Chico. Stewart's bay four-year-old by Zombro, which has a trial of 2:14, and had to be left at home at the last minute on account of grabbing her quarter, is all right again and is getting her work regularly.

Ida Millerton, owned by Mr. Henderson, the former owner of Phoenix and Romeo, owned by William Garland, were given slow miles in the first part of the week with halves in 1:05, and on Friday were worked between 2:11 and 2:12. Mr. Henderson's gray pacer Henry U. got a number of slow miles during the week.

All of C. A. Canfield's yearlings that have been going so well have been turned out in their corrals for a couple of weeks' rest. Mosher has also followed suit with his yearling Henry Snyder.

The Harness Horse Association has decided not to give a race meeting this fall at Agricultural Park. The association has been practically without a secretary for the last nine months and at the meeting last week Bob Smith of Sweet Marie fame was appointed to fill that office, the same position he held before he went East with the mare.

Owing to the lack of interest and the dull times, the proposed fair to be held at Agricultural Park in October has been practically abandoned for this year, but may take place in March. It is hoped that by that time business will be better, money more plentiful, the city full of tourists and the prospects for a successful exhibition much better, besides that the association will have more time to perfect its plans and engage attractions.

William P. Baylers is so well pleased with the way Fresno Boy is taking his work that he is thinking of entering him in some of the slow pacing classes at Phoenix and El Paso.

Will Durfee will stop at Phoenix on his way back from Lexington, Ky., with his stable of trotters and pacers. That will wind up his successful campaign for this year. He won $6000 at Buffalo and added $750 more to his bank account at Poughkeepsie; he is something like $15,000 ahead of the game since entering the Grand Circuit at Detroit, not counting the big purses he won at Peoria and Terra Haute, where he made his first starts. Horsemen give him much credit for the way he has handled Copo d'Oro, with his bad quarter crack, held together with a brass clamp, and Zomatta with her bowed tendon in all the hard races they have taken part in since he left here.

The brown six-year-old that Dr. Wills turned over to J. H. Williams to train for him three months ago is improving every day and promises before long to be a factor in the matinée trots. She is a very good looking animal and a full sister to Bonnie Russell, 2:10½ and to Cloe, 2:13. She was turned out for three years, as the doctor had a number of others and had no use for her, but this summer she was taken up. At first she showed no gait of any kind and even after she began to trot a little she would begin to mix and get all tangled up, but lately with a slight change of shoeing she squared away and last week went a mile with ease in 2:25, the last half in 1:10½.

Frank Woods worked the big black mare owned at Huntington Beach several heats with Nutter & Levy's Gold Nut, Miller up, and J. E. Stewart's bay mare by Zombro. The work-outs were not much better than 2:25 but the horses were stepped the last quarter at quite a clip and the finishes were all close and enjoyed by the rail birds in the grand stand.

A. Lopez has a string of six here from Phoenix, Ariz., among them a big fine looking black filly three years old that can step quarters handily in 33 seconds.

A. E. Heller's good pacing stallion Young Hal by Hal Dillard is recovering slowly from his lameness caused by picking up a rusty nail, but it will be some time before he is well.

HARD LUCK TALE.

METHODIST TEAM SHOT TO PIECES.

STARS QUIT SCHOOL AND NEW MATERIAL IS DOUBTFUL.

Shute, Bridwell, Stookey, Richardson, Bosbyshell, Carpenter, Almy and Others Will not Be in Line-ups. Intercollegiate Agreement Will Shut Out Preps.

With the best athletes in football, baseball and track missing from the 'varsity teams of the University of Southern California, this year, the Methodist enthusiasts are speculating on the chances of the various teams to successfully compete with the southern colleges in event the long expected reconciliation in intercollegiate athletics is affected.

Although a week yet intervenes until the university opens, the student athletic contingent is bemoaning the loss of a number of stars whose places will be different to fill and what the usual incoming freshmen class will contribute in the way of athletic prodigies is still problematical.

Coupled with the irreparable loss to the university teams through the sudden demise of Charlie Richardson comes the announcement of the departure of Walter Bridwell, 'varsity baseball captain for two seasons, and right half on the football eleven. Bridwell has entered Purdue University, where he intends taking the course in civil engineering.

Bridwell has developed into a strong pitcher, and in addition to playing a winning game on the college nine, also pitched a star game on the Citizens' team of the Bankers' League.

Bridwell was counted upon to make a back position on the football team, and with a year's 'varsity experience would have made a valuable player.

Stookey, the giant football guard, has gone east to Boston and will register at the Harvard Medical School. Stookey was rated as an All-Southern guard, and was unusually fast and clever for a heavyweight. Tipping the beams at 200 pounds, and a rangy build, the big fellow frequently ran interference for the backs, and also used his strength to break through the lines and block opposing punts.

The football squad will further suffer the loss of Carpenter and Bosbyshell, two 'varsity ends of several years' experience.

Bunker, 'varsity center, may be unable to participate in the intercollegiate games, as it seems a certainty that the colleges will bar prep students from competing if an agreement is reached. Bunker showed a marked improvement in his playing last season, and would easily have made his position this year.

Goodenow, sub lineman, is the only player in sight who has been tryed out at the snapperback's berth, but his services will likely be utilized at tackle or end.

Almy 'varsity quarter will not return, and Shute, the All-Southern end, and football captain, will be ineligible, owing to failure in studies.

Burek, All-Southern fullback, will be the star around whom the new eleven must be built up, and the only other regulars who are expected to be available are Woolin, tackle; Wallace, end, and Skinner, half.

Should the contemplated prep restriction be carried it will work considerable hardship on the track team. Lennox, hurdler and relay man; Thompson, sprints, and Shute, sprints, will be ineligible, and add to these losses the big hole left by Richardson's death, the 'varsity team will be stripped of nearly all the point winners.

Despite the despondency occasioned by the unusual depletion of good athletic performers, the Methodists are hopeful of a good season of sport in competition with the southern colleges, and even a losing game is considered preferable to a loss of intercollegiate contests.

IN OLD-TIME STYLE.

Under the auspices of the Cura Hidalgo Society, which is affiliated with the order of Sons of Montezuma, the old Spanish and Mexican families in Los Angeles will present a reproduction on September 16, of an old Mexican celebration, with dances, music and barbeque at Chutes Park. About 150 members of the society in old Spanish and Mexican costumes, will be the hosts for the occasion. M. G. Gonzales is president, and Y. Y. Perez, secretary of the society. Mrs. Gonzales and her beautiful daughters are taking a leading part in the arrangements for the celebration.

DUROCAR MFG. CO., Los Angeles, Cal.

Gentlemen: It gives me pleasure to state that the Durocar Runabout which I purchased from you last spring has certainly given me great satisfaction. It is very easy riding and easily handled. The upkeep expense has been very low. Wishing you continued success, I am,

Very truly yours,

THE DUROCAR MFG. Co., Los Angeles, Cal.

Gentlemen: I wish to express my satisfaction complete, as to the service of my car, this being the third that I have owned and the first satisfactory one. The simplicity of your cars recommends them as very suitable to any one with no time to tinker or repair and expecially for ladies. From the moment a person understands one of your cars, he has a satisfied feeling that he will return O. K. on any trip undertaken. The car is very clean and noiseless, any lady can crank one without exertion. A recent trip of sixty-two miles with four adults was run, averaging nineteen miles per gallon of gasoline.

I also wish to thank you for the extreme courtesy shown at your factory and during demonstration and after. This I appreciate as much as I do your valuable car.

Yours truly,
DR. W. J. CHAMBERS, Fay Bldg., City.

Whittier, Cal., Aug. 28, 1908.
DUROCAR MFG. CO., Los Angeles, Cal.

Gentlemen: I have now run my Durocar about fifty-two hundred miles, and I suppose you would like to know how I am pleased with it. I want to say that it has given me entire satisfaction, both in its simplicity and ease of management and in its durability. In all the number of miles that I have traveled I have never had to get out of the machine once to make any adjustment of the machinery or has it given me any trouble in any way. I have had the misfortune to pick up two or three crooked nails in the tire, but that has nothing to do with the machinery part of the car; and if I were in the market to purchase a new machine, I do not know of any place where I could get as much for my money or the satisfaction I could get in purchasing another Durocar, which I most certainly would do.

While the above has been very satisfactory, yet to my mind it is the least gratifying. When I purchased my Durocar there were certain promises made to me by yourself, which I want to say have been more than carried out. You not only have done what you promised, but you have done far more, a great deal more than I had any right to expect, and the uniform courtesy and fair dealing that I have received at your hands has been exceedingly gratifying, inasmuch as my former experiences with automobile dealers was far different.

If I can be of any service whatsoever to you in any way, please command me.

Yours sincerely,
DR. ALLEN OSMUN, Whittier Nat'l Bank, Whittier.

Gentlemen: I have been running one of your touring cars steady since July 1st, 1908, and I am well pleased with the car in every respect. The car has ample power which is developed with but little effort and no noise.

As for trouble I haven't found it. "Ask the other fellow."

Gentlemen: After thoroughly testing the Durocar on all kinds of roads, I wish to express my entire satisfaction with your product. It is surely though as its name indicates. For easy riding and economy in up-keep, I consider the Durocar the equal of any car on the market.

I wish also to thank you for the just and courteous treatment I have received at the hands of your Company.

With best wishes for the future success of the Durocar, I am, Yours truly,

O. L. HALSELL.

810 Central Bldg., Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 26, 1908.
DUROCAR MFG. CO., Los Angeles, Cal.

Gentlemen: Replying to your letter of August 25th in which you asked me to give my opinion of the DUROCAR.

In December, 1907, I purchased of your factory a Runabout, and I have had the same in constant use ever since. I have now run the car 5900 miles over all kinds of roads. I have run it as high as 150 miles in a day, and I have driven it at as high speed as at the rate of 44 miles per hour.

Prior to purchasing this car I had owned and used ten different makes of automobiles, and I can truthfully say that the DUROCAR that I am now driving is far superior to any automobile that I have ever owned.

The material in the construction of it has proved to be high class, and the assembling and finishing is done in a workmanlike manner. I believe today, you are building the best two-cylinder automobile in the United States. This means that it is the best machine built in the world.

I can further say truthfully that the management of the Durocar Manufacturing Company, from my standpoint, is ideal, for the reason that they are honestly trying to produce a high-class car, and are using every intelligent effort in their power to accomplish this purpose. They take great pride in making their word good, which I am sorry to say, I believe the average automobile owner will tell you is unusual. If you maintain the policy inaugurated and now practiced by your Company to give the consumer a high-class machine and stand by it as you have in the past, in my judgment, you will succeed.

With best wishes for your future, I am,

Very truly yours, A. P. FLEMING.

Long Beach, Cal., Aug. 26, 1908.
THE DUROCAR MFG. CO., Los Angeles, Cal.

Gentlemen: In reply to your favor of the 24th, will say that I am more than pleased with my DUROCAR, and unhesitating endorse it, and recommend it to any one wishing a good, durable and substantial car, and a car built on honor, wish also to add, that I am pleased with the treatment accorded me by the Company.

Yours very truly, E. S. GUMBY.

DEMMITT SHOOTS MOUNTAIN BUCK.

THREE DEER SHOT IN A HUNT OF A FEW DAYS.

While Main Party Is Climbing Precipices, the Camp Guard Shoots Blacktail Animal Within Few Hundred Feet of Door—Hunting at 10,000 Feet Elevation.

Lieut. Bert T. Demmitt and Gent Sturgeon returned last week from a ten days' camping trip in San Gabriel Cañon, where, in company with Leo Weber of Santa Paula, they passed a pleasant though strenuous vacation at Weber's Camp, and succeeded in killing three fine bucks.

In one respect their hunt approaches a record—that of killing every deer sighted.

The trip was made by stage from Azusa to Follow's Camp, thence by burro route to Weber's Camp, situated near the head of Coldwater Cañon.

From the comfortable camp the party, under guidance of John S. Weber, started for a two days' hunt on Sheep Mountain. As their destination was five miles from water, each man was compelled to carry about fifty pounds weight of water, blankets, guns, ammunition and rations over a route so steep that the burros could not be used.

Lieut. Demmitt says that the long day's toil, even under such drawbacks, was amply rewarded by the sight of the beautiful park in which they passed the night on grassy beds under the tall pines, at an altitude of 10,000 feet.

At 4:15 a.m. it was decided by lot that Leo Weber would remain in camp, and the others set forth and hunted the cañons and ridges until 9 o'clock without success, when, on returning to camp, they were amazed to find that young Weber had shot a fine blacktailed deer within 200 yards of the spot. This was the first deer he had ever seen, and its visit was a total surprise; but he had put four out of five bullets in its body.

Nine hours' heavy exertion were required to transport the game back to Weber's.

After a day of rest, another route was taken, and another buck secured within one and a half miles of camp. Fishing furnished lighter recreation for the next few days, after which a final effort for deer was made by ambushing a damp spot near a spring.

Six hours of tiresome waiting were rewarded by a bunch of deer, which stampeded just as the hunters saw them. One buck rushing in Demmitt's direction was filled so full of holes as to cause doubt concerning its ownership, but the difficulty was settled under the original agreement of equal division of spoils.

CRICKET NOTES.

The team to represent Los Angeles against Santa Monica on the 7th. is as follows: P. J. Higgins, captain; M. J. Bhumgara, A. E. Barwell, P. J. Tomkins, T. D. Bamford, N. Tempest, C. E. Packman, J. McCombe, J. E. Heavens, F. Bamford and W. Morris, W. Kitchin and C. Constable will be held in reserve.

This cricket match will be for the Dudley trophy and will be played on the old polo grounds at Santa Monica. Wickets will be pitched at 11 o'clock. Owing to the wonderful form shown by the beach players last Sunday, when they beat Los Angeles by four wickets and sixty-one runs, this match should be productive of some tall scoring, and with Hurditch away, Los Angeles will have an uphill fight, if they wish to retain the cup for another year.

The international cricket match between the United States and Canada will be played this year on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, September 14, 15 and 16, on the grounds of the Germantown Cricket Club at Manheim.

The Philadelphia Cricket Club is sending a team to Canada for a week's cricket. The tour will open at Montreal on Monday and Tuesday; on Wednesday and Thursday Ottawa will be played, and on Friday and Saturday, Toronto. On the following Monday, Labor Day, the team will play New York at Staten Island.

The "Gentlemen of Philadelphia" recorded the eighth victory of their tour by easily defeating Durham county eleven by 106 runs. J. B. King captured six wickets for only twelve runs.

The "Gentlemen of Philadelphia" suffered defeat at the hands of Kent, by four wickets. The visitors made 188 runs in their first venture, to which Kent replied with 102. In their second innings the Philadelphians completely collapsed, and were dismissed for the poor score of 37 runs. On a wicket sodden with rain, Kent went in to bat for a second time, and required only 124 runs to win. But so well did King and Hordern bowl that six good wickets fell before the requisite runs were hit off.

The last time the Philadelphians were over in England, in 1903, they won seven matches, lost six and drew three. This year they have won eight, lost six, while one game has been declared off owing to rain. Following are the names of the teams which they have beaten: South Wales, Worcestershire, Royal Artillery, Gentlemen of Ireland, Northern Counties Union, Marylebone, Derbyshire and Durham. They have been beaten by the following teams: Hampshire, Northamtonshire, Surrey, Notts, Kent and Middlesex.

The team to meet Los Angeles on Monday next in the fourth of the Dudley cricket trophy matches, will be chosen from the following Santa Monica players: C. C. Le Bas, captain; H. Justice, H. Little, W. Hunt, H. W. Walker, A. R. Mitchell, C. Simmonds, G. Young, E. P. Rock, F. E. Lee, P. J. Dudley, T. Hunt and C. R. Robertson.

The cabin will be of mahogany, finished bright. The cockpit is large and comfortable. The yacht will steer with a tiller.

Below decks the boat will be very handsomely finished. The cabin is entered from the cockpit, and is quite spacious for a boat of this size. There will be four full size transoms, two on each side, which will be used as berths at night. A folding table will occupy the center of the main cabin. Forward on the starboard side will be a built-in chest of drawers while on the port side the toilet room is located and there is a passage to the galley under the forward deck. Water tanks will be put in under the cockpit floor and an icebox built in, in the galley. The yacht will be able to carry water and stores for a long cruise, and in fact she will have unusually good accommodations for a vessel of her size.

She will be given the regular yawl rig, with double headsails. This latter feature is especially valuable on a boat intended for offshore cruising and racing as the forestay leads to the stem of the boat and the danger of being dismasted is reduced to a minimum. According to the plans the new boat will spread 1191 square feet of canvas. This is quite a heavy rig for a boat of her dimensions but she promises to be a very powerful boat and should carry her sail well.

When launched she will be kept in the water and in commission all winter to get her thoroughly tried out and tuned up for the races next season. She is designed especially to race with the yawls of the South Coast club, and other clubs, as it is hoped a yawl class can be formed next season, and Designer Muller believes the new boat will be able to take the measure of any yawl in local waters. The building of this boat, however, insures fine sport with the yawls, and local yachtsmen are eagerly looking forward to the time when the new racer can be tried out.

YACHTS SAIL FOR ISTHMUS.

SOUTH COAST CLUB MEMBERS ON STAG CRUISE.

Fifteen Boats Started Yesterday for Catalina Island, Expecting to Come Home on Tuesday—Start Was Free-for-All, but Several Races Were on After Passing Breakwater.

The anchorage of the South Coast Yacht Club, off the clubhouse in the outer harbor at San Pedro, presented an unusually lively appearance yesterday morning. The amateur tars were working hard but they were as happy as larks. All were busy getting stores and duffle aboard their respective yachts in preparation for the annual cruise to the Isthmus and Avalon which started yesterday.

"Togo," caretaker of the club and captain of the club launch, had a busy time of it taking yachtsmen and their guests out to the boats riding at anchor in the bay, while dingys loaded to the rail bobbed about on the little waves and wended their slow way to the various yachts. The scene was typical and one beloved by yachtsmen.

When the skippers and crews had made everything fast and shipshape a fine wholesail breeze had come in from the southwest and a grand sail to the Isthmus was assured. Sail was made and moorings slipped and heeling well over, the yachts stood out past the end of the breakwater and then laid their courses for the Isthmus.

The yachts started at the pleasure of the skippers. Sometimes several boats rounded the end of the breakwater together and immediately an impromptu race for the little harbor on Catalina Island began. Outside the boats found plenty of wind, and with all sail set were soon hull down out in the channel. Fifteen yachts sailed out of San Pedro Harbor to rendezvous at the Isthmus and it is expected several more will leave for the island today.

OFF FOR OLD BALDY.

Reinwald Expects to Climb Two Mountains in Two Days for Southern Record.

Paul Reinwald, the Austrian mountain climber, started yesterday afternoon on a strenuous ascent of Greyback and Mt. San Bernardino, both of which he expects to scale by tomorrow morning.

Equipped with a blanket, camera and provisions for three days, the sturdy walker left the city on the afternoon train for Redlands yesterday afternoon and took stage to Forrest Home at the foot of the trail to Greyback.

Reinwald expected to climb the greater part of the night and calculated to reach the summit at sunrise. He will descend Greyback this afternoon to the 5000-foot level, and make camp till evening, beginning the final descent and climb to Mt. San Bernardino peak tonight, and is scheduled to mount the second peak at sunrise tomorrow morning.

Reinwald wore light canvas top boots with hobnail soles, and is provided with spikes which are strapped to the insted. The entire outfit weighed forty pounds, but this burden is not expected to greatly handicap the scaler.

It looks right. It runs right. It is right. Every owner will tell you so! This little car has made good. More Buick Runabouts sold in Southern California than any other car made. Buick factory is turning out fifty Buick Runabouts each day. Of all these Runabouts sold by us during the past six months the buyers have not been called on to replace even as much as a broken spring. Owners have made them into Touring Cars and Tourabouts with tops and glass fronts and have made trips to the Yosemite and San Francisco, carrying four passengers and baggage without delay or inconvenience. THE WHISTLE!

TO PLAY FIRST GAME TOMORROW.

CALIFORNIA FRESHMEN TO MEET THE BARBARIANS.

Southern California Athletes to Be Prominent in This Season's Athletics at the State School—Gabriel Considered a Star—Others Also Begin to Shine.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, Sept. 4.—Another week of hard Rugby practice has been put in by the freshman football squad, and the men have sufficiently mastered the rudiments of the game so that the coaches feel they will at least hold their own in the first game of the season with the Barbarians on Monday. For the last three evenings Schaeffer has picked the two strongest teams from the squad and has pitted them against one another.

The impromptu matches have showed up some strong material and fine work since the coach told the "babies" that the team scoring the most points would be the one to start off the season against the Barbarians. The other squad will be played against the Olympics on Wednesday, while the men not on either team will also be given a chance to substitute.

From present appearances, the backfield on the freshman team will be stronger than the speedy backfield of the 1911 team of last year, while the scrum will be weaker. There are not the men of the size and strength of Jordan and Munn to bolster up the forwards. However, there are several huskies in line for positions, and the forwards will put up a good fight.

For the first time in many seasons, Southern Californians are playing a prominent part in the freshman class, which numbers nearly 800, and several of the men from the South have an excellent chance of making good in football. Probably the man who is most noticed and who will have a good chance at 'varsity honors, is Gabriel of Pasadena, Throop's old football captain and track man. Wonderfully fast and clever, the Pasadena man is a good punter and tackler, and has all the earmarks of making the finest kind of a Rugby back. For the present he is being played at five-eighths.

Powers of Los Angeles High is another man who is showing up well, while three of Pomona High School Rugby team of last year are doing good work. Evans is playing his prep position of three-quarter, while Carpenter and Armstrong are after scrum places. Meserve, the giant tackle from Harvard School, seems to have an excellent chance of being chosen as lock. He is one of the strongest men out. Otis, Harvard's right end, is in college, but, owing to the fact that he is jurt recovering from a broken ankle, is unable to play.

While the freshmen have been mastering the rudiments of the game, the 'varsity men have been regaining their "wind" and working out the stiffness accumulated during the summer vacation. This last week, Dr. Taylor has put them through an hour's work of running, passing, dribbling and kicking. This coming week the length of their practice will be increased, and the first scrum will be formed. All the old men but Budelman, Cerf and H. Johns have been out in suits this week, and these men will be out for the first practice of next week.

The first week has made it apparent that there is going to be the hardest kind of a fight for positions on the 'varsity, and it is a good bet that some of the veterans will be on the sidelines this year instead of on the field when the whistle blows for the big game. Paul of Hollywood is one of the men who was kept out of the big match last year by an injury. He stands a very good chance of playing one three-quarter, provided he is not hurt in some way. Ostrander is another man who has been out for football for three years, and has always suffered injury. This is his fourth year, and he has a good chance of getting into the scrum, provided his hoodoo does not overcome him. He will be remembered in the South as the California fullback in the California-Pomona Rugby match two seasons ago at Fiesta Park.

Manager Merritt has arranged an extensive schedule, which commences with freshman games on September 7 against the Barbarians, and September 9 against the Olympic Club. From the 9th until the 19th there will be a freshman game every Wednesday and Saturday, against either the 'varsity or some outside team. September 19 will open the 'varsity season, with the Olympic Club as the opposing team. September 26 comes a game with the Barbarians; October 3, the Olympics and October 10, the Barbarians. October 17 is the annual intercollegiate freshman game at Stanford, while October 28 and October 31 have been arranged as the dates of the annual international matches with Vancouver. The annual game with the University of Nevada is scheduled for November 10, and on November 17 comes the big game with Stanford on California Field. The Wednesdays during the 'varsity season until October 17 will be filled with freshman games. October 24 has been left open for a possible game with the Los Angeles Castaways, or else the final game in the series with the Olympics and the Barbarians.

While the football men have been hard at work on California Field, "Walt" Smith, 'varsity third baseman, has been directing the fall practice of forty men on South Diamond, in the absence of Capt. Myers. He has been devoting the time to trying out batteries and to teaching the men the fundamental rules of batting. Smith was one of the best stickers on the nine last year, and is getting good results out of his pupils. No games have as yet been scheduled for this fall, but several practice games will undoubtedly be played before fall training ends.

The basketball men are busy with preparations for the coming season, and are working to secure intercollegiate matches with Stanford. H. P. Cortelyou of Los Angeles, 'varsity captain, has been directing the practice.

SHOOTING AT SEAGIRT.

New York Regiment Wins the Old Guard Match—Other Individual Prizes.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SEAGIRT (N. J.) Sept. 5.—Ideal conditions for shooting prevailed today, the second day of the big Seagirt tournament. One of the most important events of the tournament, the interstate regimental team match, for the costly trophy presented by United States Senator Priggs of New Jersey, was inaugurated today. It was open to teams of six men each from the army, navy, Marine Corps, military and naval academies and National Guard.

Each man fired ten shorts at 200, 600 and 1000 yards. In addition to the trophy, the winning team will receive $50 and medals for the members.

At the conclusion of the second stage, the 600 yards, the four leaders were: Marine Corps, first team, 539; Seventh New York, first team, 527; Twelfth New York, 525; Marine Corps, second team, 523.

Off-hand match, an individual competition in which there were forty-seven competitors, was won by Sergt. Plund, Marine Corps, with a total of 47, out of a possible 50.

The Seventh Regiment, New York, won the Old Guard match, with a score of 234.

AERONAUTICS

Aëronef is a French general term for aëronautic apparatus embraced under the head of "helicopters," "aëroplanes" and "ornithopters."

Now that the Baldwin dirigible balloon has been accepted, government officials are directing attention toward getting from Congress as large an appropriation as possible, not less than $100,000 to buy a fleet of dirigible airships.

M. Francisco Antonetti has made a gift to the Aëro Club of France of $200 for prizes to be awarded to pilots who are members of the Aëro Club of France and who shall steer balloons of the first class in a distance competition without landing.

With the exception of the third Belgian pilot, the aëronauts who will compete in the international balloon contest, which starts from Berlin in October, have been chosen. More than sixty balloons, large and small, are now expected to start.

France is to possess a fourth military airship, the "Libertie," the construction of which will soon be started. The length of the gas bag is to be 67 meters and it will be propelled by a 90-horse-power motor. The French aërial fleet at present consists of the Lebaudy, Ville de Paris and Republique.

Believing that this country surpasses all others in the manufacture of balloons, A. Holland Forbes, one of the American competitors for the Coupe International des Aëronautes, in Berlin, on October 10, has had the big globe which he will use constructed in the United States. Mr. Forbes's "The Conqueror" will be the only American made balloon in the race.

Preliminary steps have been taken for the formation of an Aëro Club in Washington. A committee of four, Brig.-Gen. Allen, Augustus Post, secretary of the Aëro Club; Dr. Zahm of the Catholic University of America, and a newspaper man, have been appointed to form the club.

Crown Prince Frederick William has become one of the most ardent aëronauts in Germany as a result of his ascension in a military dirigible machine.

In the opinion of Lieut. F. S. Lahm, mistakes made by the management of Henry Farman's recent exhibition in the United States were responsible for the financial failure. He cannot understand why the American syndicate did not choose a western city for some preliminary flights instead of the neighborhood of New York.

What might be called an all Italian dirigible balloon of the capacity of 2500 meters, is being built for the Italian army, all parts havi [illegible] made in Italy.

A Real Automobile Compares With the Best

These cars are not thrown together in 10,000 lots like so many washing machines. They are real motor cars of which the Olds Motor Works is proud. The Oldsmobile Company backs up this $2000 automobile.

ARE YOU CONTEMPLATING THE PURCHASE OF A MOTOR CAR?

If so you should know the difference between a good machine and an inferior one. Compare carefully our specifications with those of the $1500 cars being advertised. Then compare the cars themselves and the wise purchaser will readily see that the Oldsmobile is worth the difference.

SPECIFICATIONS

Horse power—35. Type—4-cylinder, cast in pairs. Wheels and Tires—32x4. | Transmission—Selective Type. Springs—Front 36x2¼, rear 52x2¼. Wheel base—107 in.
Cylinders—Bore 4½; stroke 4¾ (a real engine).

SEE THIS CAR!

No cheap automobile. No experiment. The same identical engine, frame, axles and springs that were used in the 1907 and 1908 touring cars.

NOT LIKE THEM—BUT IDENTICALLY THE SAME.

The fact that the Oldsmobile has been such an unqualified success in 1907 and 1908 is absolute proof that this is a good, high-grade motor car.

FURTHERMORE

For appearances it surpasses anything in its class that has ever been marketed in America. It is larger, roomier, better finished and has more style and power than any $2000 car ever made.

You Can Rely on the Healthfulness and Purity of

LILY MILK

Statistics prove that tens of thousands of lives (particularly those young children) are lost yearly in the United States through the medium of germ infected UNSTERILIZED milk.

LILY MILK is the very essence of milk purity. It is taken from the healthiest of cows under the most hygienic conditions. To absolutely insure its purity it is thoroughly sterilized, thereby eliminating even the remotest possibility of infection.

Can YOU—from a simple health standpoint, afford to use any other milk than LILY MILK?

Thousands are using it exclusively.

It pays to be on the safe side.

igions are things, it is true, but a man's formal be- often little concerned with his real thoughts. are often to thoughts no more than clothes to a In fact, they are merely the clothes to our ts and often become not only out of date, but worn and threadbare.

that is that the abiding-place of religion and vir- the human heart, not the head. It is well for us . Men's hearts are much better than their heads, many men's lives are better than their creeds. To what a man is one would better seek the opinion of his neighbors than follow him to church to hear him recite his formula of belief.

If you were to read the writings of Cotton Mather where his logical faculties are in play and he is following out the dogmas of the Puritan creed, you would little wonder that the style of his religion has become obsolete. Mather has a heart made of tough integuments, about as devoid of the milk of human kindness as his head. But he was not typical of the Pilgrim Fathers. He was not their type, for the reason that his head and heart worked in harmony along the path of his religious dogmas and theirs did not. If all were of this type, New England would not have given the world John Alden, Priscilla Mullen, or any such people as Emerson, Holmes, Hawthorne, Longfellow or Whittier. These men were the offspring of the men and women of the Mayflower, but inherited their hearts with all the charity and love the true religion of Christ teaches, not the creed wrought out by John Calvin, who had Servetus burned at the stake.

An incident has taken place in recent days in which this thought has had concrete illustration, and which is the more interesting because it comes home to ourselves.

The incident referred to is the much lamented death of Mrs. Esther Hellman, wife of I. W. Hellman, the banker so long and well known in Los Angeles. The death took place in San Francisco, where the family has lived for some years. But their home was in Los Angeles for nearly forty years, and no resident of the city was better known nor more highly esteemed than this lady who has now gone from these scenes forever.

The daily press has given the skeleton of the career of the deceased, but the facts stated only served to call up memories of a character so sweet, a soul so noble, a heart so tender, a career so full of good deeds, that no words can express them. Mrs. Hellman was born to wealth, luxury and refinement, and was so educated that her talents had fullest sway and her accomplishments were varied and great. Her arrival in Los Angeles was at a time when this was a frontier town, society largely of crude materials, and the luxuries and refinements of life somewhat scant. The high culture of this young woman could not but proclaim itself amid any surroundings; but the impression was toned down and made harmonious with their surroundings by the innate nobility of her character, by the sweetness of her disposition, the large charity of her heart, and the open-handed measure of her liberality in all instances where there was a demand made upon her for any purpose, cause or person in any way worthy of help.

Mrs. Hellman set the highest example to her own sex in her devotion to husband and children, in the performance of every duty imposed upon her as wife and mother. Her home was to her a kingdom, and there she ruled, as gentle a queen as ever husband adored or child obeyed. And at the same time she always had time for all the reasonable requirements of society, where she shone as a star with a graciousness that charmed all who came within her sphere of influence.

As the years passed and all the elements of life expanded here, the Hellmans became prosperous and rose to the highest place in business and financial circles. But great wealth never produced the least effect in the life of this good woman except in enabling her to be more helpful to those in need, and more gracious and charming among her friends.

Such was this noble woman who has passed from among us and is now where flattery cannot "soothe the dull cold ear of death." Such is the verdict her many, many friends would render. Who shall ask what creed she recited, what prayers she said, at what shrine she worshiped? "The fear of God is the beginning of wisdom," and that wholesome fear kept her feet from childhood to the tomb in as straight and narrow a path as human feet could walk in. She loved her neighbor and her God, and the highest authority tells us that is the "law and the prophets." She fulfilled the requirements to "do justly, love mercy, and walk humbly with God," and no creed should demand more.

"No further seek her merits to disclose" by an attempt to analyze her mind for dogmas. That is not the seat of virtue, excellence and religion. Her heart was pure, her sympathies were warm, her charity was broad, her liberality without bounds. Her husband honored her, her children rise up and call her blessed, her friends are inconsolable at her loss, and we may feel sure that as she closed her eyes in the final sleep flights of angels winged her to her rest.

The Wonders of Spiritual Magic.

In Harper's Weekly for August 15 Charles Johnston writes of Eusapia Paladino, the Italian "medium," and the remarkable phenomena which she seems able to evoke. "Eight seances were held," he writes, "at which the observers saw apparitions of hands and arms, veiled heads, faces; pitchers of water were carried through the air without being spilled, blows and slaps were given to those present by invisible hands, and the table was lifted in the air as though it floated in water. All this was considered inconclusive. But it was noted that each of these phenomena was accompanied by spasmodic movements of the medium's body or hands, synchronizing absolutely with the blows or raps, and so forth. Thus a small table was moved out of the cabinet through the curtains and some distance over the floor where all present could plainly see that it was being propelled by no visible power, but exactly corresponding to the jerky and irregular movements of its progress were spasmodic muscular contractions of the medium's body as though she were actually moving it with her physical hands and feet."

THOUGHTS ON RELIGION.

By a Layman.

EXPERIENCES OF LIFE.—The utility of a face is greater than the beauty of a theory. Unless a theory can be practically applied in every-day affairs it remains inactive in the realm of dreams and does not generally benefit humanity.

Life is the great teacher and our effort should be to develop sufficient wisdom to profit by the experiences which through a wise provision of nature we are called upon to undergo. The school of life is governed by the same fundamental principles which underlie our progressive institutions of learning. We are like children and as we enter the school of experience we are as ignorant of spiritual things as the child in the A B C class is ignorant of the higher mathematics, and in order to attain to the higher knowledge we must proceed slowly step by step. In order to make greater progress we receive instructions from a teacher in each advancing grade, and if we learn our lessons well we are advanced to a still higher grade under the instruction of a more competent teacher. As we reach the fourth and fifth grades our minds commence to expand and we become dimly conscious of a comprehensive grasp of the relation of things one to another. Soon we are competent to work out intricate problems by ourselves; but the teacher is there to assist us, when we vainly try to solve knotty problems the truth of which eludes us. We must go through the actual preliminary work and struggle, however, before we can hope to get a glimpse of the beauties of truth. The teacher cannot do this for us. His province is to simply direct us in the right path, and assist us over the rough places by virtue of the knowledge he has gained through similar experiences. Our text-books are full of problems and worked-out answers for our guidance; but to simply know this fact without individually working out these problems for ourselves renders us incompetent when called upon to meet the emergencies of life. Those who have worked out the problems profit by their experience and knowledge gained, and slowly emerge into the promised realm of spiritual light and freedom. Those who are heedless, idle and content to remain in ignorance fall back to the foot of the class and continue in the realm of darkness, and slavish captivity until they individually desire for more knowledge, and earnestly strive to overcome the selfish obstacles to their advancement.

All have entered the life school of experience and knowledge for a purpose. Some are aware of that purpose through spiritual struggles and growth, while others are not. Those who are, strive to attune themselves in harmony with the unity, oneness and singleness of God, and every experience they are called upon to meet has a meaning for them. When they have fully grasped this meaning they welcome other experiences in the faith and assurance that they are consciously and lovingly working out their destiny, which is to know God. Those who are not conscious of the purpose of life will continue to squirm and struggle, and to selfishly grasp after petty material things; and in their ignorance they suffer. There is no help for it, however, as ignorance is visited as sharply as wilful disobedience, and incompacity meets with the same punishment as crime. Each one must work out his own spiritual salvation whether he wants to or not, and it would seem that it is only through suffering that the majority of us are awakened to a spiritual consciousness, which leads us out of the mires and dark valleys of life to the spiritual foothills where we can rest and revivify our flagging spirits through glimpses of the glorious spiritual world beyond, which we can only enter when we are thoroughly purged and purified from the lust and selfishness of our lower natures.

In our ignorant struggles we sometimes blaspheme, and selfishly decry against the loving Father of humanity for the many trials we are called upon to endure. We often pray to escape from these tribulations, and our prayers are continually burdened with selfish desires and childishly petty favors. We also sometimes rail against God for not granting these favors in accordance with the spirit of our petitions. God in His infinite mercy and wisdom, however, knows what is best for each one of us, and when we unselfishly and earnestly pray for knowledge, faith and love, lo and behold! the scales fall from our eyes and we begin to see God in all His radiance of glory, love and justice, and we then begin to realize the eternal fitness of all things.

As we continue to bring God down into our hearts we further realize that from the beginning of time He has lovingly sent divine messengers to earth at different intervals to teach us by precept and example the true way to a knowledge of God and His glorious spiritual realm. These messengers have lived in the flesh under the same natural laws as other men, and their earthly sufferings have been greater than any we have been called upon to endure. They have lovingly and faithfully performed their mission and have left behind them divine laws and ordinances for our guidance. They are the great spiritual masters, and when we intelligently follow their teachings we are mightily helped in solving life's complex problems. When we go contrary to them we flounder and continue to suffer through ignorance.

Minerals in Africa. By Frank G. Carpenter.

MOUNTAINS OF COPPER.

ENORMOUS DEPOSITS ON THE CONGO-ZAMBESI WATERSHED.

From Our Own Correspondent.

BROKEN HILL (N. W. Rhodesia.)—Have you heard of the mountains of copper which are now being developed just above here, in the heart of Central Africa? They cover a territory bigger than the State of Ohio, and they consist of two great belts 200 miles long. So far more than 100 copper mines have been discovered, and the mining engineers say that there are already more than 2,000,000 tons of copper in sight. They estimate the value of the ore exposed at over $1,000,000,000. In the same regions there are tin mines running through a belt of more than 150 miles. The tin is high grade, carrying the value of $120 to the ton, and that in sight is estimated at $9,000,000. In addition to this there are gold mines there which are now yielding 1000 ounces a month, and the gold carries platinum and palladium of high grade.

The Tanganyika Concession.

These wonderful deposits are in what is known as the Tanganyika concession, a tract of country in the Congo Free State just across the Rhodesian border. They belong to the King of Belgium and a syndicate of English capitalists, led by Robert Williams, who was practically the discoverer of the mines and who organized the company eight or nine years ago. Mr. Williams became interested in the mines of Northern Rhodesia, and he got from Cecil Rhodes the right to locate 1000 mining claims with the proviso that the Chartered Company of British South Africa was to be entitled to 35 per cent. of all the minerals found. Mr. Rhodes was induced to give the concession because he wanted a steamboat on Lake Tanganyika to enable him to push his Cape-to-Cairo railroad scheme, and I am told that Mr. Williams furnished the boat. Among the first deposits discovered were those of the Kinshanshi copper mines, in Rhodesia, not far from the Belgian border. These have already been developed to the depth of 400 feet, and it has been decided to erect a smelter there which in about two years will be yielding several million dollars per annum.

Lead miners at Broken Hill.

Quarrying copper in the BelgianKong

In prospecting about Kinshanshi, Mr. Williams got the idea that there might be important finds over the border. He took his mining engineers and went on into the Congo Free State and there found these enormous deposits which promise to revolutionize the copper markets of the world. He then went back to London and formed his syndicate. A concession was gotten from King Leopold by offering him and certain Belgian capitalists 55 per cent. of the stock. Since then the mines have been partially surveyed and a railroad is now building which will connect them with the Atlantic in Portuguese West Africa. The capital stock is only $4,000,000, but the possibilities of the company are far beyond those of any other of the great mining syndicates.

A Continent Roofed With Copper.

These mighty deposits form a copper roof to the lower part of the African continent. They lie on the height of land between the Congo and the Zambesi, and in that correspond to the enormous mineral deposits on the height of land of our continent. The great ridge of North America comes to its top just above Lake Superior. A little farther north the ground begins to fall toward Hudson Bay. On that ridge are the nickel mines of Sudbury, containing the greatest bodies of that metal known to the world. A little further east are the immense silver deposits of cobalt, the metal lying in veins on the very top of the rocks and so close to the surface that you can polish it with your heel as you walk over it. Below on both sides of Lake Superior are the enormous deposits of iron belonging to our steel trust, and also the famous Calumet and Hecla copper mines, which were for a long time the richest of their kind in the world.

A similar wealth of minerals exists on this great ridge of South Africa. Northern Rhodesia is peppered with copper and iron. Here at Broken Hill are hills of lead and zinc which I describe further on in this letter, and the syndicate which owns them has found 6000 different deposits of valuable minerals in this colony. The ore seems to grow richer and more abundant near the top of the ridge, and over in the Congo possessions the whole country near the border is highly mineralized. I am told that the natives there have been mining copper for generations past. They have smelted the ore and have wrought from it their hoes, spears and axes. Some of their implements made by the natives are shown here. Both handles and blades are made of solid copper. I have a copper axe before me as I write, and a copper hoe stands by my side.

On the Congo watershed the copper lies right on the top of the ground. The mines can be worked like quarries, and they will probably be handled with steam shovels when the railroad from Portuguese West Africa is finished. The ore used by the natives comes from little holes which have been dug in the mountains. They have their own furnaces and do much of their smelting with charcoal. One of the chiefs has a large number of men and women at work, and is producing a number of tons of copper a year.

Speaking of the copper being on the height of land, while I was at Khartoum in the Egyptian Soudan, I learned that there are rich mineral deposits on the ridge which forms the watershed of the Congo and the Nile, and it may be that a wealth of copper and iron exists there.

Copper, Gold, Tin and Iron.

So far the minerals found on the Zambesi-Congo ridge are copper, gold, tin and iron. There are large deposits of stream and quartz tin. At Bulawayo I was shown tin nuggets the size of walnuts which came from the Congo Free State, and also bars of pure tin which had been smelted there. At the present time only the smallest of furnaces can be used, as the only motive power is men, and the pieces of machinery must be regulated by what two men can carry. It will be impossible to do much with the mines before the railroads are constructed. The most of the gold which has so far been taken out comes from placer deposits. The grains from dust to nuggets the size of one's finger, and th are absolutely pure. Something like $300,000 worth been washed out.

As to the copper, it is of a high grade. The aver is from 13 to 15 per cent. pure, and there is one pl at Katanga where the ore runs as high as 35 per ce copper, and there is said to be any amount of it wh runs 20 per cent.

The ore at the Rio Tinto mine, which is the riches Europe, contains only about 3 per cent. of copper; a it is said that this African ore, even if it ran as low 6 per cent., would, notwithstanding the great cos transportation and treatment, yield a profit where copper sells over $200 per ton. So far all estim made as to the value of the copper here take into count only that above water level, and if half the st ments are true the deposits must be worth fa than any others on the globe.

New Trans-African Railroad.

The King of Belgium and his associates of this cate are now building a railroad from Portugues Africa across the continent to these mines. Th will be about 1200 miles long, and less than 200 m it are already constructed. It begins at Lobito Bay Benguella, in about the center of the province of and runs through the lowlands a short distance, ing the hills. The grades go up almost a mile first 200, and the road will pass over three ra mountains before it gets to the African plateau. cost altogether $35,000,000 or $40,000,000, but it is mated that it will annually carry minerals of the of $50,000,000, in addition to its local traffic, whi probably be considerable.

Lobito Bay, where the road starts, has a wide an harbor. There is already quite a town there. Th road has its offices, and there are warehouses, rants and a hotel. The company has erected a It will build steel piers, and will probably mak place one of the chief ports of entrance for West rica. Half a dozen different lines of steamsh already calling there, and the tonnage entered h bled within the past year. The road so far built a good business. When it is completed there wil ably be an extension to the Cape to Cairo road, at Tanganyika, will have its connection with th which the Germans are now building from Da across German East Africa to Ujiji, so that one will be able to go across the continent from west to east by steam.

Long before this Lobito road is completed, these copper mines will probably be connected with Broken Hill by a branch of the Cape-to-Cairo road, and the first ore will be shipped out over that road by way of Cape Town or Beira. The Cape to Cairo syndicate has already surveyed the line of track from Broken Hill to Mabaya, an important point on the Congo frontier. This is 200 miles from Broken Hill, and the understanding is that the copper syndicate will continue the line from there through the copper belt to Ruwe.

Prospecting in Rhodesia.

The Rhodesia Copper Company, which operates the Broken Hill mines, has a large number of properties scattered here and there over this part of the world. Not long ago it had 6000 claims registered, and these were mostly lead, copper and zinc. There is plenty of iron about here, and many of the streams carry some gold. Broken Hill has several mining engineers and a number of prospectors.

Prospecting in Rhodesia is far different from the same business in our country. Our mineral regions are usually broken and mountainous. In Northern Rhodesia the country is comparatively level and there are but few outcroppings. From December to May the land is covered with grass, which reaches so high that a man riding on horseback through it cannot be seen at a distance of 100 feet. This is in the wet season, when it rains so heavily that it is impossible to travel rapidly or to examine the surface of the ground. It is only when the rains are over that the prospecting begins. The grass, which is soon parched and dry, is then fired, and the flames sweep over the country burning everything close to the ground. The fire scorches the bushes and trees and makes the earth black. It thus exposes any outcroppings or rocks and enables the prospectors to see the various formations. The streams are first panned, and any materials found are traced to the mother lodé.

The Broken Hill Mines.

Take, for instance, these great mineral deposits at the end of the Cape to Cairo road. They lie right out on the prairie. The land is almost dead level, and with the exception of a few hills that run up to a height of less than 100 feet there is no sign of minerals. The most of these hills are so low that they cannot be seen at a great distance, and they are usually covered with grass. They rise right up out of the plain like mounds, each independent of the other. There are seven in sight of Broken Hill, and they all consist of great bodies of zinc and lead. Take hill No. 1, over which I have just gone with the miners. It has at the base a diameter of about 300 feet, and it rises to the height of a four-story house. It is pear-shaped, rather than round, with the lower half of the pear below the surface. This mighty pear is composed of nothing but lead and zinc ore. Two cross-cuts or tunnels have been run through it on a level with the plain, and there is nothing but lead or zinc all the way. The lead in the main tunnel is 58 per cent. pure, and the zinc runs over 8 per cent., the whole containing high values throughout. By means of a diamond drill the mine has been tested for 100 feet below the surface, and the drill is still in the ore. Borings in the plain two miles to the southeast and northwest have disclosed ore equally rich.

A Little Zinc Mountain.

After leaving the hill I went with Mr. Donald, the mine manager, to another about a half-mile distant over the plain. This is known as hill No. 2. It is ninety feet high, containing about four times as much ore above the surface as the hill I have mentioned. Its ore is almost altogether zinc, the main body containing 35 or 40 per cent. of that metal. A wide vein or reef takes up the greatest part of the hill, and the remainder is composed of leachings from this body. Ten thousand tons of ore have already been taken out of the pockets near the reef; and it is calculated that the main body has more than 400,000 tons of zinc, and that there are 300,000 tons more above the water level, which occurs at sixteen feet below the surface.

In addition to these two hills there are five others—all of them mighty nuggets of lead or zinc rising above the surface of the plains. Indeed, the managers of the mines tell me they have enough ore in sight to keep them busy for five years if they were smelting at the rate of 100 tons per day.

Among the Miners.

I have spent some time here going about among the native miners. There are 600 at work under the charge of twenty-two white foremen. The natives are Bantu negroes from the tribes of the vicinity. They are small in stature, but they are said to be good workmen, and they furnish the mineral regions with a steady supply of cheap labor. The wages which are now paid are only 8 cents per day, to which must be added the cost of food and shelter, bringing the labor charge for each miner up to 25 cents.

These natives have a village of their own some distance from the European quarter. It consists of a hundred or so clay huts running around a court of five acres. Each hut accommodates five or six natives, and not a few of them have their wives with them. Their food is corn meal, each man being allowed three pounds per day. The meal is made from Kaffir corn and it is ground by a portable engine right at the mines.

A White Settlement in Mid-Africa.

As to the white officials and their assistants, they live quite comfortably, away off here in the heart of the black continent. Their town is right in the wilds, and a half-day's ride will give them almost any kind of big game. They have comfortable bungalows built of brick and native huts made of limbs chinked with clay from the white ant hills near-by. They are thatched with straw. I understand that these native huts are more comfortable than the bungalows. They have only holes for windows, so that the air can always blow through. Their roofs are cone-shaped and so thick that the sun cannot penetrate them. They rise fifteen feet above the walls and extend out over them so that there is no danger of the rains coming in. The bungalows have roofs of galvanized iron, which make them hot at mid-day.

Many of the native huts are equipped with hammocks, beds and easy chairs. Some of them have other little huts near-by, which serve as kitchens and as the homes of the black servants. Comparatively few of the miners board at the hotel. Several have their wives with them, but they are housed in the bungalows, which are surrounded by gardens. I understand that the climate is healthy and that one can live quite as well here as in the mining regions further south.

The Hotel Clerk.

What He Says of West Pointers and Modern Progress.

By a Special Contributor.

"WOT did the main guys do with them young fellers up to the Point that got fired out for hazin'?" inquired the House Detective of the St. Reckless.

"I don't think it's been settled yet," answered the Hotel Clerk. "At last accounts nothing had happened since Teddy said Loeb and Wright were liars if they said he said what he said and then it was just like what he said. The noble young cadets who'd made tobasco sauce and unstewed prunes such popular articles of diet among their fellow-students were still hanging around waiting to be reinstated, and in the meantime thinking up a few new things to brighten up the tiresome menu of the plebes, such as raw oysters with sugar and cream on 'em. And down at the edge of the reservation was a promising brood of red ants that looked as if they'd probably be ripe enough to pick by early fall."

"D'ye s'pose the lads'll git back finally?" asked the House Detective.

"They will if the best traditions of the academy are to be preserved," said the Hotel Clerk. "From what I've been able to gather it's deemed necessary to feed the future comanders-in-chief of the land forces of the United States large quantities of insalubrious articles while they're acquiring their military education, if any such there be, so they'll wear the proper look on their haughty young faces after they've graduated and are leading the german at an army-post hop on almost half as much salary as a union paper hanger gets. Every time I see a young second lieutenant with a twenty-two-inch waist and a Harrison Fisher figure going around, bent back at an angle of 45 degrees and gazing at mere civilians with an expression of countenance as if he'd eaten something that hadn't agreed with him and never would, I feel certain in my mind that here's one who took the full course at the Point instead of being appointed from civil life on the strength of the fact that his father stood in with a Senator and he couldn't earn a living in a store.

"At the same time, I've got a sneaking notion that they did things different in the old days, when some of the persons who were subsequently mentioned in connection with the big war were getting their training. Back yonder in 1849 or thereabouts if any ingenious young upper-classman had urged William Tecumseh Sherman to swallow a couple of gallons of the Hudson River, garnished with chewing tobacco and cooking soda, and then to stand on his head and recite 'Minniehaha, Laughing Water' with the proper feeling and emphasis, I'll bet you that William T. would not only have played horse with him, but he'd a-played a whole troupe of performing horses with him, and a trick mule or two, and maybe a cute spotted pony. In my mind's eye I have a picture of the party who subsequently marched through Georgia spreading that upper classman out nice and flat like one of those deep-sea waffles known as a flounder, and then, not caring for him the way he looked as a salt-water buckwheat cake, rolling him together even as a scroll, and tying his insteps around his forehead in a true-love knot and otherwise make him look like something that Frolicsome Fido, the fox terrier, had been playing with under the front steps.

"And I never recall having heard that Albert Sidney Johnston used to travel up and down the company street on his stomach like a poached egg at the request of another cadet who enjoyed the right to give the command on account of his parents having gotten married one year earlier than Albert Sidney's did. It would have taken Al, the Plebe, about three minutes, not more, to peel, core, pare, slice and eat him.

"In those ancient times Robert E. Lee and U. S. Grant and Simon Boliver Buckner and a few others whose names you may have caught in casual conversation, were putting the finishing touches on their graduation year by hiking out across the staked plains, getting themselves shot up with quartz, moss agate and plain flint arrow heads, and engaging in chance conflict every few minutes with passels of roan-colored strangers who were dressed principally in their own and other people's hair.

"Still at that I suppose these combinations of New Orleans molasses with gherkin pickles and English mustard for a light breakfast, and these brisk sorrel insects with six or more legs and pinchers like a pair of ice hooks, for the recreation hour on the campus, all go to make up a modern military education. It's like everything else in this age of progress. Fifteen or twenty years ago they say a young woman could go along very comfortably in the best society if she didn't have any Plimsoll marks on her front teeth and did her hair up at the customary intervals. The clothes she wore didn't make so very much difference so long as there were enough of them at one time. A young woman stepped from the school-girl stage into her chosen sphere in society without dropping her father at the bankruptcy court on the way. At least so I'm given to understand. But now it's different. A débutante who gets her start with less than $200,000 worth of portable equipment would feel considerable like a dominecker pullet in a parrot cage. If you believe the Sunday papers—and if you can't believe them, what in heaven's name can you believe?—the expense of launching an 18-year-old girl into the inside set is not quite as much as it costs for a defense of wealthy paranoiac in a murder case where the defendant has money in Pittsburg, but considerably more than the outlay for building a gunboat of the Dubuque type. I was reading here the other day about one of the biggest débuts of the coming fall. The young woman who's going to début will have more fittings than an armored cruiser. There was one incidental item of eighty pairs of shoes. You'd think there was a pronounced strain of centipede running through the family. There was also a picture of the fortunate young person wearing her principal or grand entry lid. You knew she was wearing it because you could distinctly see part of her under it. Judging by the picture she was one of those regular millionaire's daughters with the fashionable absence of expression that will be so much worn this year, but the hat was all to the French dressing, if I may use the term. It has a center pole and a hippodrome track around the outer rim and a superstructure and many other features.

"And you may have noticed some of these tender lamb stews with young vegetables that are being turned out by the colleges and allowed to vote just the same as if they were human beings. I wonder how many hard-worked fathers there are scattered along the eastern seaboard at this moment saving up to pay the college education of a fascinating lad whose crowning ambition in life is to sing tenor in a college glee club and smoke monogram cigarettes with the monogram side turned prominently toward the opposite side of the street.

"As for our leading murders, we're constantly adding modern improvements to them. Once upon a time when a hot-headed gentleman fell out with another gentleman over the proposition of wives, he didn't seek vengeance accompanied by a uniformed brass band and orchestra. Before the deed was done and quite often after it was done, he stepped around like one of those trained nurses with felt-soled slippers on in a sanatorium for nervous wrecks; and if he could catch the other fellow climbing over the back fence with his shoes in his hand so much the better. But at this time any husband of importance would scorn to destroy his foe without noise or excitement. The subdued way of fattening the homicide average is as old-fashioned as a marble mantel. Among the best families it's considered very, very de trow unless you seek out the gentleman against whom you feel a pique on a roof garden or at a yacht-club regatta or an Old Home week or some equally large social function and shoot the tar and other naval stores out of him with an automatic Maxim in the presence of a large crowd whose names will attract attention if printed well up near the top of the first column. No murder is a success any more unless you have an Among Those Present following along after your Dead and Wounded.

"Back in the times when the Rogers Brothers were in the statuary business instead of musical comedy, if we went to a vaudeville entertainment—only we didn't call it by that name then—we'd be satisfied with a sisters act, and a gifted party in pink tights with large knotted leg muscles doing things on the horizontal bar, and a juggler who didn't break more than half of the plates, and a couple of talented musicians who performed Oh-listen-to-the-mocking-bird-for-the-mocking-bird-is-singing-in-the-wildwood-sweet-hallie on the toothsome xylophone and then by dipping their finger tips in resin and rubbing them on the rims of a row of damp tumblers gave a lifelike and realistic imitation of the sound produced by dipping the fingers in resin and rubbing them on the rims of a row of damp tumblers. But this year we have to have everything that's too good or too bad for tragedy, comedy, the drama, the trained-animal show and the disrobing-room of the ladies' department of a Turkish bath, the theory being that anything we shouldn't stand for we'll sit through.

"We're just as progressive in the food line. Possibly out in the heart of the deep wood the peasantry may still consume food that's been done by hand, but in the great throbbing, hurried life of the teeming city we have no time for anything except the intensified methods of producing fodder for the human face.

"I'll bet it's been years, Larry, since you saw a home-grown pie. They run off our pies for us on a cylinder press, a huckleberry edition or a lemon-meringue edition or a sporting-extra custard, as the case may be; and the peculiar prison pallor common to all pies is imparted by means of talcum powder and a mechanical bleaching apparatus. You can always tell the difference by the underneath crust which tastes like the sweat-band of an old straw hat.

"So I guess all things considered, we ought to bear with those bad little boys that've been naughty up at West Point. They're only following the bent of a generation that is ever striving for the new and the unique and the progressive. And anyway, say what you please about our national military academy, but in recent years it's turned out some of the best hands at thinking up cotillion figures that the world has ever seen. Harry Lehr's got nothing on those lads when it comes to tactics."

"But s'pose a war wuz to break out," said the House Detective. "Where'd the army be with a lot of little wasp-waisted chaps running things?"

"The army'll do very well as long as so many husky enlisted men keep on rising from the ranks," said the Hotel Clerk, "and the West Pointers will come in handy for the war balloons. We'll be able to send such a lot of them along on one trip."

Small Party Nominees.

PERSONALITIES OF WOULD-BE RIVALS OF TAFT AND BRYAN.

By a Special Contributor.

THE small party Presidential candidates of this campaign present some strange contrasts. Besides Taft and Bryan, five other men have so far been nominated for the chief magistracy.

Probably the strangest nomination ever made within the scope of our entire political history is that of Martin R. Preston, just named for President by the Socialist Labor party, in spite of the fact that he is ten years below the constitutional age limit for that office and is now in the penitentiary commencing a twenty-five-year term for second-degree murder. Preston was born twenty-five years ago at Memphis, Tenn., and after receiving a common-school education, became an electric lineman. He was at Goldfield, Nev., during the great strike there, three years ago, and, being a union man, acted as a strike picket. While so engaged he shot and killed Anton Silva, a saloon-keeper, and after being tried and convicted of murder in the second degree was received at the Nevada State prison, Carson City, on May 29, 1907, to begin a twenty-five-year term. The Socialist Labor leader who placed his name in nomination at the recent convention of that party said that it made no difference whether Preston was below the constitutional age limit or not; that "if he is elected he will be seated," and that "constitutions are for the people and not the people for constitutions."

Can't Receive Votes Because a Felon.

But the convention by nominating him overlooked another deterrent—that Preston, being, in the eyes of the law, a felon, has not the rights of a citizen and could not be voted for legally even if his time in the penitentiary were served. The Socialist Laborites accept Preston in the same category of martyrdom to which Haywood, recently tried for complicity in the murder of Gov. Steunenburg, was elevated by their near-brethren, the Socialists proper. They claim that the strike picket, while acting as the protector of defenseless girls, enraged the restaurant-keeper, who was about to kill Preston, when the latter shot in self-defense. However, this may be, the jury thought otherwise.

"His conduct here has been exemplary. He is industrious and intelligent and has a good countenance," the warden of the penitentiary informs me in answer to my inquiry concerning this unusual candidate's life in prison. Perhaps "Morrie" Preston will make of himself another Jean Valjean. Let us hope so. If he makes good after surviving such a sentence he will perform a greater miracle than winning a Presidential race.

Another With Prison Record.

Another nominee with a prison record is Eugene Victor Debs, again named for the Presidency by the Socialists proper, as he was four years ago by the same party, and eight years ago by the "Social Democrats." Debs, who is now 53, was born in Terre Haute, Ind., where he still lives. After receiving a common-school education he became a locomotive fireman on the Terre Haute and Indianapolis Railroad when only 16, and continued to stoke the engines of that road until 19. Then he entered a wholesale grocery house, and there worked until 24, when, having interested himself in politics, he was elected City Clerk of Terre Haute, serving four years, and when 30 married and went to the Legislature. Having entered the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen while working on the road, he had remained active with that union, and when 25 had been elected grand secretary and treasurer, which position he held until 1893, the year of the World's Fair in Chicago, when he was chosen president of the American Railway Union. The year following the fair came the great railway strike in Chicago, when President Cleveland ordered out the Federal troops to protect the United States mails. It was during this bitter controversy and its incidental riots that Debs came into the limelight as manager of the strike. While it was in progress he was arrested first for conspiracy, but acquitted, and a second time for contempt of court for violating an injunction. On this latter charge he served the term in prison—six months—which has since held him a martyr in the eyes of a certain element of the population. He is a fiery orator, an agitator of the firebrand type.

Populist Candidate a Self-Made Man.

The Populist Presidential nominee, Thomas E. Watson, is a man of big caliber, and is known far more widely than is his party. He is of Quaker stock, and while one of Theodore Roosevelt's ancestors was revolutionary Governor of Georgia, Mr. Watson's ancestors at the same time sat in the revolutionary Legislature of the State. But the Civil War ruined his parents, and what little property they saved after that struggle was lost in the great panic of '73, when they were driven from the last of their Georgia plantations, between the Savannah and the Ogeechee. Tom, a red-haired, freckle-faced lad, had been receiving free tuition from a Baptist school, under the "poor and deserving" clause of the latter's endowment, but now that his parents were too poor to longer pay his board, he went out in the fields to work. Next he taught a country school, one of whose rules, which he has preserved and shown to me, was as follows:

"The said teacher shall not be allowed to correct no student in any way only by a switch, the skin not be cut and not to be abused otherwise." Other of the rules written by the trustees of this "Centrial Warrior District Accadamy" were: "All abusive language such as cursing and swearing is attually forbidden." "There shall no studant be allowed to carry conseald weppons." "There shall be no climbing of fences, restling or throwing rocks at each other alowed." "No stfudent is alowed to fight in school or on there way too or from school, nor no news to be carriade too or from school."

Was a Farm Laborer.

Between terms at this "Centrial Accadamy" Tom Watson worked as a farm laborer, and during sessions boarded with a farmer who lent him the money to buy his first law book, which he studied by the glare of this friend's pine-knot fire. In spite of these handicaps he was admitted to the bar at 19, and at 20 returned home and opened an office. He now had not a decent change of clothing to his back, but one of his former schoolmasters, R. H. Pearce, gave him his first lift by offering to trust him for a whole year's board.

The receipts of Tom Watson's first year as an attorney were $212, and the first $20 that came in he sent to his mother. The second year he reëstablished his parents, brothers and sisters, in one of the old family homes which had gone beneath the Sheri and from here, with his dinner in a kettle, three miles to office every morning, also back each afternoon. Before long he was 000 a year and had bought back several th acres of the ancestral estate. His political when but 24, was a fiery speech delivered on the ity side of a hot debate in a Democratic State tion. The frail, red-headed rustic lawyer was when he rose. At first he was greeted with before he had finished his audience cheered with and every one asked his name. Two years neighbors sent him to the Legislature, and he stumped for Cleveland and was a Democratic large.

Fought the Bag Trust.

Next he led a fight against the jute-bagging in reward for this the farmers elected him to C But after his election he came out as a Populist disgusted his Democratic friends, who, when he candidate again in 1892 and 1894, counted him claims, and deliberately gave the certificate of to his opponent. Steadfastly claiming these tions, he carried his contest to the House of R atives, but there lost. During his term in the H secured the first appropriation for rural mail ever passed by Congress, and in 1896, two y his final contest for a seat in the House, he w nated for Vice-President on the Populist ti Bryan. After that strenuous campaign he agai the Democrats of unfair treatment. Four yea Populists nominated him for President, and h an active campaign to revive the party, as h again this autumn, following his second nomi the highest office.

Life Work as Historian.

Mr. Watson's real life work, not comm after the campaign of 1896, has been the writ tory. In two years he produced his "Story of and two years later his "Life of Jefferson," wi years more his pen had produced his "Napol has been followed by another book on Jeffers a novel, "Bethany, a Story of the Old South" published four magazines—has two on the He has written poems and still plays the lace Putnam Reed once said that his slight flashing eyes suggested "a soul of flame in gauze." Another Presidential nominee who came fame by chasing the octopus is "Honest To known in his family Bible as Thomas L. years older than Mr. Debs and older than Mr. Watson—will be an eye weeks before election day. Next he drifted to setts and entered politics, waging a bitter war on the Standard Oil Company.

Temperance Candidate from Beer Land.

The oldest Presidential candidate of all running this year is Eugene W. Chafin, the nominee. Two days before election he his fifty-sixth birthday. This reformer's support to the theory that hobby is a re environment, for Wisconsin, in addition great beer State, is also now famous for the temperance candidate to the Union.

Across the Plains.

THE TRUE STORY OF A CARAVAN OF 'FORTY-NINERS.

By a Special Contributor.

IT was springtime of that momentous year, 1849. Even in Illinois the robins were singing, the green blades of grass peeping, and the delicate little May blossoms opening their dainty petals. Everything breathed of life, of hope, and pulses thrilled at the magic word "California."

The call of the West was in men's blood. Beyond the Rockies lay "the land of gold, the land of sunshine." Why toil for bread and shovel snow, when, once over the Great Divide, it was possible to shovel shining nuggets? At Galena, Ill., on the morning of May 3, 1849, a party with faces set westward were bidding farewell to friends and neighbors. Strong wagons, drawn by the best horses procurable, packed with household treasures and provisions, as staunch prairie schooners as ever floated on wheels, waited for the tearful women and excited children to clamber to their places. The men, with shouts and jokes, pretended only to think of what lay before, for once the teams started, there must be no looking back.

In the party were Philip D. Rice, wife and six children; Hiram Imus and wife, parents of Mrs. Rice; Hiram Imus, Jr., wife and eleven children.

All the spring months and up to early summer they journeyed on, driving their cattle and extra horses. The stock fattened on the luscious prairie grasses. The women and children grew accustomed to the new mode of life, and health came to even the weak ones of the party. They came up with and passed other parties bound for California, and many trains of Mormons bound for the Promised Land, Utah.

At the Platte River their first misfortune overtook them. Their cattle had been settled for the night, the horses picketed and hobbled, camp fires lighted; coffee pots were bubbling and bacon was sizzling, when a herd of buffalo came tearing along and charged straight into the cattle. The band was stampeded, and only the horses were rounded up after a night's effort, the cattle being given up as lost. A few of the men undertook to find them, and at length discovered them with a Mormon train, the Mormons declaring they found them a hundred miles from the scene of the stampede.

At Salt Lake City the travelers halted to rest and to lay in provisions for the last and hardest half of the journey. Many scouting bands of Indians had been encountered, but no serious troubles had come from them so far. Now, however, they were out in large forces, threatening and destroying, and a number of small trains had returned to Salt Lake City, afraid to proceed as they were.

A great train consisting of fifty families left Salt Lake early in December, Capt. Fly being selected as commander. On they traveled, but now the year was waning, with short days and cold nights. No longer the swelling Platte, the silver Nebraska, or any other refreshing stream, quenched the thirst of man or beast. The sand and sagebrush, scantily-filled water holes of acrid water, replaced them. Often, after goading the worn-out animals to the last effort possible, a dry camp had to be made.

For weeks the train had passed piles of furniture, bedding, and even good wagons that had been left behind to lighten the burden of the used-up horses and scrawny oxen. Often a paper was pinned to the pile of goods bearing this legend: "Take any of these things you want; they are clean, but our beasts are giving out." Skeletons of horses and oxen strewed the trail, and many a little pile of stones or a rude cross marked the lonely grave of one who had "fallen by the way."

As winter came on, the train, now greatly lessened, for many died before the Sierras were sighted, divided. The three families that left Galena decided to try to get into California by turning south, passing down Nevada, and coming into Los Angeles. The rest joined a train that took the Donner Lake route. The Rice and Imus families were now in a sad plight. The stock had all been abandoned save the horses and mules, and a few forlorn oxen that were, one by one, killed off to save the lives of the starving people.

The salt gave out, the coffee was put under lock and key, and the key delivered to Mr. Rice. Regular rations were served, one slice of bread while the flour lasted, and a cup of coffee. The oxen, when killed, had little to offer besides the bones and hide. The bones were boiled and a broth made. The hide was scraped, cut into strips and dried, and a bit of dry rawhide given out to chew on when the stomach could no longer be denied. In this forlorn company was a beautiful, sunny-haired little girl of 9, Helen Rice, and a tiny baby, born on the plains and named Boone Fremont Rice.

At last the end seemed to have come. The jaded mules could not be goaded another mile. For weeks there had been no bread, nothing but coffee and rawhide. Death seemed a welcome release from such horrors. One young couple, whose names little Helen Rice, now a white-haired old lady, Mrs. McLaughlin, living at El Pismo, has forgotten, started out on foot, saying if they failed to reach help they could only die anyway. Ike Holcomb and "Kentuck" Phillips volunteered to try to reach a settlement, and started. A few miles from where they had left the others, they passed the young man and his wife, and no human eye ever again beheld them, so far as known. What their fate was, or where it met them, can only be conjectured. After traveling day and night, Phillips and Holcomb sighted a ranch owned by a man named Rollins. They told their story and begged for supplies to carry back to their comrades. Rollins at first refused to send aid, saying he had already been duped by several parties who told similar tales. Phillips offered either himself or Holcomb as hostage, saying Rollins could put irons upon the one left, and if within a reasonable time he who went failed to return or send proof of his story, the one left could be hanged or shot.

Rollins being convinced, or partly so, Holcomb was put under guard, and Williams, a man who supplied flour to the ranch, gave flour, Rollins other supplies; and "Kentuck," without one hour's rest, loaded his goods on an old Spanish ox cart, and started back. He was told it was 150 miles to where he had left his party.

Day and night he traveled, never leaving the cart, reaching the desolate camp at midnight. The children were sleeping, but around a little fire sat the men and women. At his call the men sprang to their feet, but the women fell upon their knees, and the tears so long withheld now streamed over the haggard faces. Mrs. Imus mixed some flour, water and salt together, and some small "pancakes" were quickly baked in the frying pan. The children were wakened from sleep, and sitting about on wagon tongues, on rocks, and on the ground, each one received a tiny cake; but after the long fast, danger must be averted, so to the piteous begging for "just one more, aunt," the woman shook her head and hid her face in her apron.

In a few days the party started for Rollins's ranch, and on reaching it were made welcome, and given food and shelter, both for themselves and worn-out animals.

Mr. Rice was anxious to get to his brother-in-law's, Capt. Charles Imus of the Mexican War, who lived at Santa Cruz, so started, and left Los Angeles May 3, 1850, just a year from the day he had so hopefully set out for the Golden West. Capt. Imus and Rollins had served together in the war, and both had been in the same war prison, so his relatives were well outfitted when they left the Rollins ranch for Santa Cruz.

At Ventura the baby, Boone Fremont Rice, died, and was buried under a tree near the old mission. The little fellow stood all the hardships of the journey to Rollins's ranch, but he seemed to be unfit for indoor life, and he contracted consumption, or what his mother believed to be that, and she had to leave her baby by the wayside, too.

In time the remnant of the Rice party reached Santa Cruz, and they and their descendants became well-known citizens. Helen Rice, the little girl who shared the experiences related, was married in 1856 to Daniel M. McLaughlin, and in 1881 removed to San Luis Obispo county. She is a hale little old lady, still showing signs of her youthful prettiness, and keeps a little store at El Pizmo. Among her relics is a queer old silver watch made in London and brought to this country more than 125 years ago. It was carried by a grandparent through the Revolutionary War, by her father through the Black Hawk War, and crossed the plains with him.

A tiny white kid slipper, one of the pair worn at her wedding and secured for her at considerable trouble and expense, and a little old flat iron that her mother told her was the only one to be got in San José, are also among her possessions. Not a set could be found, but one was better than none. What was a flat iron more or less to a woman who had lived through the events Melvina Rice had? Suffered childbirth journeying across the plains, faced starvation, chewed rawhide with a child seeking sustenance at her breast; then, when the worst seemed ended, laid her baby in an unmarked grave by the wayside?

We honor the pioneers in song and story—that is, those who became heroes—but the women who followed their lead as wives, mothers or daughters have too often left this life "unhonored and unsung."

Keeping House in Arabia.

The tribulations and experiences of an American householder in Arabia are amusingly described by William Coffin in the current issue of Harper's Weekly. "By the time our house was ready," he writes, "we had acquired our brigade of servants. 'Retinue' seems an inadequate word to describe the assortment. We had nine to minister to two people. Various other functionaries were suggested and even pressed upon us, but we stood firm at nine.

"The force consisted of the cook and butler, wages each $10 a month; Alibin-Ibrahim and Juma-bin-Shumba, puttiewallahs, each $5 a month; Murad, the chokra or butler's assistant, $2.66; the cook's mate, $1.25; the dhobie, $5; the sweeper and the bhistie, $3 each.

"Salvador Rosa, the Genoese cook, turned up trumps. He never 'did a dead drunk' and used to put up astonishingly good meals, considering the material furnished him. But J. Debello was a failure. He demanded an assistant as soon as we got into the house, and thereafter his labor consisted of waiting at table.

"For some months the household moved on ball bearings. Then J. Debello thought it time to make his importance felt. He accused the chokra of stealing a silver fork and attempting to sell it in the bazar. He was so indignant and earnest that he fooled us, and we were on the point of decapitating the unfortunate Murad. All rescued him with proof that J. Debello had lied maliciously and had secreted the fork himself."

A Dreadful Thought.

One day Mary, the charwoman, reported for service with a black eye.

"Why, Mary," said her sympathetic mistress, "what a bad eye you have!"

"Yes'm."

"Well, there's one consolation. It might have been worse."

"Yes'm."

"You might have had both of them hurt."

"Yes'm. Or worse'n that: I might not ha' been married at all."—[Everybody's Magazine.

Wonderful Sheep Dogs.

INTELLIGENT ANIMALS GUARD FLOCKS ON THE RANGE.

By a Special Contributor.

"THERE goes 'Big Jim' and the most wonderful sheep dogs in the world." A giant of a fellow, with a browned and determined, yet pleasant face, had dismounted from his horse in front of the solitary restaurant boasted by the thriving sheep and cattle town of Buffalo, in Northern Wyoming. Instead of the beautiful, silky-haired collies conjured by the imagination, there trotted at his heels two rather small dogs, one black from tip to tip and the other black, save for a white breast.

Introduction to Jim Everett, like introduction to nearly all the outdoor men of the West, was not a matter of getting a card past a stony-featured private secretary. In three minutes Jim was expatiating on the accomplishments of his sheep dogs and extending an invitation to the writer to witness some of their feats—a bid that was promptly accepted.

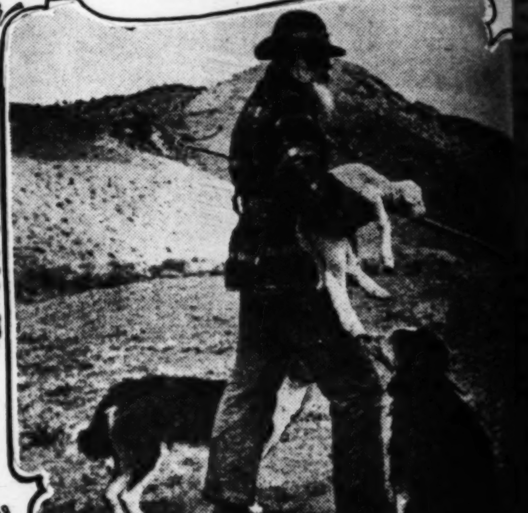
Buck—



Old Scotch herder and his collies in Montan

Next day on the vast, open range through which Crazy Woman Creek, a branch of Powder River, leaves an alkali-whitened trail, "Big Jim" showed what his sheep dogs could do.

"In the first place," said Jim, "these dogs are not pure-bred collies, as you must have noticed. The collie is a fine dog for sheep—in Scotland, but over here he needs a big strain of the wolf in him to make him effective. These dogs are half wolf. I caught their mother myself, out on the plains. Today these pups show more of the wolf strain than they do of the collie. Their ears are always pointed up, and they can hear twice as well as an ordinary collie. They are always on the lookout for danger, and their feet—well, that is their strong point. You see how thick the cactus grows in this country. Well, an ordinary dog has got his feet full of cactus thorns when he comes into camp at night with the band of sheep. After the band has been bedded the herder's got to spend an hour or two by the camp fire picking thorns out of the dog's feet. But these wolf dogs have got cushions on their feet that are tougher than sole leather. You never see an old wolf out on the plains lying down and chewing cactus thorns out of his feet—and neither do you see these dogs doing the same trick. Just for this reason alone, the wolf strain makes an animal like Nig or Lady the ideal sheep tender."

Nig and Lady, at this time, were several rods away, sitting on their haunches, and looking out across the plains with that peculiar, alert expression that never seemed to desert them. Jim did not raise his voice above the conversational pitch, but, on the contrary dropped it a little, when he said:

"Where's that coyote?"

The human ear, at its sharpest, could not have detected the words at a distance of more than ten feet, but Nig and Lady heard every word, and instantly they were up and away, racing around the band of sheep, and ready to grapple with any prowling coyote or wolf that might be lurking in a sheltering arroyo. Suddenly Jim raised his arms, until they extended in a horizontal position, and then he let them fall at his side. Instantly Nig and Lady stopped and sat down, with their eyes on their master.

"You see it's not much use to yell at a dog, especially when you've got to yell against a Wyoming windstorm," said Jim. "So I've trained my dogs to work to signals—regular brakeman signals they are."

Here Jim waved one hand toward the left, and Nig and Lady trotted off in that direction.

"If I want 'em to run around the sheep the other way," said Jim, "I just wave the other hand. When I want them to come in, I just raise my hands over my head like this."

Up went the giant's brawny arms, and in trotted the sheep dogs and took up their station at their master's feet. At a motion, one of the dogs took a long excursion round the band, looking for stray lambs that might have become separated from the flock, thereby offering themselves as easy prey for coyotes. Another motion, and the remaining dog "cut out" a single sheep from the bunch and lay down to guard it.

"That dog will watch that sheep for hours, until I call him off," said Jim, "and it would go hard with anybody who tried to touch the sheep that's under his care."

Like good soldiers, "Big Jim's" sheep dogs held duty paramount. They adore their master, but at a word from him they would go willingly with another sheep man, and work for the stranger. Jim himself is not a herder. He has "graduated," and is camp tender for one of the big sheep outfits that make their headquarters at Buffalo. In early days, when the long-horn steer was king of the range, Jim was a cowboy, but like many other cowmen, he drifted naturally into the once-despised sheep business. "Bigger pay, less work, and a dashed sight better treatment," is Jim's brief summing up of the reasons for his desertion of the cattle game.

A day or two after he had shown what his dogs could do, "Big Jim" created something of a commotion in Buffalo. The most peaceful and good-natured of men, Jim blazes into fierce anger when any one ventures to abuse his dogs. A drunken cattleman from Powder River way staggered into the restaurant, where Jim was eating. The sheep man's dogs were curled door, and the cattleman, who was just drunk be ugly, kicked one of the animals. Ins great hulk towered over the fellow. There w ening smash as the giant's fist found lodg cattleman's face, and the man from Powder bled into an unconscious heap in the corner. grasped him by the collar and tried to get hi feet, but the fellow's legs bent under him in ness, and, in prize-ring parlance, it was evide was "down and out." When he recovered con he crawled out of the restaurant, and, swaying ily in the saddle, lost no time in getting away Jim's" baleful gaze.

It is almost an impossibility for a herder sheep on the open range without sheep dogs. much more detail to the sheep herder's work dinarily supposed. The herder must be out up, as the sheep do not linger long on the bed but are soon up and scattered across the plains the scant grass or nibbling at the tops of brush. Coyotes and wolves are so numerous necessary to keep constant lookout. Inasmuch herder must care for an average of 2500 to 3000 a band, it will be recognized at once that widely-scattered flock of that size would soon man if he had no aid. The dogs render invaluable ice, however. They are constantly circling feeding flock, and driving in the sheep that widely scattered for safety. The good dogs is endless. Their work is particularly herding buck sheep. The bucks are saucy to fight, as a rule, and every once in a while makes a charge at the sheep dog and occa with the force of a battering ram. But never tries to retaliate, but continues his as guardian to the foolish flock. Even the band has been worked back toward bedded down, the dog's work is not ended is the most easily frightened of all animals at night. On Muir Glacier.

A LOS ANGELES GIRL TAKES LIBERTIES WITH THE ICE KING.

By a Special Contributor.

NOT often in the course of human events does a glacier allow mere mortals the privilege of exploring its icy greatness. So we felt exceedingly privileged when the winds and tide conspired in our favor and allowed the good ship Spokane to poke her nose among the icebergs until we were within three-quarters of a mile of Muir Glacier.

The trip before, the boat got no nearer than eight miles, and only three times in nine years have they been able to get at all close; and we were the very first who have ever set foot on that particular part of the glacier.

Now one can understand why I, a daughter of the southland, should appreciate the ice king's favor. But he probably realized my longing to see a real live glacier at close range, so gave me free passage.

My ideas of icebergs and glaciers were a somewhat dim and hazy remembrance of school-day geographies, and so the real article proved an exciting revelation.

First, a few little white bergs hove in sight and the blue water began to have a greenish, milky hue as if chalk had been washed through it. All glacier water has that peculiar color that is very becoming to the beautiful icebergs, white and blue, that are reflected in it.

The newer the iceberg the more brilliant its colors. The old ones look like rocks covered with dirty snow floating around. They take all kinds of weird shapes, from tiny ducks to great giants partially concealed in their crystal palaces. A vivid imagination helps to discover things not revealed to prosaic minds. The new bergs seem great pieces of blue turquoise, enough to furnish jewels for all the world.

Thicker and thicker they floated by, and equally thick were the kodaks. There is nothing equal to an iceberg to make one use up all his films. And if some of us have to go to the poorhouse after this trip we shall at least have the satisfaction of knowing that we shot every iceberg and glacier in sight while we were at liberty.

The ship crept along among the bergs at a snail's pace, not minding the small ones, but carefully steering clear of the larger ice mountains, as they would have meant disaster even at the slow pace at which we were going. We did take a whack at a few, and go craunch, craunch, over them, the bergs always seeming to get the best of the encounter, always carrying off some of the poor ship's red skin, while they turned turtle and came up on the other side apparently unharmed.

Glacier Bay was comparatively clear of ice, and we steamed up in style to old Muir, making the echoes resound for nearly a minute with the whistle.

The glacier has receded nearly four miles since it was last approached three years ago, showing that it is breaking up quite rapidly. The face of it now is in the form of a horseshoe with a little crescent bay in front.

A glacier simply looks what it is, as if a river coming down between two immense mountains had been dammed up until it reached the top, when it was suddenly congealed and covered with a slight frosting of snow.

From a distance it looks as if one might have a grand toboggan slide down one, but closer investigation shows immense crevasses extending across it and dividing the frosting into nice fat layers.

The Spokane anchored, and the saying that "Fools will venture where angels fear to tread" was most thoroughly demonstrated when about 140 passengers were landed in small boats.

I was one of the innocent fools who imagined that the nice little pebbly beach we landed on was as safe as any at Catalina. I afterward found it was ice slightly covered with sand and pebbles, and might have dumped us over into the bay at any minute. Fortunately, our guardian angel saved us from such a dreadful fate. We still live to lord it over all who cannot have the experience, but also to warn future explorers against placing their faith in such sinking sand (or ice.)

As the sailors carried each of the passengers from the boats, the others had a chance "to see themselves as others see them," which proved quite amusing, especially if the toted one was a heavy-weight. Some would grab the poor sailors around the neck and almost choke them in their frantic efforts to escape being ducked.

On looking at the glacier it seemed as if the ice king had been blasting for turquoise, and the great white ice rocks lay all around, exposing the blue face of the mountain where the turquoise stone shone deep and glistening. The solidity of the glacier is concealed under a coating of partially-frozen snow and cracked ice which is constantly melting, giving forth a crackling sound that is very ominous to the listener.

When a large berg breaks off there is a boom like a distant cannon as it tumbles into the water, dashing the spray high.

One lady had just snapped a jagged rocky projection of ice when it fell with a crash into the water, and so that particular little berg will never have a chance to have its picture taken again.

Every one was looking for the biggest piece of ice to have his picture taken on, and I am sure there were enough taken to stock a gallery.

The way the people scrambled around shouting and screaming over that ice was a caution. To see them one might imagine they were playing in a harmless eastern snowdrift instead of on a glacier that was likely to turn and destroy them should they provoke it too far. Some wished that a large berg would be discharged, not realizing that they would never have escaped to tell the tale.

Every one was finally steered aboard again, lured by the sound of the dinner bugle, which never lost its attraction in that cold, bracing air no matter how many meals were served.

The names of all the passengers were checked off as they came aboard, and the captain and officers breathed a sigh of relief as the last one came safely aboard once more.

With parting looks and snaps we finally turned our backs on old Muir Glacier, leaving him alone in his icy solitude for another three years, or until such time as he should pine for more company and open the way to his icy palace.

In the meantime, while we were snugly in the bay, the ice had silently drifted back into the channel behind us, and when the ship started out a barrier of ice blocked her way. Luckily the icebergs were mostly small, so the staunch ship crushed her way through, finally making her escape from the ice king's domain.

MARVELOUS MATHEMATICS.

WONDERFUL COMPUTATIONS BY A CONVICT IN MISSOURI PENITENTIARY.

[Jefferson City Correspondence New York Sun:] In Missouri's great prison house in this city, the largest penitentiary in the world, containing convicts from every State in the American Union and thirteen foreign countries besides, there is a prisoner whom the guards say has no sense, a thin, frail man of more than 50 years, slightly stooped, whose beetling brows are always drawn together above a pair of steel gray eyes with focus fixed upon some object far away. He is wholly unfitted for the ordinary labors of prison life and is employed in odd jobs about the State binder-twine plant. None of the convict labor manufacturing concerns is willing to accept him at the State's wage of 60 cents a day.

This useless man, with the prison palior in his face and the strange light in his eyes, who can hardly perform the simplest duties of prison life, is known as No. 9030 in the Missouri penitentiary, but abroad men of science are grappling with his theories of mathematics.

His name is M. A. McGinnis. Dr. J. M. Greenwood, superintendent of the Kansas City schools, and himself a mathematician, says:

"I first became acquainted with McGinnis some eight or ten years ago, through his algebraic solution of numerical equations of the higher degrees. In handling such numerical equations he is the most skillful algebraist that I have ever read of."

McGinnis has evolved a theory for the solution of numerical equations which is said to go beyond anything previously devised. But he has gone further in the solitude of his prison cell, and now announces that he has discovered a formula for the solution of literal equations as far as the twelfth degree. Mathematicians have declared that it was impossible to do what McGinnis says he can do.

But McGinnis does not regard this discovery as his great achievement. He claims to have perfected a solution of numerical equations by logarithms.

So thoroughly in earnest is the prisoner and so fully is he convinced of the correctness of his theory that he is willing to stake all his hopes of freedom upon its acceptance by the world of mathematics. He is an old man, and has served only eighteen months of a ten years' sentence, but he asks that Gov. Folk of Missouri submit his theory of the logarithmic solution of equation to a jury of mathematicians of national reputation.

If the jury shall fail to sustain his theory McGinnis says that he is willing to serve the remainder of his sentence, which, considering his age and frail health, means death in the prison. But if the jury of mathematicians shall sustain his views he asks that the Governor sign his pardon upon the ground that he has made a discovery of such value to civilization as to cancel the debt which society now holds against him.

Gov. Folk is himself an algebraist, and although the fact is known to but few, algebra for years has been his favorite method of mental recreation and relaxation, and he finds it much more interesting and mentally invigorating than chess, for instance. Gov. Folk is now giving some of his spare time to the McGinnis theories, but has not yet announced a conclusion as to their value.

McGinnis was formerly professor of mathematics in a Kansas college. A few years ago he published simultaneously in the United States and Great Britain a mathematical work entitled "Algebra the Universal Solution for Numerical and Literal Equations."

Whisky has been the downfall of McGinnis. When under the influence of intoxicants he is easily influenced, and while in that condition a few years ago he was drawn into a real estate transaction in which a forged deed came to light, and for his connection with the matter he is now serving a ten-year sentence.

"I never tasted intoxicating liquor or entered a saloon until I was 36," said McGinnis, "but when I had been at work for nearly seven years upon a great mathematical problem I began to lose sleep, and finding the problem with me day and night, I went to a physician and told him that I could not get the problem out of my mind and was afraid of insanity. He prescribed whisky—and here I am."

McGinnis was born in Appleton, Wis., and before he took up mathematics as a life work he was a newspaper publisher in the West, having at one time owned several small newspapers in Colorado. He has a wife and one son. The son is a printer by trade, and supports his mother by his labor in a country printing office in this State.

Asama Yama.

THE ASCENT OF LARGEST ACTIVE VOLCANO IN JAPAN.

By a Special Contributor.

DAME NATURE has given America many of her most beautiful and varied works of art, but she forgot to bestow upon us a real, live volcano. Perhaps the lady knew beforehand that the American temperament would be sufficiently volcanic without any assistance from her.

Japan has several volcanoes never out of employment, but the most active one is Asama, which with "tolerable regularity blows out his rocky brains and overwhelms villages in mud and ashes." It cannot claim any beauty in comparison with the peerless Fuji San, but its 8282-foot tower, twice as high as Vesuvius, and what it may lack in beauty, is made up in grandeur.

Vesuvius may be climbed at ease by Cook's railway, or even on horseback, but Asama can be achieved only by muscular struggles not to be forgotten for days. Every one who makes the trip is supposed to spend the following day in bed, and people have been known to postpone moving for a week.

Karuizawa is the starting point for most of the parties who undertake to climb Asama. This is a popular mountain resort for missionaries and easily reached from Tokio by train. On the latter part of this trip up from the capital the engine climbs several thousand feet on a rack and pinion track, passing through twenty-six tunnels in seven miles. As the train winds in and out through the steep mountain gorge, now hanging over a rocky precipice and now pounding in the dark bowels of the earth, the fleeting views of cliffs, pines, waterfalls and ferns are impressed on the excited retina with possibly greater vividness than they deserve. It is a beautiful trip; not so wild as the Swiss approach to St. Gothard, but much more picturesque.

Karuizawa lies in a nest surrounded by scarred volcanic mountains. Excepting Asama Yama all of these towering peaks have forgotten their ancient habits and are now covered with luxuriant, tropical vegetation. The soil is made of scoria, a kind of lava ash. This valley, like Tokio, probably averages fifty inches of rain a year, yet there is never any mud or dust visible, for the water sinks immediately through the loose lava soil. Properly prepared, this lava ash is very rich, and vegetation becomes rank.

When we arrived in June the mountains were ablaze with azalea bushes, some six feet in height, spreading in masses of color like our golden poppies. Under the bushes among the green moss were found pink and blue forget-me-nots, Solomon's seals, lilies-of-the-valley, jack-in-the-pulpits, and now and then a pink lady-slipper. The hills were covered with a great variety of trees, many of them unfamiliar to Californians. We identified the pines, white birches, bamboo, larches, cedars, cryptomerias, maples and horse-chestnuts.

The Japanese nightingale sang from the bamboo grove. That phrase may sound poetic, but his voice never did. We often longed for the crow of a rooster instead. The song of another bird, however, held us attentive, and his weird, mysterious tones like a will-o'-the-wisp called us to follow after. It was the cuckoo, and we unconsciously looked around for the clock. Not many years ago the missionaries say that monkeys were very commonly seen in the woods around Karuizawa, but for some unexplainable reason they are now gone, and, like the beautiful Japanese stork, or crane, which has migrated to Korea, the monkeys are fast disappearing from the island landscape.

Asama Yama is fourteen miles from the town of Karuizawa. Many parties make the trip during the night for a better view of the red glow in the volcano and to see the wonderful sunrise from the mountain top. We started early in the morning for the eight-mile horseback ride to the timber line. The ladies of the party rode astride, by far the safest method on that conglomerate beast called the Japanese horse. Some one has described his movement as "a lurch to starboard, then a lurch to larboard, with a shiver-my-timbers interlude." In front of each animal ran a betto, or footman, whose duty it was to prevent the horse from going to sleep one moment or from running away the next.

Our path led through two quaint little Japanese villages, past a little stream with a cosy mill and a large water-wheel by its side, up into the hills following an old daimyo road. We were on the famous Nakasendo (middle of the mountains road) which the fedual lords used in their yearly pilgrimages to Yedo to pay their respects to the Shogun.

Turning off from the road at the timber line, we dismounted and prepared for the four-mile climb to the crater. No path was visible above us—only a great cone of loose cinders and ashes. We started to climb at 9 in the morning, and the five hours seemed long before we reached the top at 2 p.m. The ground was more or less firm for the first two hours, but afterward the path must have been at an angle of more than thirty-five degrees, making an incline that barely held the loose ashes to the slope. The soil shifted with every step, and it seemed as if a slight earthquake would bring an avalanche upon us. As we neared the top, breathing became more difficult under the exertion but the frequent and necessary rests breath were rewarded by exquisite views.

The sides of the mountain were so seemed to be hanging over a precipice or a bird in air. The ranges around us were origin, and age and erosion had given them tastic forms, similar at times to the peaks Cañon. One giant looked like a turreted Rhine, another like a domed mosque, and the Cathedral Rock, is said to resemble very Cathedral of Durham. Far off to the south white tip of Fuji San for a second, and up the dark wall of the Japanese Alps. white clouds, parting at intervals, gave mysterious green valleys beneath bathed in light. A Mountain Round-Trip.

FROM THE SAN ANTONIO INTO THE COLDWATER.

By a Special Contributor.

THE khaki season has fairly begun. The hot spell that followed the glorious "Fourth" has kindled in many breasts a desire to doff the business suit for rments colored like the sunburned hills, and set out r the cooler elevations. Trips afoot have now become e popular, and the question arises: Is it practicable make a walking tour in our mountains?

The camper's way, of course, is often traveled afoot. itting the well-worn trail, he plods like the soldier in ballad:

"Smoking my pipe in the mountains,
Sniffing the air so cool,
walks in my old brown gaiters,
Along o' my old brown mule."

But the burdened mule is itself a burden to the trav- er, and the tow rope often a drawback to footsteps at should be untrammeled. Necessity alone, the lack "accommodation for man and beast" in remote places, mpels him to hamper himself with the care of ani- als. But the name of the mountain nymph, says the et, is Liberty; and the man who would follow her otsteps should walk at ease. He should carry nothing the lightest of knapsacks, and no care but the in- itable one, to find a good inn at the close of the day.

After that fashion thousands of pedestrians journey ery year to enjoy the superb scenery of the Alps. The y tourist can even send his knapsack on ahead by the rcel post, and find it waiting for him on his arrival in hotel office. He will find his "warmest welcome at inn" up on the snow line, or even higher.

But the Alps have been the playground of Europe for eral generations. Our Sierra is a novice at enter- ning the tourist. But the establishment of perma- t camps, which perform the function of hotels, in the ntain cañons has made it possible to travel around a certain extent in the Swiss style. Here follows a ch of a short trip out-and-home, embracing a moun- ascent, the crossing of two passes, and all under proof weather conditions which Switzerland cannot mand. The people are obliging and make no difficulty about fast breakfast; but if you are keeping house un- the greenwood tree, it is a good plan to start at a cup of coffee and hardtack, pack the "grub" along, and eat at the end of the first stage, at Bear Flat.

According to the stone at the foot of the trail it is but a mile, "cyclometer measurements," to that spot. But gradient, not mileage, counts in climbing, and you will swear it is the longest mile you ever tramped. It is forest all the way, a deep shady gulch, filled at daybreak with the songs of birds. Don't forget to pick up a pilgrim's staff, not a cane, but a stout shoulder-high pole; for a third leg, if a wooden one, proves of great service in steep places. Before you reach the ferny flat, where Bear Creek bubbles out, the sun will be over the eastern heights and changing the spruces and cedars into pillars of fire.

The spring at the resting-place is the last chance for water, and those who carry canteens must fill them here. The scene changes from dark woodland to open, sunny chaparral as the trail winds slowly up from the bottom of the creek basin. Plain as the track is, it is easy to go astray here. Bushy ground hides a sudden turn, a false trail appears, and one's eyes are mountain-gazing. But you cannot get lost. The zigzags of the trail up the bare declivity to your left are "plain as the way to parish church."

Beyond its scrubby top scattering trees appear, and the underbrush diminishes to flat-topped bushes. The elevation here is about 6000 feet; but your goal is not in sight yet. Now comes the tug of war. For something like 3000 feet the trail winds up and up, making short turns over the bare and glistening granite. The fat man lards the lean earth, like Falstaff, as he climbs. The yellow pines afford but little shade, and where one spreads more umbrageously than its fellows, the pilgrim is tempted to halt, making as many "stations" as a devout Italian, who kneels at each wayside shrine before he attains to the holy place at the mountain top. But this huge shoulder surmounted, the hard work is over. You are well over the 9000-foot level. There is Old Baldy on the right hand and so near, its double summit appearing like two small waves on the coping of the granite wall.

As with relieved muscles you jog easily along the gentler grades of the last lap, note the point where the high bank on your left hand sinks down to the level of the trail. For hereabouts comes in the path into the Coldwater Cañon, which being a foot trail is not very well defined at the point of junction, and is not monumented as it should be. The cañon itself yawns obviously on the left, where a vast rock slide has tumbled from the mountain face into its depth. Don't go down the slide, although it looks as easy as the broad road that leads to destruction; and something like a trail, but really a channel worn by melting snow, winds down to it over the edge of the divide. The real trail runs high up near the crest of the ridge which walls in Coldwater Cañon on the east. By making a few "casts" in that direction, like a scenting hound, it is easy to pick it up on the shale and gravel where the footprints are distinct.

Meanwhile, you will have achieved the crest of Old Baldy, 10,080 feet above the sea level. And if your time from Baynham's, rests included, has been short of six hours, you have done pretty well. Six miles, cyclometer measure—but such miles—nearly on end! An hour or so to enjoy the panorama, and ample time remains on a summer's day for the descent on Weber's Camp in Coldwater.

The direction of the ridge trail is nearly southwest, the first part very rocky. From this high elevation you have an uninterrupted view over a wilderness of mountains, among which the Mount Wilson range is easily recognized by the deep trough of the West San Gabriel River that runs below it. In the afternoon light the coloring of the mid-distant mountains is very deep; the solid purle, darkening by degrees as the sun descends, gives them an expression of unchanging steadfastness. After a bit the trail dives into the shadow of pines and firs, and the distant scenes appear but in occasional glimpses. Rather more than half-way down you notice a small monument by the side of the path. It indicates the nearest way to water along an excessively steep trail that leads to the Coldwater brook and then follows it down to the camp. In point of time one might just as well keep on the ridge trail, which descends later through a belt of chaparral to cross the stream a short distance above Weber's.

On the third day the circle may be completed by returning to the San Antonio Cañon by another route. But unless "needs must," etc., the course that will appeal to the majority after such strenuous labor is to lay off for a day. If properly shod and covered with thick woollen socks, the feet should not have suffered. But the novice at the art of walking, the "tenderfoot," may be reminded that the common cotton sock is very apt to cause chafing, and should this unpleasantness arise, an old handkerchief folded over the spot will give relief. To grease the inside of the woollen sock before marching with tallow or naphtha soap is an infantry soldier's wrinkle. It tends to ease the foot. But footsound, though you be, a not unpleasant languor usually follows severe exertion. And Coldwater is an inviting cañon, brimful of trees of all kinds, bay and live oak, spruce and pine; all the wildflowers that you have missed since April, lupines, larkspurs and the rest, are up here on vacation. There are ferny, dreamy nooks for a siesta, trout in the brook, and a pretty double cascade at the head of the cañon. Let your muscles rest and your soul expand under the influence of the mountains.

From Weber's Camp back to the end of the car line to Upland is reckoned at eighteen miles. It is an interesting walk, up and down, in and out; and ten miles of it is trail work with streams to be crossed now and then. This implies a slow pace. For a man who is contented with a three-mile gait on a level road is not likely to make more than two miles an hour on hill trails. But if you leave at 7:30 a.m., you should easily catch the evening train, allowing for rests and deviations.

For the first four miles the Coldwater keeps you company on the walk. It lives up to its name, the lower part of the cañon being as shady as the upper. Here are two new placer mines, and you exchange morning greetings with the miners at work. Lower down signs of permanent habitation appear: a cabin handy to the stream, where an elderly man is washing dishes in the porch—an old bachelor, probably, in love with mountain life; one hears there are not a few such hermits in the forest reserve. Coldwater soon joins Cow Creek, and their united waters join the main San Gabriel a few miles lower down.

But the arrow on the signboard at the junction points upstream, and the direction reads: "U. S. government trail to San Antonio Cañon, six miles." You face about and wander up Cow Creek Cañon, which is as open and sunny as Coldwater is shady and secluded. With its shrub-clothed grassy sides and the profusion of wild flowers, it much resembles a seacoast cañon. It is a garden sown by Nature, in which the great spotted lilies grow in hundreds, and the uncommon pure gold mariposa is a wayside blossom. The trail, which seems to be very little traveled, worms its way along and across the windings of the stream till you wonder into what sort of an impasse it is leading. Just where the water becomes a mere trickle, and one of the useful Forest Service placards points out a convenient camping-place, the trail takes a jump uphill to the low pass. It is a short climb, but rocky, and broken slippery rock at that. As you strive against the uneven footing with the sun hot on your back, gnats buzzing in your ears, and big deer flies circling around to select a spot to bite on, you realize that there may be disagreeable experiences on a mountain trip. But "it's all in the day's work;" and so is the grand view from the top of the pass.

A few hundred feet below winds the high road to Upland; Baynham's is a short mile away; you have practically completed the round. To add variety to the return trip along the highway, turn to the left at the foot of the Hog's Back and follow the new road down to the stream. You can cross it where a blacksmith's forge stands by the wayside. On the opposite side is a trail which, winding high up around the cliffs, presents a view of the romantic scenery of the narrow gorge in which the river is confined. It will carry you around to the road again, where the new construction work is advancing from the other end, at a point not far from the power-house. This is about five miles from the end of the trolley line, and, if you have a train connection to make at Upland, remember that the cars leave San Antonio Heights ten minutes before each hour.

A word or two by way of rider or corollary. By persons unaccustomed to take regular walks a mountain trip like this should not be undertaken without some preparation. The writer met a man who, judged by his build, appeared physically capable of stiff climbing, but who had returned defeated of his object, owing to lack of training. His verdict was: "Old Baldy is not to be climbed right off the sidewalks of Los Angeles." The caution is useful; many an outing is spoiled by attempting too much. But after a few preliminary tramps over the hills of the home district, any healthy person should be in condition to enjoy a walk over the route described. And the circle embraces as interesting scenes and climbs as are to be found in the San Gabriel Forest Reserve.

Teleplastic Theory.

De Rochas believes astral bodies may be molded at experimenter's will. In support of this theory, Mr. Garland, in the September Everybody's, says, in part:

"I am the more disposed to believe in the teleplastic theory for the reason that I have recently had an opportunity to witness a particularly inhuman form beside the psychic—a phenomenon which has a special bearing upon the matter of identity which we are discussing. The sitting took place in a small private house here in the city. The psychic in the case was a young business man who is careful not to advertise his power. For four years he has been holding secret developing circles to which a few of his friends only are invited. I was present recently and shared in the marvels. The place of the séance was the parlor of his apartment, and his young wife and little daughter were present. There was in addition an elderly lady, mother-in-law of the psychic, and a Polish student whom I will call Jacob.

"Toward the end of the evening the psychic advanced from the cabinet, and in a dazed way ordered the lamp to be lit. This was done. He then asked that the light be turned low. This also was done. Thereupon, directing his gaze toward the curtain, he called twice in a tone of command, 'Come out!'

"I could distinguish every one in the room at the moment. I could see the psychic plainly. I could discern the color of his coat and the expression of his face. He stood at least six feet from the opening in the curtain. At his second cry, which held a note of entreaty, I saw a form, taller than himself, suddenly appear before the curtain, and stand, bowing in silence. I could perceive neither face, eyes, nor feet, but I could make out the arms under the luminous robe, the shape of the head and the shoulders, and as he bowed I could see the bending of his neck. It certainly was not a mechanical device. And the covering was not so much a robe as a swathing.

"However, my eyes were mainly busy with the psychic, whose actions impressed me deeply. He had the air of an anxious man undergoing a dangerous ordeal. His right hand was stretched stiffly toward the phantom, his left was held near his heart; his knees seemed to tremble, and his body appeared to be irresistibly drawn toward the cabinet. Slowly, watchfully, fearfully, he approached the phantom. The figure turned toward him, and a moment later they met—they clung together, they appeared to coalesce; and the psychic fell through the curtain to the floor of the cabinet."

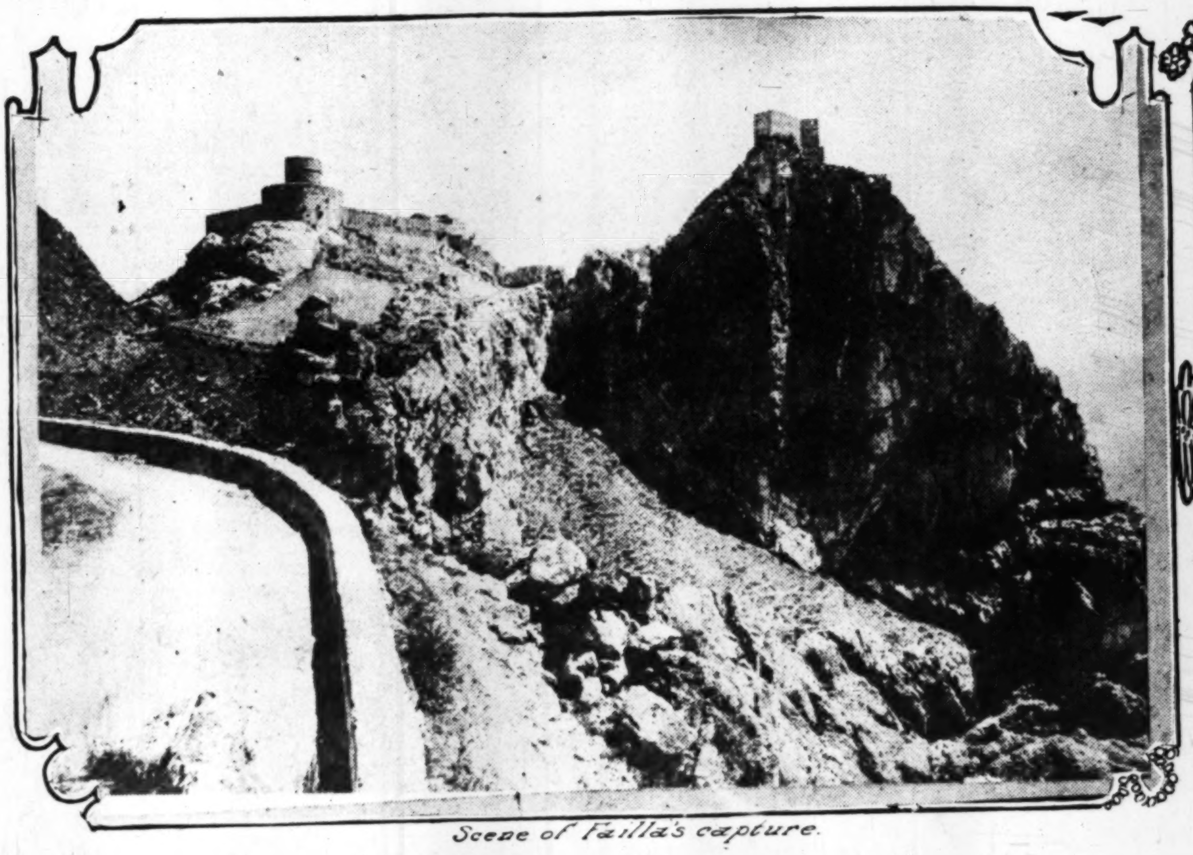
Brigandage in Italy.

A PROFESSION THAT IS RESPECTED WHEN PROPERLY CONDUCTED.

From a Staff Correspondent.



Scene of Failla's capture.

Failla Mulone in shepherd's dress

NAPLES, Aug. 25.—Sicily, the home of brigandage, is in a ferment over a gross violation of the ethics of the calling. Few Sicilians blame a man for being a knight of the road—especially so long as they, personally, are never molested—but they are united in insisting that the Jesse Jameses of the land shall conduct their little affairs in a manner above board and give every man a "fair deal." Thus, Salomone, the bandit who was recently captured, shot the Mayor of Barrafrance in the back, and whereas, he might have become a popular hero of Italy, he is universally execrated.

Every now and then the Italian papers devote considerable space to attempts to prove that brigandage has disappeared from the country, but inevitably subsequent events give these stories the lie. The bandit may have lost considerable of his picturesqueness, may even have lost that chivalrous valor which he was always supposed to have possessed in the good old days, but in Italy, and especially in Sicily, he has retained his courage and his power. Brigandage is a recognized profession, and when the heart is willing the way to it is not an especially difficult one to traverse. A knife thrust in the dark, a flight to the countryside and presto! a hitherto estimable young man is a knight of the road, and wanders around with a price on his head and a grudge against all humanity. That is the manner in which the majority of them are made, but there are other agencies at work. Many of the innumerable bandits plying their trade in Italy today are victims of undeserving accusations, supported by false evidence impossible of refutation. Such a one was the famous Musolino who, hunted all over the country for a crime of which he was absolutely innocent, rounded out his career with cruel and unnecessary deeds.

Salomone, however, was no victim of erring justice His murder of the unfortunate Mayor was his first crime, and it sent him into the hills with a crowd of enraged Sicilians at his heels because the shot was not fired with his enemy facing him. Even his subsequent daring and courage could not compel the admiration of his fellow-citizens. While not busy picking off an enemy with his carbine, holding up a prosperous merchant on the highway, or abducting a pretty girl, this hero was engaged until his arrest in writing his mostly fictitious memoirs for a well-known paper.

This writing to the newspapers by outlaws has become a common practice; indeed, nowadays, they do it so frequently as to become regular contributors. Some even pay for the insertion of their literary efforts, which cannot, however, be considered models of prose. One of the most notorious of the present-day brigands is a certain Caudine, who wrote to the Corriere dell'Isola of Palermo, saying that "it is an impudent lie" to assert that in the territory where he operated, the so-called Maurina band, the most bloodthirsty in the history of Sicily, had reappeared. He attributed this "invention" to another ruffian, who, he said, "has never had the courage to take the road," and tried to spoil his—Caudino's—business by frightening the people. The enterprising brigand then addressed an appeal to the farmers to induce them to affirm that he has never molested them, assuring them on his "honor as an honest man" that if they did not become dishonest traitors he would always protect them. The letter ended saying: "Tell the government to save itself the trouble of sending police and troops to the Cesaro region, as I have not been there and have no intention of going." The communication was accompanied by the equivalent of $1 to pay for the insertion.

Another bandit of the province of Caltanissetta sent to the Giornale di Sicilia, with about $2, a sensational account of how he became a brigand, promising that after the publication he would give himself up to the police—if they could catch him.

The brigands are not all from the lower ranks of life, but if a "gentleman" takes to the road, there are certain rules which he is expected to observe. Baron Jacona, belonging to one of the noblest families of Sicily, but reduced to penury, a few years ago went with a carter to the market of Piazza Armerina, in the center of Sicily, where the latter had purchases to make. Suddenly the reduced nobleman attacked his companion from behind with an ax. The carter, slightly injured, took to his heels, leaving the Baron to search the saddlebags, where he found and appropriated $190. This caused a great commotion in the island, not because of the act itself, but—and herein lies the oddity—because of the way in which it was done. That in Sicily, the classic land of romantic and poetic brigandage, a nobleman should commit an outrage in so vulgar a manner was revolting to the feelings, and a disgrace to the Sicilians' glorious ancestors in the profession, who must turn in their graves at such a travesty of their chivalrous methods. The general opinion was that Baron Jacona deserved to be hanged.

All Sicilians recall with pride the deeds of that hero of the island who, at the beginning of the century, had succeeded in terrorizing the whole country through making police and people believe him to be the leader of an immense band. His method was simplicity itself. His band was nothing but marionettes, which he could carry easily from place to place, as he stuffed them freshly every time he needed them. A carriage filled with people would come along a lonely road, and turning a corner, find itself in the midst of kneeling figures with cocked weapons, led by a ferocious personage, armed to the teeth, who, pointing significantly toward his comrades, shouted: "Your money or your life!" All went well for years, until one day he was surprised by a squad of mounted police, and only had time to save his own skin. The police faced the band, while their officer cried:

"Lower arms and surrender in the name of the law!"

Profound silence.

"If you will surrender I will intercede for you!"

No answer.

"For a third time, lower or I fire!"

Continued silence.

"Fire!" he cried, exasperated. A volley echoed through the countryside, but when the smoke cleared away, to the consternation of the representatives of the law, the enemy was found in exactly the same position. The men were on the point of flying, thinking it magic, but a second volley was fired, and the marionettes collapsed. Thus ended the famous band of that brigand, whom the Sicilians considered much more worthy of being a baron than Jacona.

A quite different figure also from the unfortunate baron is that of Failla Mulone, a young shepherd from the interior of Sicily, who killed another shepherd in a fit of jealousy. Mulone is still at large, and was recently heard of near beautiful Taormina, on the coast, where the foreigners love to congregate. Mulone is beloved of the people for his hairbreadth escapes, generous acts and undoubted courage. He also has been bitten by the publicity bee, and not long ago sent a letter to the editor of a Palermo paper saying that if a correspondent, who had written of the ex-shepherd's in escaping the police, and who he thought had not sufficiently flattering, returned to Montedoro he kill him with his own hand. The journalist has turned.

Many are the stories told of Mulone. At one time authorities thought to freeze him out. All his and relations were arrested, also every one suspected favoring him. About 600 people were thus impris and were likely to remain behind the bars until he taken, so he left the neighborhood that they might released.

One day Mulone ventured nearer than usual to town of Montedoro out of mere bravado. Suddenly heard the peculiar bark of the dog, trained to give signal when the carbineers are approaching. His ation was a difficult one. Behind him were the neers, perilously near, and before him the village his enemies. There was no time for hesitation. lone, in a flash, tore off his coat, turned it inside slashed his trousers with his knife until they were rags, tied a dirty handkerchief over one eye, rubbed other until it was inflamed, huddled himself with dog at the side of the road, and awaited events. carbineers soon came into view and nearly rode the beggar in the road. Mulone looked at them and said ": A penny for a blind beggar!"

"Blind," laughed one of the men, "you had sight to get out of our way!" Then looking at closely, he said ':'But who are you? You are these parts; now I come to look at you, you are unlike Mulone, indeed——" but here he was interrupted by the brigand exclaiming: "I only were! He has plenty to eat.' The conversation then interrupted by the other impatient carbineers the situation saved for Mulone.

The escapes of these brigands so often turn little circumstance that it is not to be wondered they believe so thoroughly in luck. Take, for Ferraro, whose good luck was phenomenal. Faliori by name, was deserted by the goddess of Fortune and was at once taken. For ten years the authorities at bay and a certain part of Sicily continual state of unrest. The man himself was but a common criminal, but had one great quality pensable to his profession, to wit, presence of mind night the hut in which he was sleeping was and he was called upon to surrender. Mirage of Seasickness.

What a Vivid Imagination Did for Two Travelers.

By a Special Contributor.

"GOOD-BY, Jack," both Genevieve and I had said a number of times. Then he had thought of some other bit of instruction to give us, though he had never crossed an ocean in his life.

"Yes," I agreed, "we will tell the stewardess to call us at 5 o'clock in the morning. That will give us plenty of time to dress and get out on deck before the boat moves. Yes, we will wear our sweaters and caps. It won't take us so long to dress, then. Oh, of course we have our lemons and chewing gum."

He lifted some of our baggage into the upper berths out of our way, and hung our cloaks on the highest nails. Then he pulled the evening paper out of his overcoat pocket and laid it on top of our steamer rug, which was rolled into a bundle and thrown into the berth over mine.

"You may want to look it over tomorrow," he said.

"Oh, good!" exclaimed Genevieve; "that will be another safeguard against seasickness. We will each just fold a newspaper over our chests, next to the flesh. That is known to be a sure preventive."

"Indeed," I assured him again, "we have taken every precaution. No, we won't be the least bit seasick, because we know just how to avoid it."

I explained to him that I had eaten a very hearty supper, so that my stomach would be too full to jolt around, and Genevieve assured him that she had been careful not to eat anything, so that there would be nothing in her stomach to cause seasickness.

"Oh, yes," I said, "I have some ordinary baking soda to put in water and drink it, if I feel the least bit dizzy."

"And I will order ice cream," added Genevieve, "for it is known to be the best thing to eat in case of seasickness."

In proof of my thoughtfulness, I opened my hand satchel and pulled out a bottle of Worcestershire sauce. "I will take a spoonful of that before I drink a drop or eat a bite at any meal, because that heats up the stomach and is a sure preventive."

With all these proofs of our careful preparations Jack was finally satisfied in his mind that we could reach England if the boat managed to stay on top of water. Therefore he bade us a final "good-by" and was gone.

The Celtic was advertised to sail from New York at 6 o'clock on Wednesday morning, and the passengers were allowed to go aboard the night before. We had thought that an excellent plan, because in that way we could get dressed and out on deck before sailing.

After Jack was gone, we called the stewardess, gave her definite orders to waken us at 5 sharp, and retired for the night.

Our stateroom contained four berths, and we had the two lowers, while the uppers were unoccupied. The next morning I was wakened by Genevieve, who sat bolt upright in her berth and leaped out before the mirror. "We are going," she cried, "and we will be sure to miss seeing the statue of Liberty and all the sights we counted on."

In no time I was out behind her, trying to face that same mirror. The chug-chug of the machinery was steadily going and we felt certain we would be out of sight of New York Harbor before we could get out on deck.

"I'll settle with that stewardess," I threatened, "for not calling us, as she was ordered."

Genevieve gave no answer to my remark, as she had rolled back into her berth, with her skirt band around her neck and her arms tangled up in the folds.

I gave her one look through my hair, which I had just thrown over my head to comb, and realized that she was seasick.

Without lifting my hair, I crawled into my berth. I believed it was the throwing my head down to swing my hair over the top of it, that caused my stomach to come up into my mouth. I could hear Genevieve struggling with that skirt, but I could not see her.

"To think," she moaned, "it is 3100 miles from New York to Liverpool, and we must lie here through the whole voyage!"

What I was thinking about the stewardess would be no cure for seasickness, and therefore it was unnecessary to speak it aloud. However, it is not unbecoming a lady to say that it is well for that stewardess she did not happen to come to our door just then, although we were perfectly harmless under the circumstances. The chug-chug of that machinery was positively maddening.

"Where are the remedies you brought along?" asked Genevieve.

"They are under the foot of my berth," I answered, lying flat on my back and trying to look up through that hair.

"Hand them to me," she pleaded.

"I can't," I groaned. "If I were able to get those things, I'd be able to dress and get out of here."

"Why in the world did you put them under your feet? That's no place for them." She turned her face to the wall, I think.

Such an unnecessary remark! "Weren't we going to get up before the boat moved?" I growled. "Then I would have gotten them out."

"Have you got the newspaper over your chest?" she called from somewhere in the depths of her berth.

"Yes, it is in the berth over me," I snapped.

"You are pretty well surrounded by remedies," she again spoke up, "but they arn't apt to cure at such long range." When I deigned no reply, she added: "You must believe in absent treatment."

There are times when a traveling companion is very little comfort, especially when she happens to be one's own sister and feels herself privileged to say anything which comes into her head.

"Do you think it is almost noon?" she asked, after a dreary silence.

"I have no idea," I slowly answered her, "for my watch is under my pillow and I'm afraid to move."

She may not have said anything in reply, but I felt her comments.

"If I could only get my hair up, so my cap would cover it," I moaned, "and if I had my cap in reach!" A good idea struck me. "Next time I go abroad, I will wear a hood that will cover my head entirely."

"A night cap would likely suit you better." Her words sounded so muffled.

"If you could only get out of that skirt——!" I began.

"I would rather get into it," she interrupted.

I lay there quietly and examined my symptoms. "I don't really feel sick just now," I concluded, "but I'm afraid I will be, if I stir."

I heard movements in the direction of Genevieve's berth. I slowly pushed aside my hair and rolled my eyes toward her. (I always get seasick in my eyes.) She was just coming out through the top of her skirt and cautiously arranging herself in a sitting posture on the side of her berth.

"Suppose we take it easy," she began when she could trust herself to speak, "and see if we can't get dressed, a little at a time, and perhaps we can manage to get into the fresh air before we get dangerously sick."

That seemed to be a good idea, in view of the fact that she had so far succeeded as to get into an upright position and make such an extended speech at the same time.

I moved my feet out over the side of my berth and examined my symptoms. I raised up on my elbow and took another inventory of said symptoms, to find no alarming additions. I sat up, then stood up. Then I wished I wore a wig. My hair seemed unusually long, hanging down over my face, and I would rather have cut it off than ventured to bend my head over again. Therefore I carefully parted the hair with my fingers while my head stood stiffly erect. I can hardly face a loving, forbearing friend with my hair parted in the middle, let alone prospective acquaintances, with whom I must spend a whole week, whether or no. Nevertheless, I preferred being even homelier than seasick.

Silently, patiently and, as we thought, bravely, we completed our toilet and formed a line of two to march out of the stateroom and wend our way to the deck. We met a good-natured group of passengers coming down the gangway. They fell into single file and allowed us to tramp slowly by, without glancing in their direction.

Neither of us spoke until we reached the top of the companionway, when we lifted our eyes and looked at the sky, then at—the dock! and then at each other. The Celtic had not yet moved! She lay as peacefully as though she rested on stone, while the men and machinery were busy loading the baggage.

MINNIE OLIPHANT.

A Hard Part in the Play.

"My hardest part on our unfortunate summer tour," said the sailor, 'was in a sea drammer, 'The Tar and the Cingalese.' I played third mate. The wreck scene was certainly strenuous. Me and the crew swum the whole act through. The sea was a blue cloth what the supers shook in the wings, and layin' on it, we swum overhand. Every time our palms hit the water you could hear it all over the house.

"That fierce swimmin' in the wild seas was terrible hard work. Now and then your backbone would come down on the ocean and get all the skin rasped off. A wave would slide down your front and rip every button off your suit. The shoship keeled over on a man one night, and before he could lift her off himself his ankle bone was busted.

"A man in the wings made thunder and lightning with one hand and ate a cheese sandwich with the other. The brave ship rocked to and fro, and it seemed that every minute would be her last. The dust from off the waves was stranglin'. If you glided too fast over the sea's surface you got splinters in you. Still we swam on.

"Sometimes, though, worn out, we'd swim behind the ship, stand up on the waves, stretch ourselves and rest. Then back we'd swim bravely again.

"When that terrible act was at last over, we'd go downstairs, remove the dust and splinters that we had contracted from our long swim, pack the ship in a trunk, fold up the ocean, and go back to the boardin'-house for supper."

Consolation.

The musician with a compassionate smile watched the poet trimming the fringe from his cuff.

"After all," he said, "your verse may live when Marie Corelli, Winston Churchill and Hall Caine himself are forgotten. Remember the case of Guarnerius."

"Who was he?" the poet asked.

"A pauper and a violin-maker. Guarnerius in the seventeenth century made violins that everybody thought too thick; hence they brought only $2 apiece. Musicians would buy them and have them pared down.

"Guarnerius insisted that they were not too thick. When he heard of one of his instruments being pared down, he flew into a frightful rage. He had a grouch against the world because it wouldn't agree with him about violin-making. He died a pauper because the world would have none of his violins.

"A Guarnerius is now and then to be picked up. Usually it is a pared instrument, and its value is not very high. But find an unpared Guarnerius and you can get anything you like for it. It is one of the world's few perfect violins.

"But Guarnerius died a pauper. The Hall Caines and Winston Churchills of the violin world of his day refused with sneers to drink with him. He, too, trimmed his cuffs."

I.

THE low-ceilinged room was dark and cool, in strong contrast to the blazing heat outside. Heat seldom found its way through the two feet of adobe walls, and the narrow shaft of sunlight that came in through the open door only accentuated the darkness and coolness the more. A motley collection of huge Mexican saddles, bridles and reatas hung on the wall and lay scattered about on the floor. The mingled smell of cigarette smoke and sweaty leather filled the room with a very pleasant odor—at least, so thought old Don Hernando Guardio as he reclined in his comfortable chair and dreamed of the happy days before the Americanos came—the days when he was rich and his word had weight among the Californians. His half-closed eyes dwelt reminiscently on the ribbon of a road that stretched away over the hot, sunbaked plain, losing itself in the blue wall of the distant mountains. He was thinking of the many light-hearted guests that had come up that road in the dim past when he was a young caballero. He sighed a little at the thought, then wondered vaguely where his son was that he had not appeared after taking his siesta. A half-formed thought to call the boy to him floated across his mind, and then went on again, leaving him still motionless, his half-closed eyes still fixed on the road.

Dimly he felt that there was something wrong with the road. He could hardly have said what had prompted the feeling, but in a subconscious way he knew the road presented an unusual aspect just then. He drew in a great puff of smoke from his cigarette to dispel the thought, but it still remained with him, although he was too drugged with sleep to investigate. He tried to think what it might be. A dozen things that might be happening out there occurred to him, but one and all floated on again, leaving him as motionless as before.

Then down the dim corridor came the sound of pattering feet, and his daughter ran lightly into the room, her big black eyes shining with excitement.

"Oh, papa mio," she cried, "there is a horseman coming up the road, and Farquita says it is an Americano."

The old Mexican straightened suddenly, and his cigarette dropped from his wrinkled old hands. That, then, was what was wrong with the road! If he had not been half-asleep he would have scented him a good league away.

"An Americano," he repeated, a little dazed at first. Then, after a pause: "Ah, yes, an Americano. 'Tis they who have conquered the Californians. Ah, mia Carmelita, that was a sorry day for us. This is the first one to honor us with a visit. I make no doubt he will wish to stay the night with us," he added, his native hospitality always uppermost. "Carmelita, go thou and tell Farquita to make ready one of the spare rooms for him, and I will stay here and greet him. Tell thy mother also."

"But, papa mio," said Carmelita, "you can understand but little English, and perhaps the señor Americano understands no Spanish."

"Yes, yes, Carmelita, that is so. It is well they taught thee English at the convent, for now it will be of service. When thou hast told Farquita to put the room in order, come to me and we will greet this Americano together."

Carmelita hurried away to give her order, and was soon back at her father's side. Together they watched the American ride up to the corral and throw his rein to one of the vaqueros. Evidently the American tried to get some information from the vaquero, but as he could speak no Spanish and the vaquero no English, he got very little satisfaction from the Mexican. The American seemed in a very bad temper by reason of his long, hot ride, and Carmelita and her father could plainly hear him berating the vaquero in language more forceful than polite, calling him the absent-minded son of a Mexican mistake, and many other things.

Don Hernando inquired of his daughter what the American was saying, but she, wishing above all things to have this man make a good impression on her father so that he might be invited to make an extended stay, answered that she did not just catch the words. Had the room not been so dark Don Hernando might have noticed that his daughter's cheeks were flushed and that her eyes were very bright, and he might then have censured her for showing undue interest in a stranger; but he did not notice, for he was a little excited himself.

They heard the quick tread and jingle of spurs outside as the American approached the door. Then the American himself appeared in the doorway. His eyes being unaccustomed to the dark interior of the room, he did not see its two occupants, and he rapped three tims imperiously on the half-opened door. Don Hernando looked questioningly at his daughter, and she arose and went forward.

"Enter, señor," she said in her best English. "You are welcome at all times. This is my father, Don Hernando Guardio, but he no spike the English, so señor he spikes to him through me." And she made him a bow.

"Why, that's pretty good," said the American with a chuckle. "My name is Homer McNally, but you'd better call me just Homer; you might forget the rest," he added as he shook hands with Don Hernando. "Tell your father," he went on, "that I'd like to stay here all night, and probably longer, as my horse is in poor condition and needs rest and care."

"Father says you are welcome to stay so long as you like," Carmelita translated. "Our hospitality is not so good as it once was, but we can make you comfor'beel. I will call Farquita to show you the room, and tell Juan to bring up the saddle bags," and she started for the door.

"But you haven't told me your name," said McNally, taking a step toward her.

"Carmelita," she said, with another little bow.

"Ah, Miss Carmelita," he muttered as she left the room, "you are good to look upon after seeing nothing but those muddy-haired squatters' wives."

He took the proffered cigarette from Don Hernando, and the two smoked in silence until the servant came to announce that his room was ready.

II.

That evening in the long, dimly-lighted dining-room, Homer McNally met the other members of Don Hernando's family, his wife and his son Ramon. All were much interested in the American, but none save Carmelita could speak English, and McNally kept her engaged in conversation the most of the time, giving her but little opportunity to translate to the rest what they were saying.

Homer McNally was not handsome, but his bright blue eyes were merry and good to look into. He was short, almost stocky, and his hair came dangerously near being red. His complexion was sunburnt to a brick-red. He was of Irish descent, although, being born in America, he had lost the brogue. He told his host he was on his way to Los Angeles to see some friends on business about mines, but that was all he told them about himself.

McNally was more or less of an adventurer and had wandered far in his twenty-six years of life. He was a gambler, although he did not look it; and, had his host but known, it was this very occupation that was the cause of his presence on this lonely rancho, far from civilization. He was usually quick in his movements, and it was this trait that had kept him from the clutches of a Sheriff who took his duties seriously.

Later in the evening, while seated on the long veranda that faced the courtyard, Don Hernando and his son learned to speak a few words in English by the aid of Carmelita and McNally, for the old Mexican seldom had a guest, and he was anxious to make his stay a pleasant one to the American as well as to himself.

Later still on that same evening, after Carmelita and her mother had retired, the good Don learned more of the ways of the American in a game of three-card monte, in which he and his son came out somewhat the losers. But the American did not wish to tax Mexican hospitality too far, or the Don might have come out much more of a loser than he did.

III.

The next morning Don Hernando took McNally over his rancho to show the stranger the vast acreage of it; but McNally soon saw that it was poorly stocked. Carmelita and her brother accompanied them—Carmelita going so that her father might converse with the Americano. But she and McNally again grew so interested in each other that the Don and his son could find little to say to their guest.

McNally swore to himself a dozen times that never in all his life had he seen anything so beautiful as Carmelita on a horse; and at last he even went so far as to tell her so point blank.

When they were returning to the house, Don Hernando suggested that if the Americano would be so good as to make his stay last for a few days yet, he would like to invite his nearest neighbor, Don Miguel Dorttieo, and his family, over the next day to stay for some time. McNally said that he was more than willing, but Carmelita did not seem well pleased with the prospect. McNally asked her why, but her only answer was a toss of the head and an arch side glance at him. Questioned further, Carmelita said that Don Miguel's family consisted only of a wife and a son; the son's name was Dario. On learning the age and description of Dario, McNally did not seem as friendly to the invitations as he had at first.

The evening was spent much as the other had been, with the exception that McNally let the Don and his son off with only a slight loss in the card game. McNally was with Carmelita as much as he could be, and she seemed none too reluctant to have him near—a fact her mother called attention to after they had retired to their rooms.

"But, my mother," complained Carmelita, "I have had so few admirers in all my life, and this Americano is so slow he makes me laugh very much. I am merely enjoying myself with the señor."

"But see that you do no more," cautioned her mother. "I fear you are too bold with this stranger."

"Have no fear," laughed Carmelita.

The next morning, Don Miguel and his family arrived. Immediately, Dario tried to attach himself to Carmelita, only to find, to his disgust, that the American had won much favor in the señorita's eyes. The older people seemed to get as much enjoyment out of this as Carmelita herself, for neither of the suitors could understand what the other was saying, though the glances they shot at each other were eloquent in themselves.

The two men were as different in appearance and temperament as their native lands. Dario was dark, quick-tempered, lithe and handsome. McNally was light, even-tempered, stocky, none too good-looking, and very aggressive withal. Dario breathed hot words of love into his sweetheart's ear, while McNally never mentioned the word, contenting himself with passing rough compliments or laughing and jesting with her.

Carmelita on her part seemed to be having the time of her life. She kept Dario in a ferment of excited expectancy and despair, while McNally was frankly nervous as to what she would do or say next.

That evening, when all were assembled on the veranda, McNally walked with Carmelita around the dimly-lighted courtyard and, while they leaned carelessly against the broken bowl of the old fountain, within sight of all, he told her of his past history—of his gambling, of being forced to leave the norther
State, and last of all, he told her that he lo

y," she said, after a little, "we can't change and it's all right. If you only know the suffering—the awful pain—the weariness—and how good it seems to sink to rest——"

She lay silent with closed eyes a few minutes, still holding his strong capable hand in her weak clasp. Then she opened her eyes and smiled at him, quite in her old way. "I have to stop and rest a little," she said. "Don't make it harder for me by feeling so. I want you to be glad—GLAD that I am going. I—oh, when those times of pain come——" Her voice choked with remembrance—"I don't know how I bear it! At first—when I knew I must go—the day they brought me here, three weeks ago, I fought against it. Oh, Charlie, I pretended to you that I would get well, and I could see that you didn't believe what the doctor and nurse told you. But I know, and I've had time to get used to it. Some whole nights I've lain here wide awake—once in awhile a nurse would come in—but I was not lonely, for you were here."

The man stared blankly at her, and she smiled back at him. "Yes, dearie, you yourself were at home sound asleep with Baby in his crib beside your bed, but the thought of you was here with me. Pictures! pictures! And oh, how they helped to pass the time! All I had to do was to close my eyes and you would come. You, just as you looked the very first time I looked into your eyes after the old minister had married us. You, when you came into the room and knelt down by the bed to look at me and our first baby. You when we stood together beside the little white casket——"

She paused to rest, and the man, to save his life, could think of no word to say. The head nurse had not forbidden her to talk, so he could only let the weak voice ramble on when it had gained a little strength.

"You said one time I never loved you as well as you loved me. Oh, sweetheart, listen! There's something I want you to know that I know—something——"

She paused and looked at him with dark, appealing eyes. "Even now I don't know how to tell you——"

She looked at him with such a searching gaze that suddenly a great fear shot through the man's heart. Almost without thought the fear took form of words.

"That other woman—did you know——?" Instantly he realized what he had said. He could have bitten off the end of his own tongue.

She pressed his hand a little. "That is what I wanted to say," she whispered. "I knew. Aunt Charlotte came to me and told me. She said she thought it was her duty. And I had been afraid—something was wrong."

He stared at her with eyes full of pain and shame. "And you kept still?" he said. "And overlooked it—and forgave?"

She tried to nod her head, but closed her eyes instead. "Forgave"—she whispered.

The man suddenly stood up. He walked quickly around the small white room, looked unseeingly out of the window at the driving rain, and bit his lip hard with his strong white teeth. Then he came back to her and did know or care that the tears were running down his face.

He knelt beside the bed and hid his face. As she had done a thousand times, she gently stroked his hair with a soothing hand.

"I swear to God," he began brokenly, "it was the only time, and I have suffered—well—as much as a man can suffer for such things—but I never dreamed you knew. Now I know you love me if you forgave—that—and kept silence. Not one woman in a million would have done it. That was ten years ago—and all these years——"

She stroked his hair gently. "Do you remember the June, ten years ago, when we lost the little girl baby? She only lived an hour."

He stared at her, nodding his head.

"That was why," she said simply.

"My God!" he muttered. "I ought to have been crucified!"

Silence fell between them for a while. After a little a spasm of anguish shook her, and he reached for the electric bell. A white-capped nurse entered, and swiftly, with deft fingers, injected the merciful deadening drug which would bring relief for another hour. She studied the patient's face with a practiced eye, and said to herself: "She won't need another." Then she did a few noiseless things about the room and left them alone again. The head nurse had said it did not matter how much they talked this morning. It was only a question of an hour or two.

The baby, in his pretty white dress, was being carried from room to room to see the other patients. Wan faces lighted up and eager eyes shone, as the little fellow waved his dimpled hand and prattled his limited vocabulary, and more than one weary sufferer turned on his side and sweetly slept after the head nurse had carried him away.

The head nurse could be sharp over the telephone when occasion demanded, and her gray eyes could turn to steel as she bent her level gaze upon a disrespectful subordinate, but with the helpless and suffering in her care she was sweetness and gentleness itself.

And so she carried the baby from room to room on her morning round and left everywhere a cheery, hopeful word and smile.

After a time she took the little fellow to his mother and put him on the bed beside her. The mother laid her arm across the bed and looked up with her coaxing smile.

The head nurse hesitated. "Dear," she said, "I think I'd better not now. He'd tire you. He's too heavy for your arm."

"Please," she begged, "just a little while?" The nurse laid him down, and the little fellow, tired out with so much excitement, fell asleep. The nurse tiptoed out of the room. It was never her custom to tiptoe, but when a baby had just gone to sleep, the occasion seemed to demand it.

Outside the door she met a young nurse. "Miss Scott," the young nurse said to her superior, "one of the patients on this floor has a harp in her room, and her sister, who plays and sings beautifully, has just come. She asked if she might sing—ever so softly—to her sister. Would it disturb any one, do you think?"

The head nurse considered. The only case near death was the one in the room behind her, and surely it could not disturb that gentle soul. Perhaps it would make the passing easier. She had feared it would be a hard one.

"Tell her to sing," she said. "And, Marie, leave her door aajr and I will open this a little. It can't do her any harm."

The head nurse pressed her cool hand suddenly to her eyes to crowd back the tears. A head nurse caught weeping—it would never do! In the three weeks she had learned to love the little woman in the room there, and she had despised the man. Perhaps an unhappy love experience of her own had something to do with this, but she could see with those cool gray eyes of hers the outer shell of selfishness that covered the man's character. Something good and noble and warmly human might be hidden below—— She stepped back and opened the door softly, and just then something came trembling on the air—a woman's voice, soft but penetrating, sweetly thrilling, ineffably tender and true. The young nurse had told her that a woman was dying—the baby's mother—would she sing sweet, tender songs to help her on her lonely way?

Inside the little white room all was silent. The baby slept on his mother's arm, and the man still knelt beside her. Close and still the small weak hand held his, and her eyes were closed.

"Sweet! Sweet!" she murmured, as the last strains of the song died away on a rippling chord. "Oh, love, to die just now—what could be sweeter!"

The man was silent, and the distant voice and melody went on. Tenderness—motherhood—everlasting love—triumph over death—eternal peace—trembled along the harp strings swept by a practiced hand, and thrilled in the velvety contralto voice, as song after song—the dear, old, familiar songs—trembled along the corridor and into many a room of pain.

The head nurse came softly into the little white room. One glance at the quiet face on the pillow was enough, and her heart gave a sudden quick throb of joy. It had been so easy—so painless.

She touched the husband's shoulder gently, and he rose with bewildered eyes upon her. She went to the other side and took up the sleeping baby. Then she touched the bell and a nurse came.

"Take the baby to my room, please, and lay him on my bed. Put pillows around him so he can't roll off, and cover him up well. Then come back."

She was all business once more—the head nurse. The stunned, stricken man before her answered mechanically the necessary questions she put to him, and stood beside the narrow white bed. Slowly he brought himself to realize the truth.

He spoke to the head nurse, who was swiftly and silently doing the small things which lay in the line of her duty. "Was it hard?" he asked.

The head nurse looked at him. "Hard? No!" she said. "It was easy and beautiful, and you ought to be glad she is gone."

"Glad?" he echoed, staring at her. "What do you mean?"

The head nurse set herself about an unaccustomed task. She suddenly found it necessary to say comforting things. Strangely, to herself, she wanted to! Was it the music or the baby? What had so wrought upon her this morning?"

She looked at the man with kind gray eyes. "I feared she would have a hard death," she said, "but it was just like going to sleep—just like the baby going to sleep. The baby was on her arm, and divine music swept her weary soul on its flood. Above all, you were with her, close to her, you whom she loved with a love few men could appreciate.

He glanced at her sharply.

"Yes," she said, "if ever woman loved her husband she loved you—wholly, completely, absorbingly. She talked of you to me—your goodness, your ability, your success—your love for the baby—your pride in your home. Oh, you are a paragon of a man!" She smiled a little.

"She loved you and believed in you, and still she was willing to go. Willing? GLAD! Oh, how happy we ought to be for her! You will miss her—always—no matter what new ties you form. But you have a bit of her in your dear baby—yours and hers. He is what you have to live for now. You must be strong as a father and gentle as a mother. You must be both to him. She would have it so."

They looked at the quiet face before them. A little smile they had not noticed before lay upon the cold lips. The man stooped and kissed them reverently. Then he straightened himself and walked to the window. Outside a few last drops were falling, but through and through them shone the returning sun, and over in the west a rainbow spread its glorious arch of promise.

In the Colony Club, at tea time, an old new woman, lighting a cigarette, said:

"We new women are really not so new as we think we are. In the thirteenth century there were lots of us. Can anything 700 years old be new?

"The University of Bologna had for professor of jurisprudence Movella d'Andria. She was no more new than beautiful—her charms were so overpowering that the trustees made her lecture behind a curtain. When she lectured openly, the students, their minds wholly occupied with her beauty, could not attend to what she said.

Ghost of Ancient Rome.

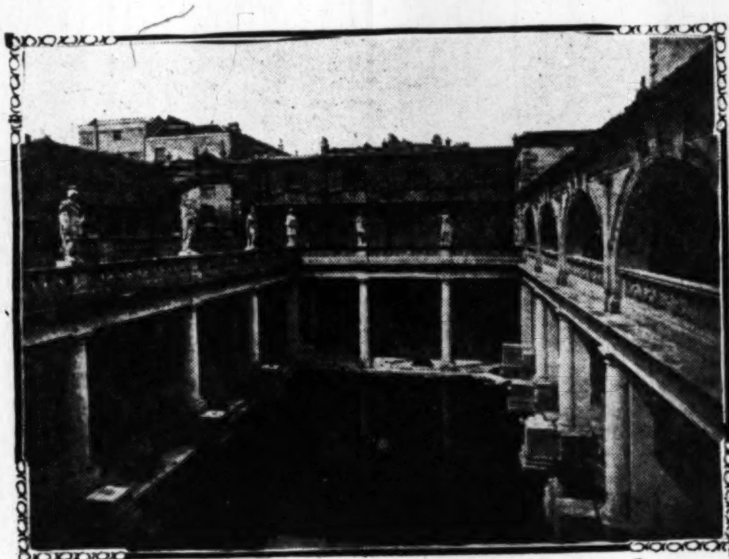
ROME, the Eternal City, is in itself the most fascinating, and at the same time the most disappointing city in all the world; filled with ancient wonders, it is true; but its picturesqueness sadly spoiled by the recent onward march of twentieth-century progress. On the other hand, Rome, the ancient empire, is a constant source of amazement to the traveler who confines himself not alone to Italy, but who journeys observingly through many lands.



Roman Baths at Bath, England.

Bridge over the Gard, Southern France.

Exterior of Amphitheater, Nimes.

Throughout nearly all of Europe and a large portion of Northern Africa and Western Asia, the stupendous monuments of this ancient empire remain to amaze us with their grandeur and enthrall us with their beauty.

Rome, as the "eternal city," is probably historically more familiar to the most of us than any other city of the world; but the far-reaching Rome of the Caesars was of such a vast domain that few indeed there are among all the busy, hurrying millions that go to make up the unit of humanity in this progressive, utilitarian age, who have any definite conception of the wonderful fact that the immortal name of Rome, now standing merely for the third city of Italy, once meant, in sober fact, the world—the whole known world!

The Rome of today is merely a city among cities; and fifty others among the world's great cities excel it in point of population and importance. The Rome of the Caesars, whose once unrivalled glory is now but a dim and shadowy memory on the page of Time, was an empire of such magnificence and such vast extent as the world had never seen in the ages that had gone before, and mayhap may never see again in the ages that are to come.

The lonely hilltops, the desolate desert sands, the mountain fastnesses of three great continents and twenty nations of our present age bear splendid witness, even to this day, to the imperishable glory of the Rome of the Caesars, the mightiest empire that the world has ever known. To those who have followed the fortunes of the Roman eagles through the pages of Caesar's immortal "Commentaries," and of Livy, Sallust, and other writers of that golden age, the widespread magnificence of Imperial Rome is a more or less familiar fact; but to even the most careful student of history who travels for the first time over the far corners of this far-reaching empire must come as a revelation the knowledge that the grandest ruins of Rome are not in Rome itself, and not even in Italy; but that they grace, instead, the lovely valleys of Spain and Southern France, and the lonely hilltops of far-off Syria; while imposing relics of that greatest empire of all the ages are scattered over many different lands in Europe, Asia and Africa.

For over a thousand years, Rome ruled the destinies of the world. From Roma Quadrata to the Augustan age, as kingdom and as republic, she sent her conquering legions north, east, south and west, until imperial Rome, under Augustus Caesar, became the proud mistress of the world.

From Nero to Constantine the way was, for the most part, downward; although under the wise reigns of those imperial philosophers Marcus Aurelius and Antonius Pius, the decadent empire resumed much of its former grandeur; but in the end, the vices and luxurious living of the age wrought their certain and inevitable work of ruin, and the once imperial city, after the transfer of Constantine's court to his new capital on the shores of the Golden Horn in the year 330 A. D., fell into a most pitiful condition of lawlessness and anarchy.

During the Middle Ages, Rome was desolated repeatedly by the wild hordes of barbarians from the North of Europe—Goths and Visigoths, savage Saracens from Asia, and Vandals from Africa. Its temples were overthrown, its palaces laid desolate; its population scattered or put to the sword, and its deserted streets, which had so often resounded with the rumble of the chariot wheels of victorious armies, and glittered with the most gorgeous pageants of the world, were left to grow up with grass, while the Byzantine emperors held their court at Constantinople and the petty lords left in Rome made war upon one another. At one time in the fourteenth century, it is estimated that fewer than 20,000 people inhabited the city where, in the golden age of Augustus Caesar, it is said that 5,000,000 people dwelt.

Under the Popes the city resumed much of its former importance; and, with the foundation of the present Italian kingdom in 1871 the ancient city of the Caesars became once more the capital of Italy.

The present population of Rome is about 500,000; and, although it is a fine city, it is, in most of its aspects, distressingly modern; with electric-lighted streets, strung with the usual network of telegraph and telephone wires, American trolley cars, big department stores, advertising signs, billboards, and other familiar evidences of our "progressive" age helping to destroy what little of the picturesque old side of Rome the desolating hands of Alaric the Goth, Genseric the Vandal, and other spoilers of more recent times, have left to the city of the Caesars.

Every school child is familiar with the existing remains of ancient Rome, the stately Panth ined bridges, the Tomb of Hadrian, the ancie of Constantine, Titus, and Septimus Severus, derful Baths of Caracalla, the ruined temples of rum and the palaces on the Palatine Hill—all familiar to the average boy in school as the Ci or postoffice in the city of his birth; but the iar of all these monuments of the Eternal City—bly the most widely-known ancient structure in world—is the Colosseum, the most gigantic and inspiring of all the mighty structures of that age itless resources and bloodthirsty power.

Built by the forced labor of 60,000 captive Jews, cated by Titus with the unparalleled slaughter of wild beasts and capable of holding an audience of 000 spectators, the Colosseum was, in its day, scene of pageants of matchless splendor and of torial combats of unspeakable ferocity.

OH! THIS IS THE RESERVOIR

imperial box was reached and then, with raised swords, shouting:

"Hail, Caesar! Those about to die salute thee!"

Nero, Commodus and Caracalla themselves fought in the arena, though it may be surmised that the combats in which they engaged were always one-sided affairs. Commodius boasted that he had killed 1200 men for the entertainment of Rome, and it is said that during the reign of Augustus, 10,000 gladiators were killed.

And yet the Colosseum was but one of a hundred similar amphitheaters, built upon the same general plan, and designed for the same sanguinary purposes, located throughout the length and breadth of that vast domain over which the Roman eagles proclaimed the sovereignty of the Caesars. Spain, Africa, Greece, England, France, Sicily, Italy and Asia Minor, all had their amphitheaters and their gladiatorial combats as bloody and terrible as those of the imperial city. Although greatly surpassing in size any of the other amphitheaters, the Colosseum is far inferior in point of preservation to at least three other structures of its kind which still exist for the wonder of the present age—located at Nimes and Arles in Southern France, and at Verona, in Italy.

The amphitheater at Nimes is among the most perfectly preserved of all the structures of ancient Rome, the crypts, the dens for wild beasts, the subterranean dungeons, the massive arches and superstructure, and the great circular tiers of stone seats, all being so perfectly preserved that the French population of the present day gathers here every Sunday afternoon during the season, to gloat over the bloody spectacle of a bull-fight, in the same arena where, 1800 years ago trained gladiators and Christian martyrs were "butchered to make a Roman holiday."

Verily, human nature does not seem to have improved perceptibly during the centuries which have ensued since those days of Pagan Rome.

At Nimes is also the most perfectly-preserved Roman temple in existence. It is a lovely little Corinthian edifice now known as the Maison Carrée, and dates from the year 4 A. D. This beautiful little temple, which is now used as a museum of antiquities, served to some extent as a model for the great church of the Madeleine in Paris.

Among other interesting Roman ruins in Nimes are the Gateway of Augustus Caesar, the beautiful Temple of Diana, and the Baths of Diana, which have been excavated, after having been buried for over 1500 years. The Roman name of Nimes was Nemausus, and the Emperor Hadrian, who did much to beautify the city, at one time contemplated making it his capital.

About fifteen miles from Nimes, near the picturesque little Provencal village of Remonlius, may be seen one of the grandest and most impressive of all the Roman structures known to the present age. It is the wonderful aqueduct across the River Gard, constructed in the year 27 B. C. by Marcus Agrippa, the great general and son-in-law of Augustus Caesar, and known to the world as the Pont du Gard.

There is perhaps no ancient structure in all of Rome that brings us so closely in touch with the mighty engineers of that greatest age of the empire as does this splendid old bridge which still towers across the Valley of the Gard among the lonely hills of Southern France. It spans two hilltops nearly a thousand feet apart, and carries an aqueduct upon three superimposed tiers of massive stone arches at a height of 180 feet above the brawling stream.

This marvelous structure combines gigantic strength with perfect beauty; and words are powerless to describe the overwhelming impression produced by those vast arches, row above row, cutting the deep blue southern sky.

None but Romans could have built such a monument, and have set it in such a place! Empires and kingdoms have risen, flourished, and crumbled away into the ashes of memory; but there, to this day, stands, in its colossal and awe-inspiring grandeur, the mournful Pont du Gard; a fitting monument to the imperishable glory of ancient Rome.

The great bridge is in such a perfect condition that the lower tier of arches is still used as a bridge for the farm wagon road which crosses the river at this point; but the water channel above the topmost tier of arches is now empty, and is sufficiently large so that one may enter it and walk through it from end to end. The purpose for which this aqueduct was constructed was to carry the water of the Fontaine d'Eure across the valley and the River Gard and then through a tunnel cut in the mountain, and on down the mountain to Nimes, where, in ancient times, it supplied the splendid public baths of Diana; and it is safe to say that there is not a finer nor better-constructed bridge in all France today than that gray old Pont du Gard, built by Marcus Agrippa over 1900 years ago. Perhaps the most wonderful thing about this masterpiece of a great race of bridge builders is the fact that it was constructed entirely without the use of mortar; in the same manner as the Colosseum and many other great works of the ancient Romans were constructed.

England is full of remains of the Roman period; as witness the splendid Roman baths which give to the city of Bath its name; the ruins of at least two amphitheaters at Silchester and Cirencester, and the great wall of Hadrian, seventy miles long and built by the Romans along the northern frontier of their province of Britain between Tyne and Salway, for the purpose of keeping at bay their belligerent enemies. The very name of Chester, England's most interesting city, is derived from the Roman "Castra," or camp. Julius Caesar stationed the famous Twentieth Legion here; and for [illegible] years the town was held by the Romans. The old walls which still surround the city were built upon the foundations of the original Roman walls dating from the year 61 A. D., and the position of the four old Roman gates is perpetuated in the very gates by which the quaint old city is entered to this day.

Paris also has many interesting Roman ruins, chief among which are the fine baths within the walls of that most picturesque old monastery which is now a museum of antiquities, the Musée Cluny; and in Germany there are many ruined temples and amphitheaters. The name of Cologne, the "Queen City of the Rhine," bears the impress of the Roman occupation; for here during the first century of the Christian era, in the camp of Germanicus, was born Colonia Agrippina, the mother of that imperial monster, Nero. In later years she returned to the place of her birth; and, in commemoration of the event, bestowed upon the city her name, which, in its abbreviated form, it has ever since retained.

Greece possesssed many monuments dating from the occupation of the Romans, among which the most interesting are the amphitheater at Corinth and one in Sparta; and the Theater of Herod Atticus, the great pedestal of Marcus Agrippa, and the Arch of Hadrian, in Athens.

Among the Roman structures still remaining in Spain, that great Province of Illyria which gave two emperors to Rome, the most magnificent is the Great Aqueduct of Segoria; while Northern Africa is full of ruined temples, splendid aqueducts and mighty amphitheaters, which remain to amaze the builders of this present age. The great amphitheater at Thysdrus in Tumisia is one of the largest in the world, exceeding in size the great arena at Nimes.

Sicily, Asia Minor, Syria and Palestine, all are exceedingly rich in Roman ruins; chief among which must be counted that glorious group of shattered temples which crowns the Acropolis of Balbek. All the ruins of Rome itself do not equal them in extent; and here, before the glorious temples of Jupiter and the Sun, the traveler invariably pauses in speechless astonishment, fully convinced that at Balbek Rome reached the zenith of her architectural achievements. Only the templed wonders at Karnak rival these cyclopean structures in size and grandeur.

Balbek is perhaps the most wonderful evidence of the tremendous vitality of the Roman empire at the zenith of her power. When we consider that Syria was but a minor Roman province, and that these glorious temples were situated among desolate mountains at least forty miles from the sea, we may attain to some appreciation of the might of a nation which could build such awe-inspiring temples in Asia; and at the same time cover Europe and North Africa with structures scarcely less magnificent.

Among all our memories of ancient Rome there is none more splendid than the enchanting vision of that great marble court and the six glorious columns of the Temple of the Sun at Balbek; still supporting, at a height of nearly 100 feet above the colossal foundation stones, an immense section of marble frieze, carved with the delicate tracery of the wild acanthus, which even now grows among the shattered marble blocks at our feet.

Vale! Roma Immortalis! Thy history has been the history of the world for over 2000 years! From thy throne on the banks of the tawny Tiber, thy mighty empire reached out and embraced every corner of the known world; and today the sad remains of countless stately temples are scattered over the earth from the hot sands of Africa to the gold and purple of Scotland's rugged mountains, and from the far borders of Persia to the land of the Moors by the ancient Pillars of Hercules—mute evidence of thy vanished glory—the very Ghost of Ancient Rome!

Trade Marks.

Sherlock Holmes, seated on the board walk, languidly injected a pint of cocaine into his sunburnt arm.

"My dear Watson," said the detective, "let us beguile an hour by picking out the occupations of these vacationists. In their cheap white flannels they all think they look like millionaires, but—ha—ha, what a delusion!

"There goes a waiter. Waiters are to be told by the size of their feet and the soft, careful way they set them down.

"The man in the imitation Panama hat is a tanner. His clear and ruddy complexion gives him away. The tanning trade imparts to the face a peculiarly healthy look. Why shouldn't it? What is good for dead skins must be good for living ones.

"She is a cook, the stout, scarlet lady getting weighed. Her fire, of course, gave her that unmistakable color, but it was not the eating of food that made her so fat. No; cooks have notoriously poor appetites. It was the inhalation of the rich fumes of food in her kitchen that filled her out. Cooks inhale their fat. That is cheaper for the mistress, isn't it?

"The little, thin chap in the large bathing suit is a groom. All good grooms are small and bow-legged, and they all wear tight trousers and are partial to brown.

"Do you see, my dear Watson, the stately man whose overtures the girl in white just repulsed? Well, he is an actor. The muscles in his face show it. Actors, you know, by the continual practice of expression, develop face muscles as marked as the arm muscles of a baseball pitcher."

Fake Remnants.

A country storekeeper, a pair of long, bright shears in his hand, calmly cut a roll of silk into remnants.

"Women," he explained to his city cousin, "are remnant mad. There are women who never buy except at remnant sales. Such women will pass by goods in the piece at a quarter a yard and snap up the same goods in remnant lengths at 30 cents.

"So great is the demand for remnants that it is impossible to keep up the legitimate supply."

The country storekeeper winked.

"Hence," he said, "my present occupation."

You may follow the races; but you can't keep up with them.

The Day When Mrs. Timmie's Baby Had the Croup.

By a Special Contributor.

MRS. TIMMIE'S baby had the croup. She sat in her little sitting-room, with the gas stove turned on, the windows shut, and with an anxious face, while she told Mrs. Green all about the horrible night they'd had.

"You'd ought to use goose oil," Mrs. Green asserted, after she had heard the tale.

"We did everything the doctor told us to," Mrs. Timmie replied in self-defense.

"Doctors are well enough for grown folks," Mrs. Green declared authoritatively, "but they don't understand children's ailments half as well as our mothers and our grandmothers used to. Why, my grandmother had ten children, and she never had a doctor in the house, except when some of 'em died, and she used goose oil on 'em all for colds and croup and pneumonia, and——"

"It's a pity Mrs. Green hasn't some children of her own to use goose oil on," declared Mrs. Brown from across the hall, when Mrs. Timmie repeated Mrs. Green's advice. "You send for a doctor right away every time that child is sniffly. If we had just called a doctor the minute our baby——" She stopped, and Mrs. Timmie drew her wheezy darling closer and turned up the gas.

"But," Mrs. Brown continued, "Dr. Portman is no good. I'd send for Dr. Cathcart if I was you. Dr. Portman is a fool—he can't tell the difference between measles and smallpox, actually."

"Why, my dear child," cried little Mrs. Sands, after examining the bundle of blankets and red flannel that passed for the baby, "why didn't you send right over for me? My Lettie has always been a croupy child, and I just put lard and lemon juice on her throat and lungs, and cover it up with a flannel cloth, whenever she begins to breathe thick, and that settles it. It's foolish to get into the habit of sending for the doctor every time a child gapes. You just come to me, next time, and nine chances out of ten you won't need any doctor."

"No, of course she doesn't need any doctor," chimed in Miss Downer, a portly maiden of uncertain age, from the top floor, as she entered in time to hear Mrs. Sands's last words. "No one ever needs a doctor! There's no such thing as sickness, anyhow; but, so long's you're not Scientists, it might be a good thing for you to have a healer. I know one who never fails to demonstrate—never."

She chuckled at the blue-faced baby. "Just as bright as a new-blown rose, isn't 'oo? The idea of even suggesting that the little darling is sick!

"I'll bring you some literature, my dear. You just read it and learn the truth," Miss Downer concluded, as she left the room.

The next caller was Mrs. Porter, a plump, motherly little woman who was always cheerful. She listened to the story of the baby's illness and the mother's troubles sympathetically. "But you really ought to have some fresh air, Mrs. Timmie," she began; "fresh air and cold water—those are my remedies for everything. And Tom and I, we are never sick. Just open your windows wide, put a cold compress on the baby, and put out this gas stove—and it'll soon be all right."

"But," Mrs. Timmie said timidly, "the doctor said I mustn't let the baby catch cold——"

"Nonsense! You try my way and see. The child won't catch cold in pure air. Just try it." And she hurried away.

"So sorry to hear of your baby's illness, my dear Mrs. Timmie," said the tall woman in a very décolleté white wrapper, who had just moved in on the first floor. "If you'd only known, you might just have telephoned me and I would have given the infant a treatment that would have brought instant relief. Here's my card. Next time, just call me, and I'll give you treatment at half rates—right in the house so, you know." And Mrs. Timmie read: "Madam Vesta Wilbur-Nicholson, Divine-Mental Healer."

Mrs. Timmie is trying to decide whether she'll call a conference of her neighbors, next time the baby sneezes; while Mr. Timmie declares that he is going to buy an acre lot in the suburbs and build a bungalow in the middle of it.

WHY NO BLUE DRINKS?

"Champagne is golden," said a bartender, "beer is amber, claret is red, cream of mint is green, whisky is brown, punches are white, but you will never, never find a drink that is blue. Doesn't the thought of a blue drink seem unpleasant to you?

"Blue drinks could be easily made, but the public would have none of them. Nothing blue would go down with the public.

"Why is this aversion to blue so general? Many reasons have been advanced, but none of them are good. One is that blue, being the color of poison bottles, incites distaste and horror."

MOST WONDERFUL SENTENCE.

This sentence reads the same back and forth and up and down, thus:

The Escape.

THRILLING STORY OF THE FLIGHT OF TWO CONVICTS.

By a Special Contributor.

THEY peered out through the narrow crack between the iron door and the wall. The last man of the long, hideous, striped line filed in through the door of the cell house, and the pretty courtyard with its fountain, its trees and its birds, was deserted. The critical time had arrived. Slipping in through the partly-open door of the "Dark Hole" in the rocky wall, while the guard had his back turned, was easy, and if any of their fellow prisoners saw, they made no sign. Little by little they had swung the heavy iron door shut until it appeared as it should be, closed and fastened. If the warden's check was as hasty and careless as was usually the case, they had passed the greatest barrier between themselves and freedom.

With fast-beating hearts they listened for some outcry or hasty movement on the part of the penitentiary guards that would indicate the discovery of their absence from their cells. Minute after minute dragged itself by in heartbreaking suspense, but still no sign came.

Four years in that hell hole—a hell hole in spite of the pretty fountain, the trees and the birds—and now liberty lay just beyond that ten-foot adobe wall—nothing but a perpendicular height of a few feet between them and the world, between them and life! A long pole lay close to the wall, another evidence of the careless handling of the prison, and to two active men the combination of a pole and rough ten-foot wall was but little more difficult than an open gate. The revolver, pitched over the wall to Garcia two years before by a confederate outside, had been hastily taken from its place of concealment in a cranny in the prison wall, when they found the long-sought opportunity at hand of slipping into the "Dark Hole."

Their hopes rose minute by minute. The check would be completed in another minute or so, and according to the regular schedule, which they had learned by heart in their years of enforced residence, the officials had already passed by their gloomy cell. The long shadows began to steal over the courtyard and the short twilight of the southwest was fast merging into the night. Their absence was undiscovered.

Unless luck played against them, before the morning found the long, hideous, striped line again marching out of the cell house, they would be well down the current of the great river toward the Yaqui country, where the rurales dare not venture. They had planned it over and over again in their lazy siestas under the shadow of the great wall—the dash down the steep slope to the river, the hasty seizing of anything along the river bank that would serve to keep their heads above the current, and then the noiseless night-long drift down the swift muddy current until daylight forced them to hide in the bushes along the shore, and night again came with her welcome shadows.

The heavier-built man of the two softly opened the door a fraction of an inch and peeped forth again. He glanced across the courtyard, and then with a muttered curse pulled the door to again.

"Damme if I didn't fergit all about that moon! It'll be lighter'n day outside in a few minutes. Nothin' t' do but wait till it goes down. Ain't that tough luck, matey?" And the big man swore softly to himself, while the Mexican, easily depressed like most of his people, groaned despairingly.

Finally, the silvery radiance of the courtyard began to disappear before the growing of the long black shadows. The two men watched eagerly, begrudging each moment of the night that the brilliant Arizona moon took in disappearing. The shadows grew longer and longer, until they shrouded the entire court in darkness, and only the top of the wall and the great stack of the power plant and cook house on the further side were tipped with the moonlight. The heavy iron door swung noiselessly on its hinges, and the two shadowy figures slipped softly along the high bluff that formed part of the prison inclosure. A few steps brought them to where the wall took up the task of shutting them from the outside world, and they crouched at its base, softly feeling for the pole than they had carefully marked down while the light lasted.

"I got it," whispered the big man to his pal; and the Mexican, feeling about the base of the wall, grasped the pole, ready to swing it up when the moment arrived. Above them the guard strolled back and forth, tired of his solitary vigil in the little house on the wall, and his long black shadow on the power-house wall opposite indicated his position clearly to the crouching men below him.

As he reached the intersection of the wall and bluff, he turned and glanced over the courtyard, but his thoughts were more on slowness of his tour of duty than of any possible prisoners in the yard below.

As he turned and paced slowly back along the wide top of the wall, a pole swung up and rested against the top. A light, agile figure swarmed up the sloping pole, as quickly and noiselessly as any cat. Arriving at the top, it crouched down flat on the adobe, and another figure came climbing up, less quickly and actively, but without a sound. As it reached the top, the other man stretched forth a helping hand, and the last arrived, grasping it, swung himself up beside the first man. The pole, released from the weight of the big man, sprung back into shape, slipped a little, stopped, and then, starting again, went grating down the wall, to alight on the rocky floor of the yard with a hollow "plonk." The guard, half-way down the long stretch of wall, turned like lightning at the sound. At first he saw nothing, but in an instant his eye caught the shapeless dark mass on the wall. His rifle sprang to his shoulder.

"Damn you, you will have it!" snarled the larger of the two men. His heavy Colts spat a bright stream of fire into the night, a loud "bang!" echoed across the empty yard, and the guard, with a gurgling, choking cry, toppled over into the yard below.

"Get down, quick!" Riley roared at his companion. The Mexican swung off the wall, hung for a second, and then dropped swiftly out of sight, on the side of the wall that led to liberty—or death.

"It's all right, Rile-e-e," he called softly to the other man on the top of the wall. Riley swung himself down, just in time. There was the vicious crack of a Winchester 30-30 from the sentinel across the yard, and something whispered softly just over his head as he hung. Dropping heavily, he followed his companion on his skulking course toward the Gila.

"S-s-s-t!" he whispered sharply to the hurrying Mexican. "No use makin' for the river; they'll be lookin' for us up and down, and every deputy and rurale'll know about it afore mornin'. Our only show is down in the railroad yard."

Inside the great prison there was hurry and bustle. The lights flashed up around the courtyard, and the warden and his assistants, hastily buckling on guns, came running out, excited and perplexed.

"Two of 'em just jumped down from the wall, and they killed Smith," called the sentinel, as he came running around the top and peered out with ready rifle for a sight of the escaping convicts.

The two men, abandoning their skulking attitude, once they were out of sight of the wall, broke into a run. Behind them suddenly rose the long blast of the prison whistle. "Who-o-o-o, whoo-o-o-o, whoo-o!" it moaned in monotonous insistency, maddening to the two fleeing men.

"Damn that thing!" growled Riley. "Everybody in town'll be up and watchin' fer us, to git that $50 reward fer a convict, dead or alive."

"How d'ye like playin' coyote with a pack o' hounds after ye?" he inquired grimly of the terrorized Mexican, as they panted along together. Down the hill they raced, through the adobes of the poorer part of town, past doors that swung open as they ran, and half-dressed men who poked their heads out and watched the shadowy figures that raced down the dark street. As they passed a 'dobe of a better class, there was a sudden spit of flame into the darkness and a bullet kicked dust over Riley's feet.

"Want that $50, do ye?" inquired Riley savagely. Without pausing, he snapped at the doorway whence came the flash, and loud yell following the roar of the Colts, announced a hit for the convict.

Out across the main street of the little town they shot, making for the railroad tracks over against the high bluffs a block further on. A half-dozen figures were running up the street from the direction of the country jail when the two men broke into sight.

"Stop there, or we'll shoot!" came the loud hail from the approaching group.

"I knowed that blasted whistle'd rouse the whole town," groaned Riley. "But they's somebody goin' to git hurt if they interfere with this chicken."

"By thunder! that's them, all right," roared a voice, and in an instant a half-dozen flashes and as many sharp reports urged the two men to even greater speed. Without stopping to return the fire, they dashed down the side street, out of sight of their pursuers.

"Them bloodhounds from the county jail'll be gittin' a half-ounce o' cold lead instid o' that $50, if they don't quit chasin' prisoners from the 'Pen.' Be healthier fer 'em to tend to their own business an' chase their own prisoners," growled Riley to himself, as he pounded along the dusty street in the wake of the Mexican.

They dashed from the side street on to the railroad tracks, running at right angles, and followed the Southern Pacific right of way in the direction of the railroad yards a block off. A switch engine lay just in front of the little roundhouse with steam up, busily engaged in doing nothing in the mysterious fashion common to switch engines. The engineer was lazily leaning back in his leather cushions, with his feet propped up on the quadrant, while the fireman was engaged in rolling a cigarette in a new way picked up from a Mexican in a saloon earlier in the evening.

"Another feller gettin' tired of prison grub," observed the engineer, listening to the moaning of the prison whistle.

"Seems to me that they must have an awful hard bunch o' fellers up there on the hill, er else them deputies and wardens is mighty scared when they try to catch a man that gits away," observed the fireman. "I notice that they hardly ever catch a guy that makes the break; they most allus kill him, instid. Looks to me like they wasn't takin' no chances, but jist shot whenever they got near enough, without sayin' nothin' more about it. 'Member that feller they killed over at Gila——"

There was a sudden footstep alongside the engine gangway, a figure in a hideous striped suit suddenly filled the fireman's side of the cab, and the two railroad men found themselves gazing down the muzzle of an enormous Colts that swung from one to the other without the least impartiality.

"Ye won't git hurt 'f ye don't make any fuss," growled the man; "but we're in sort of a rush, and we gotter borry yer engine for a spell. We ain't carryin' no passengers 'thout a permit from the Ole Man, so you'll have to amble along up the street and git one. Git a move on ye, now——" and the voice took on a menacing snarl.

"By gum! if you ain't Tim Riley, what was firin' over on the Paso and Sou'western, an' killed a man one night in a s'loon in Bisbee, I'll eat my hat!" ejaculated the big engineer, staring at the striped figure with all his eyes.

"That's me," said Riley. "But jist keep mum fer about five minutes, will ye? 'F I kin git out o' town and cut the wires, I'll have a start that'll bother 'em some."

The fireman promptly leaped down from the side of the gangway away from the striped the engineer promptly followed suit, only mumble hurriedly to Riley: "There's some box, there."

The Mexican swung up into the cab from where he had been hanging. Down the street direction of town came the noise of running many voices.

Springing to the heavy reverse lever, Riley threw it over, and seizing the throttle, sent a steam surging into the cylinders of the little yard gine. She was built for quick starting and stopping leaped forward like a rabbit. At the familiar the rolling engine, for the first time the worried savage lines of Riley's face smoothed themselves Under the steady pull of his hand, the throttle open, and more and more steam went hissing into cylinders. The first of the pursuers, running down cross street which led to the yard, stopped Away down the yard, faintly visible in the growing of day, scuttled a little engine, her stack throwing a shower of sparks, and the steady roar of her coming back to his ears like the drumming of a wings. As he watched, she swung around the curve that led eastward, and rolling like a ship disappeared from sight.

Just outside the town, Riley suddenly cut off steam and slugged the little yard engine unmerci She came grating to a stop, protesting like some mal at the rough treatment of the heavy brakes and reverse.

"Git up that pole jist as fast as you know how," Riley at his partner, "an' put them wires out o' Here, take this hatchet an' cut 'em off at the insula an' climb, climb, damn ye, if ye ever climbed The Mexican swarmed up the light telegraph pole monkey, and a few seconds later the thud of his and ping of the parted wires put the town behind out of touch for a time at least, with the world eastward.

Before the Mexican had gotten within ten feet of engine, Riley started her with a jar. The drivers around for an instant, and then with the aid of stream of white sand pouring out ahead of them, bit into the rail, and the little engine fairly through the air.

"A clear track and liberty at the end of it!" Riley joyfully to his partner, busily cramming coal the roaring firebox of the locomotive.

The sky over to the eastward, almost ahead of rocking, rolling little engine, was brightening, and could see objects around them where before had only darkness.

"Not an engine in the whole darn division t' chase with," roared Riley gleefully. "The Overland through while we were waitin' up there in the Hole,' and Number Three ain't due along here till 9:30, an' unless some freight er other comes from Californy, we got five hours start on 'em, that'll put us 'cross the line, on our way for Ameriky."

Clear and sharp above the noise of the speeding gine came a whistle. Riley's face blanched.

"D'ye hear that—what was it?" he demanded of the terrified Mexican, who stood with dropped the sound. Again it came, shrilly and menacingly, in their rear, but still unmistakable—the whistle locomotive. Again the savage and strained look back on the big man's face.

"'F that ain't hard luck!" he snarled. "Any old on wheels can outrun this little old wheelbarry—" He listened for a moment, and suddenly a plan over his mind.

"Stuff her full o' coal and run up the steam kin!" he roared at the Mexican. "Er here, come here, take this here little lever, an' whenever we're comin' to a sharp curve, cut her off a little like this, see?" He leaped over to the fireman's of the engine, and with the ease of years of built up the roaring fire with shovelful after of coal, artfully placed, while the hand on the crept up and up and up, and the little engine through the gray dawn, pitching until Riley could keep his feet. He tore down the bag of water, the gangway to keep cool, and hurriedly lashed it with a bit of string. He ransacked the locker engineer's side of the machine, and stowed away lunch he found, in his shirt bosom. Their speed creased a little, and the exhaust became more nounced. "Ten Mile Hill," muttered Riley, as he over to the engineer's side of the cab and pushed reverse lever forward a couple of notches. With longer blow of the steam, the little machine again to pick up speed, and Riley crept back to his old feeding the roaring fire. As they swept around a curve, Riley leaned far out of the gangway and back down the straight stretch of track they had left. Away back in the gray obscurity hung a little lar of smoke, and under it was a little speck that to be motionless.

"'Bout five miles away," he muttered. "They're in' up on us all right, an' one hour more of this thing'll see 'em close enough to shoot." He peered ahead, and suddenly sprang over to where the crouched on the engineer's seat.

The Story of Willie.

A TRUE TALE WITH A PARTICULARLY HAPPY ENDING.

From London Clarion.

THIS is the true story of Willie.

Before he was born, Willie had the responsible task of choosing his parents. As he had a perfectly free will, he could, of course, have chosen a burglar or a Passive Resister for his father, as some wicked babies do; but, like all unborn men, he knew the difference between right and wrong, and by the free exercise of his will he carefully selected a father who was a rich and respected member of the Church of England.

Soon after his birth, Willie, having perfect freedom of choice, decided to choose for his godmother a wealthy aunt, who not only presented him with a spoon and fork for the christening, but also invested a large sum in the Funds as a present for Willie on his twenty-first birthday.

Some babies are so wickedly improvident that they not only choose fathers who are practically mere paupers, but they even neglect the provision of rich relatives who will bequeath them money. Considering how extremely free the will is, it is such a pity that babies should so obstinately choose to be born poor.

When Willie was 5 years old he had to choose, by the exercise of his free will, whether he would go out into the streets with his mother, singing hymns on the curbstone for ha'pennies and hard words, or whether he would stay in his nursery and take kindergarten lessons from a French governess. He chose the governess, and thus entirely by his own efforts Willie was able, by the time he was 8 or 9, to read and write well, to speak a little French, and to play the piano quite nicely.

Soon after that, Willie was called upon to exercise his free will in the choice of his school. Should he go to the board school and mix with boys who did not sound their aspirates, and who would very likely choose to be common workingmen when they grew up, or should he go to Harrow and associate with boys who spoke so beautifully and dressed so prettily that even their misbehavior was put down to a natural excess of healthy spirits? It is quite clear that Willie was absolutely free to choose between these two schools, just as every other boy is, and that in deciding, after careful deliberation, to go to Harrow, he was personally responsible for the influence of that decision upon his future life.

It is upon leaving school that we are called upon to use our free wills in making the momentous decision of our lives. What shall we be? When Willie left Harrow, he was required to exercise his free will in his choice of a career. Should he be a bricklayer or a journeyman carpenter, or should he go into his father's business as junior partner? No reasonable person can doubt that he had absolute freedom of choice. He might have chosen to go into the city as a clerk at twelve shillings a week; but after carefully deliberating on the matter, he decided to accept the junior partnership at 500 a year. What a pity it is that so many other people do not exercise their undoubted freedom of choice in this excellent manner, instead of deliberately electing to fill a minor position in life, and wickedly keeping their wives and children short of luxuries in consequence.

While Willie was choosing his parents, he also chose his temperament. He might have selected a temperament that craved for "racing specials" and rare liquors and other nameless extravagances, just as a lot of wicked unborn babies do. Instead of this, however, he chose a quiet and domestic temperament, and then from his babyhood upward he steadily and deliberately selected companions of conventional morality and regular ways. He also, by the full and free exercise of his will, chose teachers who during his youth impressed upon him the value of habits of prudence and industry. He very properly reaped the reward of this wise discrimination as he grew up, and instead of squandering his money on Monte Carlo and motor cars, he invested it to bring in regular interest. He could, of course, have chosen a father who would have initiated him into the excitements of horse racing; and as his will was quite free, he could have surrounded himself with friends who would have given him a liking for football matches, which were not to his taste. But by a proper use of his free will in choosing a prudent father and a temperament that did not lean toward the wilder excitements of life, he showed a very nice and laudable discretion, for which he and his friends trustfully expected he would be duly rewarded hereafter.

When Willie was about eight-and-twenty he met a young lady named Mary, who always made a point of being very nice to him. Mary's mother brought her to see Willie's parents very often, and sometimes Willie would be asked to drive Mary home in the family dog-cart. Sometimes Mary's mother would give a garden party or a picnic, and Willie would be asked to come; and at these times Mary would mention quite casually that she, too, disliked horse racing and football matches, and was very fond of playing duets on the piano with a clevererr player than herself.

Somewhere about this time Willie began to exercise his perfectly free will in the direction of matrimony. He was obviously free to choose whether he should remain a bachelor and settle down to a life of solitude, which was distasteful to him, or whether he should become a married man with a bright and happy family around him. His decision was absolutely unrestricted, because he had a free will, and he was therefore quite at liberty to choose bachelorhood or married life. And after allowing his free will free play, he decided to marry.

The selection of a wife is, as everybody knows, a proceeding of the greatest moment. A man's choice is so free that once it is made it is a fixture. Willie was a young man of good appearance and some wealth, and he had a free will. He might, therefore, have chosen a Lancashire factory girl, or an Irish colleen, or a Welsh barmaid. Even in his own native Clapham, there were at least a hundred girls from among whom he could have had an absolute freedom of selection, for they were pretty and prudent and domesticated and ladylike. And in the full and unrestricted exercise of his absolute freedom of choice, Willie married—Mary.

As the years rolled on, the time came at last for Willie to die. And as has will was perfectly free to choose between heaven and—the other place, he chose heaven. What a pity it is that so many people should deliberately, and of their own free will, choose—the other place!

TRAVELED TRUNKS.

A DEALER TALKS ABOUT THE TRAFFIC IN LUGGAGE LABELS.

From a Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—If you wish to travel round the world on 50 cents, there is a London portmanteau-maker who can enable you to do it. For the small sum mentioned you can buy a ticket which entitles you to claim to have traveled from Hongkong to Hobart, N. Z., or elsewhere, and you can visit, en route, Paris, Rome, Monte Carlo, or any other mortal place. Many Americans coming to England take advantage of this marvelous system.

All you need in order to accomplish this journey is a bunch of labels, with the name of the various cities to which you wish people to think you have been. Paste these conspicuously on your trunk, your gripbag, your camera, hatbox, and on the blanket of your "bullpup" if you sport one—and presto!—you emerge before the eyes of the public as a full-fledged globe trotter.

The selling of "traveled labels" to untraveled travelers is a thriving business in London, Paris, and other of the big European centers.. You can buy a whole set of labels covering a certain route. If you wish your friends to think you have just come from the Riviera, you can get plenty of labels for Monte Carlo, Nice, Cannes and other resorts. If you prefer a trip down the Rhine, you can be as easily and as promptly accommodated.

Speaking recently to a label vender in the Strand, the writer was informed that Americans often patronize his wares.

"I let out portmanteaux fully labelled for any trip you like to take. Some people like to stick on their own assortment of labels," continued my informant, "while others prefer trunks, gripbags, and boxes plastered all over. The more a trunk or a grip is worn and belabelled, the better some folks seem to like it, and much of our traveled stock that seems as if it could not stand another public appearance is in great demand. We have one dress-suit case that has labels on it showing that it has been three times around the world. It has been around once, to be sure; and you can see portions of the first lot of labels with custom-house marks. This old case is a great favorite, and there is a 'waiting list' for it.

"We have one fully-labeled 'globe-trotting' bag that brings in $2.50 for two weeks, but the usual charge is from 60 to 75 cents a week. When our customers take these bags away, they are always pretending to lose them and doing other things that attract attention toward them. In one way the bags pay for themselves; that is, the landladies and boarding-house-keepers at the summer resorts are always much impressed by them, and they seem to give their possessors a sort of prestige.

"Not only are labels for continental resorts much in demand for the purposes, but there are full sets of labels for all the fashionable English resorts such as Cowes and the like. At this season we do a rushing business in seaside-resort labels. A customer may go no farther than one of the lesser-known suburbs of London, and yet, when he returns to the city he has all the evidence of having passed the week-end at an expensive resort. I don't know why people do these things," added the dealer, "but they do, and that settles it.

"It is a queer thing," he concluded, "that people living in flats go in more for 'swank' of this sort than others. I suppose they have been shut up so long in the narrow confines of their small, so-called 'homes' that when they start out on their imaginary travels, they like to cover as much of the universe as possible."

The Law of Trespass.

If a tramp fixes upon your meadow as a likely camping-out place, he can be removed by virtue of about sixteen acts of Parliament; but if he is so far above the poverty line as to be able to sport a flying machine it will not be very easy to prevent him from maneuvering over your ground. It is generally understood that a land owner possesses the space above his land as far up as the nearest star, and as far down as he can get; but the details are still awaiting decision by a test case. If a flying man loses an important feather out of one of his wings and falls abruptly into your shrubbery, are you entitled to call for the police, or are you liable for his doctor's bill under the new act? These are questions that a beneficent Legislature should be called upon to settle at an early date.—[M. A. P.

THE late Mrs. Clara Dewey How, of Philadelphia, whose philanthropic work among immigrants made her well known, had a trenchant wit, and one afternoon in Philadelphia, discussing the woman suffrage movement with a clergyman, she said:

"You men are all alike. You all resemble the orphan that Mrs. Stanton and her friends brought up. Mrs. Stanton and a body of ladies from her church, all interested in woman suffrage, once took a little newsboy from the gutter and educated him superbly. They sent him through school and college, and finally made a minister of him.

"This young minister, the work of their hands, preached his first sermon in their church. That was a proud Sunday morning for the good ladies. They thought they had at last firmly planted among the male sex a strong and splendid supporter.

"So, in their best bonnets, they filled the church that Sunday morning. They were on tiptoe with expectation. Who could tell but that their young charge might preach in their honor a woman-suffrage sermon?

"Imagine their emotions when the youth arose in the pulpit, looked calmly and even sternly over the congregation, and announced that his text would be from St. Paul:

"'Let the women keep silence in the church.'"

From Mr. Bangs.

APROPOS of the recent trouble over passes and transfers in New York, John Kendrick Bangs, the noted humorist, said at a dinner:

"These troubles somehow remind me of an old Herve operetta. In this piece occurs, I think, the most ludicrous scene imaginable. To be sure, it is a little ghastly—but nothing to the Salome dance.

'A man in the scene has his head chopped off. He picks up his head and tucks it under his arm.

"'Well,' he says, 'I must be going now.'

"'Put your head carefully out of sight,' says a friend, for if you get on a car they'll make you pay two fares.'

"And the headless body replies:

"'I'll hold it on my knees.'"

None Left Alive.

SENATOR BEVERIDGE, in the course of an eloquent after-dinner speech in Boston, said of child labor:

"When we consider the indifference with which so many of our great men look upon the child-labor evil, we can't help wondering if these men are so very great after all.

"An orator," he said, "was addressing an assemblage of the people. He recounted the people's wrongs. Then he passionately cried:

"'Where are America's great men? Why don't they take up the cudgel in our defense? In the face of our manifold wrongs, why do they remain cold, immovable, silent?'

"'Because they're all cast in bronze,' shouted a cynic in the rear."

A Good Combination.

"I WAS watching a number of young Englishmen shooting at a target recently while I was on the other side," remarked an American army officer, "and at my elbow was a pompous Britisher of the old school, who, after shaking his head impatiently at the frequent misses that were made, at length said to me: 'That only goes to show how the young men of England are degenerating. All this sort of thing reflects on the British nation.'

"'It certainly is mighty poor shooting,' I agreed.

"At that the old gentleman flared up and exclaimed: 'I say! Perhaps you can do better, sir?'

"'If I couldn't shoot better than that, I'd be ashamed to eat breakfast,' I answered.

"Thereupon I was handed a rifle and told to show what I could do. I shot, and the first time I missed the target completely, so the laugh was on me, but before they could laugh twice I plugged the bull's eye six times in rapid succession. At this the old gentleman was a trifle disconcerted, but he complimented me by saying: 'Really now, you can shoot a bit, can't you? I say, there's nothing like a Yankee marksman with an English gun, is there, old chap?'" A. M. A.

A Lovers' Quarrel.

TWO young persons of Germantown had been engaged, had quarreled, but were too proud to "make up." Furthermore, both were anxious to have it believed they had entirely forgotten each other.

One day the young man called, ostensibly on business with her father, on which occasion it chanced she should answer the doorbell.

The young man was game. "Pardon me," he said, with the politest of bows. "Miss Eaton, I believe. Is your father in?"

"I am sorry to say he is not," the young woman responded without the slightest sign of recognition. "Do you wish to see him personally?"

"Yes," replied the young man, as he turned to go down the steps.

"I beg your pardon," called out the young woman, as he reached the lowest step, "but who shall I say called?"—[Lippincott's.

A Child of the United States.

GEN. GEORGE SHERMAN BATCHELLER, who died in Paris a couple of weeks ago, was fond of telling a pretty story of his first term of service in Egypt as judge of the International Court at Cairo. During that period King Edward, then Albert Edward, Prince of Wales, made a visit to the Khedive's realm and a great official reception was given to him at Alexandria. Of course Gen. Batcheller was one of the guests, and as it was an open-air event he took his daughter with him, who was a small person, 5 or 6 years old.

Now the young lady had heard a good deal about the Prince, and she had plans of her own in regard to him. So it happened that when the proceedings were at their height Gen. Batcheller missed her from his side. While he was looking for her, she was edging her way through the crowd of English and Egyptian officers, diplomats and other high functionaries until she reached the Prince's side, where she stood for some time, as her father learned later on, watching him intently.

At last she seemed to be quite sure of his good nature, for she reached out her hand and gently stroked his left hand as it rested on the handle of his sword. The Prince turned around with an astonished expression, but when he saw the pretty child's face smiling up at him he smiled amiably himself, stooped and shook hands with her and asked who she was. She answered:

"I'm Miss Kate Batcheller of the United States."

The Prince was greatly amused, and when they told him who her father was he expressed a wish to meet the general and compliment him on his "resolutely American little girl," as he put it.—[New York Sun.

A Doleful Future.

TWO ladies, who had known each other in years gone by, met on the street. Both of them were married to musicians. One of them who had been married for some years, was pushing a baby carriage in which were three fine triplets, all girls. The other lady had been in the bonds of matrimony a couple of weeks.

"What beautiful children!" exclaimed the newly-married one with interest after the two friends had exchanged greetings.

"Yes," replied the proud mother, "and it was the funniest coincidence. At our wedding supper, the boys who played with my husband in the orchestra, serenaded him and they played 'Three Little Maids,' from 'The Mikado.' Isn't that queer."

The newly-married one gasped for breath and turned pale with horror.

"Merciful heavens!" she gasped, "at our wedding supper, a couple of weeks ago, Tom's friends serenaded him, also, and they rendered "The Sextette" from "Lucia." E. C. C.

That Thirst.

ALFRED GWYNNE VANDERBILT, at a dinner in Newport, talked of the Grand Prix, the famous French race that concludes the Paris season.

"Very sumptuous entertainments are given on the evening of the Grand Prix," said Mr. Vanderbilt. "A Russian grand duke will entertain a party of a hundred or so at dinner at the Ritz. Armenonville, the fashionable restaurant in the Bois, will be crowded with gay parties supping under the trees. All the theaters, all the restaurants, all the hotels will overflow with the aristocracy of France, England, Russia and America.

"They tell a story about a New York man who celebrated the Grand Prix too well. He gave at the Café Americain a large supper, and the next afternoon an overseer saw a valet carrying to this man's room a fresh-water bath.

"'What are you doing with that bath?' the overseer asked.

"'I am taking it to No. 72, sir,' said the waiter.

"'But it is nearly 5 o'clock.'

"'He is still in bed, sir.'

"'But I thought,' said the puzzled overseer, 'that I saw you carrying a very large fresh-water bath to No. 72 a couple of hours ago?'

"'So you did, sir,' said the waiter. 'He drank that.'"

Too Late.

ELMER M. THAYER, a rich resident of North Dana, Mass., became imbued with the revolutionary ideas about marriage that have recently been current, decided that he would enter into a trial marriage, and died of worry over the notoriety his action brought upon him.

A North Dana man said to a reporter:

"It is no wonder Thayer wanted to have a trial marriage, for he always regarded marriage for life as a dangerous contract. He always said that it took a brave man to enter into it.

"Thayer stoutly held that only one marriage in a hundred was happy. He used to say that if husbands and wives spoke their minds frankly, they would all agree heartily with Rudolph Dugdale of North Adams.

"Dugdale took his wife to Boston on a business trip. One fine day they made an excursion into the country. Leaving the trolley car at a quaint village, they pursued their way on foot. Soon they drew near a grade crossing. There was no flagman—only a sign: 'Lookout for the locomotive.'

"Dugdale, who crossed the tracks ahead of his wife, heard her shriek. He turned quickly. A passenger train had rounded the sharp curve, and was approaching the unhappy woman at full speed.

"She stood still, beside herself with terror. The train was almost upon her. Surely she was lost!

"But no. Just in time, with one desperate leap, the woman saved herself. Then, in a dead faint, she fell prostrate in the dusty road.

"'These railroad trains! Always behind time!' said Dugdale bitterly.

"And he seated himself on the grass to wait for his wife to come to."

About Wilbur Wright.

"I WAS at the Le Mans race track last month," said a correspondent, "when Wilbur Wright made his first public flight.

"Our American aviator's triumph was tremendous. The French aërial sharps admitted that the Wrights were quite ten years ahead of Farman, De La Grange, and Bleriot. They gave Wright a wonderful ovation, embracing him, shaking his hand, trying to lift him on their shoulders.

"He took the whole thing indifferently. He seemed rather bored. He smiled and shook his head, disengaged himself as soon as possible, and, with his hands in his pockets, walked away to his workshop whistling.

"I never saw such indifference to fame. I said something to Wright about it. He laughed and answered:

"'Well, I am indifferent to that sort of thing. I want to fly successfully. To become a public idol interests me as little as racing used to interest the Shah of Persia.

"'When the Shah was in London they wanted to take him to Goodwood. But he declined to go.

"'That one horse can run faster than another,' he said, 'I am perfectly aware; which one it is doesn't matter to me in the least.'"

HYBRIDIZING FLOWERS.

A FASCINATING DIVERSION FOR THE AMATEUR BOTANIST.

By Ernest Braunton.

TO carry on extensive experiments in hybridizing and crossing, as is necessary in commercial establishments, is a tedious and not altogether pleasing work; but to an amateur who may choose what flower he will and the extent to which he will indulge, there is a fascination that never fails to interest and satisfy. In taking up this pastime one should choose flowers with few and conspicuous floral organs. Composites, of which the aster and chrysanthemum are common types, should be avoided as being too complicated. These flowers are really composite heads made up of a great number of florets, so that there are many to be emasculated and many to be pollenized. In the very double sorts the organs are so obscure that nearly all the blossom must be shorn away before the real work begins and we have plenty of flowers, more simple in construction, which need not be destroyed and have their organs fully exposed. Even the most double carnation is easy to manipulate compared with composites.

To those who like geraniums, in any class, fine material may be found on all sides and the results of hybridizing are always fair and often excellent. Pollenizing a good white with an equally fine crimson or scarlet, or the opposite cross, will give one some interesting shades of color when the young seedlings come into bloom. No class in the vegetable kingdom is easier or more interesting for hybridizing experiments than bulbous plants, though among these the true lilies are hard to cross; nearly all the rest are very easily fertilized. The amaryllis of various colors and shades (properly hippeastrums,) are an eminently satisfactory group for experiment; but one must wait until the third year to see the result of his labors. The writer has, for several years, handled gladioli for the satisfaction of noting influence of parent flowers on the offspring regarding color, form, habit, etc. At the same time all progeny below a certain standard have been thrown away so that the remainder are now better than any in the local market and each year growing finer through selection. No class of plants are more easily manipulated and none require less care and culture. The method of handling was fully described in this department a year ago.

One is often asked if he knows what the results of his labor will be. Most assuredly not; if so, the writer would abandon the work at once, for it would not be experimental. It does occasionally occur in gladioli that an exact cross is obtained. During the present summer the writer had flower some seedlings obtained by hybridizing the gladiolus "America" with one from a Santa Ana nurseryman which the writer called "Bengal," on account of its tiger-like markings on the darkest possible of crimson background. "America" is a very delicate light pink and of the two seedlings flowering this summer both were midway betwixt the parents in both color and form, though differing slightly from each other.

Truth is stranger than fiction, and the ways of nature are inscrutable, so we may not, with any certainty, forecast the results of hybridization. If one is striving for certain definite results, the nearer the parents are to the desired type the better the chances of success and the shorter the period of time necessary to arrive at the desired goal. No man, wide though his experience be, may establish and put in operation any set of rules to govern the experimentor in gaining certain results in the interesting work of hybridization. In dealing with paints or dead material, the laws of colors are well and definitely known, but when we mix living plants, we do not know what proportion of the color of either or both parents will be utilized in coloring the offspring. Seedling plants, like members of the human family, often revert to some type known only in remote ancestry, so that the resultant flowers from a cross of a white and a pink gladioli will sometimes come scarlet, crimson, or some shade darker than the darkest parent, though such results are only occasional and exceptions to general results. We shall never know the results of hybridization until the offspring flowers or fruits.

The Century Plant.

One of the most majestic plants when in bloom is our so-called century plant which blooms, not at a century in age, but at any time from eight to twenty years old, according to soil, water supply and aspect. So rapid is the development of the flower stalk that one may visit the plant each day and note its upward march without the aid of a yard stick or other measure. Some of these huge flower spikes are truly arborescent in growth; one now in bloom in the grounds of Dr. H. M. Bishop at 2627 Hoover, being fourteen inches in diameter at the base and thirty-six feet high, a truly impressive sight.

Three Potato Vines.

In Southern California we grow three "potato vines" (so called from the fact that their family name is Solanum, the same of the common potato, which is Solanum tuberosum. They are also closely allied to the tomato, which was once called S. esculentum, but now known as Lycopersicum (which translated literally is wolf peach.)

These three climbing potato vines are S. Wendlandi, S. jaswinoides and S. Seaforthianum. The first is by far the most handsome and bears huge trusses of large lavender flowers, one of the showiest climbers we have. The two others are quite similar in gross aspect except in the former the flowers are white and in the latter a deep blue. Close inspection will also show the foliage to be quite unlike. All are desirable garden plants, native to South and Central America and the West Indies.

Uses of Eucalypts.

One species (E. viminalis) known as the manna gum, yields a sweet gum much relished by the natives as an article of food. This species is much grown about Los Angeles. Several species yield heavily of tannic acid, yielding above 65 per cent. One quite extensively planted in California (E. tereticornis) yields 62 per cent. of tannic acid and 28 ounces of oil from 100 pounds of dry leaves. E. naemastoma, which yields 66 per cent. of tannin, gives 33½ ounces of oil from 100 pounds of green leaves. E. siderophloia, well known here, yields 28 per cent. of tannin and 42 per cent. of arabin, by which it will be seen that they yield numerous products of commercial value. In Australia the leaves and small branches of E. microtheca are placed in water to poison fish, and the inner bark of the same species is used as a poultice for snake bites.

Begonia Collections.

Very few plants will rival with these for the adornment of gardens, and for so many different purposes. From the very dwarf, eminently suitable for borders and bedding out, through the tuberous ones, so much improved in late years and offering every conceivable shade of color, except blue, to the shrubby and half-climbing kinds, they afford an immense variety of forms and colors; and all of them appear to be quite at home in Southern California. Half-shade and plenty of moisture will suit them better, but they also hold their own quite remarkably, right in the sun, and with little water.

CENTURY PLANT, DR. H. M. BISHOP'S, 2627 HOOVER ST.

Herbaceous Borders.

One of the most attractive features to any well-ordered garden and one quite common to old English places, is the mixed border of herbaceous perennials, in which phloxes are always prominent subjects. The climate of California is especially adapted to the various varieties of hardy herbaceous plants and some lovely effects may be obtained by a judicious arrangement of them either in a large or small scale. An ideal position for such borders is where the background of a hedge is obtainable; in front of this in beds of suitable breadth and length with preferably irregular outline on the outer margin arrange the various plants, grouping the taller specimens in the background and the dwarfer sorts in the front. Phloxes are ideal plants for the front row, especially if interspersed with aquilegias. Shasta daisies, various ornamental grasses, etc. For the back rows hollyhocks, rudbeckias, perennial sunflowers, delphiniums and other perennials of similar character may be used. In arranging a border, formal disposition of the plants should be avoided; it is a matter, however, which for beautiful results will largely depend on the taste of the individual.

The Matilija Poppy.

Our Southern California Matilija poppy is the handsomest of the handsome in the floral wealth of California. No garden should be without it, but for small grounds it must be remembered that it spreads quite extensively. Not particular about soil, growing finest on sandy washes. Will stand much more cold than it is generally supposed and, with slight protection, it can be grown in most of the eastern Atlantic States. Its immense, sweet-scented, snow-white flowers will open for months in succession, and keep well in water.

PARKS AND POLITICS.

GOOD REASONS WHY THEY SHOULD BE SEPARATED.

So much has been said by the writer, in this department, regarding the baneful influence of politics in park affairs that words of corroboration from higher authorities are extremely welcome. Those most interested in our parks will find much of wisdom in the following opinion of Olmsted Brothers, the noted landscape architects of Boston. Some of the suggestions might be applied, with great benefit, to the conduct of Los Angeles park affairs:

"Parks should not be brought into politics not only for the important business reasons that apply in all departments of municipal administration, but for the more important reason that the essential requirement of parks is that they should be naturally and artistically beautiful and because politicians as a class give small consideration to matters of art and beauty of natural scenery and are careless whenever they conflict with their business interests. The schools may not be beautiful, but yet may serve all practical purposes; bridges may be and usually are hideous, but we can use them and hope for better things some day, but if parks are not beautiful, they are very nearly useless.

"Politicians, as a class, work as hard for power and pecuniary success as any other class of business men, but like most business men, especially retailers, they do not waste much time or money in trying to inspire the masses with high ideals or in improving and refining their taste. Politicians do not make good park commissioners, not alone because they are not good judges of landscape beauty, but because they are strongly biased in the direction of deciding every question in the way that will gain them and their party friends and votes, and because they will inevitably sacrifice what seems to them such trivial things as matters of appearance to oblige people who generally have some personal or selfish or party end in view. The number of cases that arise in park administration in which a politician will decide contrary to the requirements of good taste are far more numerous than any one who has not had long experience of park matters could imagine, or believe if told.

"A political park commissioner will be apt to favor the determination of the number of and the selection of sites for parks that will gain him or his party the most votes, or that will please pecuniarily interested persons or corporations. He will surely prefer to decide all such questions without expert advice, knowing that without such guidance he can surely decide according to his own interest and that of his party, while with it he may be hampered in securing what he wants done. He will favor the employment of experts if they must be employed, who will be subservient and 'easy to get along with,' and he will prefer a superintendent who will purchase supplies from the 'right' dealer. He will want to grant licenses for all sorts of amusement concerns regardless of the park landscape, provided only they are likely to be popular and are run by the 'right' men; and so on. As they know the public admire gaudy effects, they cover the park lawns with the most brilliantly-colored foliage plants and park buildings with novel and conspicuous details painted with showy and contrasting colors. Naturally, with park commissioners of this type of mind, the higher beauties of nature and of art in the parks stand very little show to be preserved or created.

"Parks should be kept out of politics, not only by having politicians appointed as park commissioners, but, remembering that 'money is power,' by taking the power of voting the annual park appropriations from the city government by means of a law giving the park commission a certain minimum and maximum percentage of [illegible] of the assessor's valuation of the taxable property in the city, and providing the long-term loans for purchases and short-term loans for improvement, based on a percentage of the total of assessors' valuation of taxable property in the city and requiring bond issue by the city government in some cases, when they have been approved by a referendum in some cases, additional voluntary appropriations by the city government may also be permitted by law."

Cocos Plumosa for Streets.

We have no other street tree or plant which compares favorably in beauty or luxuriance of tropical foliage with Cocos plumosa. It is somewhat expensive, and for that reason has not found general favor for street use. In practice this palm is more used on private driveways, but where planted on public streets, as is the case in many Southern California towns, it proves the strongest attraction to the eastern tourist of any plant used for like purpose.

School Gardens.

We still have school yards that are plain expanses of dirt or gravel, and school gardening may well start on the work by interesting the pupils in the embellishment of the grounds. A plan or suggestions for a plan should first be obtained from acknowledged authority and the work carried out in strict accordance therewith. Neither the teacher nor school trustees should be allowed to plan the grounds for the reason that the embellishment is bound, in a measure, to impress some of the students, and it is just as well to give them the benefit of the best talent obtainable. It is far better for the children to see how properly to plan and plant than it is to show them how not to do it.

Such rank ignorance prevails regarding landscape gardening and so much execrable work is done that had the writer his way every public grounds would have to be planned, by a licensed landscape architect based on a civil service examination. A list of questions should be obtained from several of the leading men in the profession throughout the United States, and no one should be allowed to plan public grounds or superintend the laying out and planting of same except he had successfully passed the requisite examination and obtained a State license. Until something of this kind is done we shall continue to see parks and grounds about public buildings fairly desecrated by improper planning and planting.

COCOS PLUMOSA AS A STREET TREE.

After the school grounds are planted with the fundamentals (trees and shrubs,) instruction should be given the children in the care and cultivation and care of the incidentals or flowering plants. By the time the school yard is planted in good shape, the children will have become sufficiently interested in the work to be given charge of the little individual gardens which should have been arranged for in the general plan, but considered separately and in detail. Aside from the actual work at school the experience gained will serve as a basis for modeling at least some of the details of the home grounds, also training the children to properly care for home-grown plants or to see that some one else treats them in a rational way. Such work will eventually have a very marked and beneficial effect upon the appearance of the town or section. In a country like ours, where gardening may be carried on every month in the year, school gardening should receive more encouragement and support than in less-favored climes.

Interest in Civic Improvement.

There has never been a time in the history of Southern California when so much interest has been manifested in civic improvement, especially the horticultural phase, as now. Not only in cities and towns, but in rural communities the work of reservations for parks, their planning and planting, street trees, improving public grounds, and many other features of civic improvement are receiving most unusual attention at present. That town or district neglecting the opportunity now presented to keep up with the procession will soon find itself a straggler behind the marching column of progress in Southern California and all too soon captured by the enemy—stagnation. He who coined the saying, "Nothing succeeds like success," may as well have said, "Nothing progresses like progress," for the community that is most alive grows the fastest. Surely, "to them that hath shall be given," in proportion to their endeavors to attract and interest the home seeker and business investor.

Public Rights in Natural Scenery.

Though private ownership of land has never been more secure than at present or the owner more protected in his rights all fair-minded persons are asking if these rights are not often exceeded in the use of the land. Certain institutions, manufactories, etc., may not be built in residence districts, where legal restrictions are based on "the greatest good to the greatest number"—a majority rule—the basis of our United States government. Natural beauty should be a common heritage, for it is the chief natural enjoyment of the human family, and we have the same right to it that we have to pure air, and should as quickly resent any interference therewith. Billboards, unsightly buildings, tall fences, the cutting down of fine trees except to clear building sights should be subjects for legal restriction, lest our fair city eventually become altogether artificial and unsightly. Beautiful grounds, well-planted streets and parks go far to counteract the destruction of natural beauty by the selfish and narrow-souled land owner, but these can never entirely replace the great charm which natural scenery holds for one and all. If the departing mortal has not left the world, in some way, better than he found it, he has lived in vain.

Advertisements on Poles.

One large eastern city has been carrying on a very successful campaign against advertising on the poles of public corporations. One of the leaders of the movement says: "It is an offense punishable by a fine to paste or tack any kind of a card or poster on any pole in the streets, but we do not intend to arrest and prosecute any one if the end can be obtained in other ways. In the last few weeks we have prevailed upon a leading baker, a packer with a national reputation, and the agent of a big baking-powder concern to send out men to remove their cards from the poles. There is, however, less trouble with the large concerns than with the smaller ones which confine their advertising to a limited district. The habit is contagious, and one card on a pole brings others. In the past the most effective method was to organize the boys into a volunteer police force and pay them for all the cards removed from poles. Formerly we paid 100 cents for each 100 cards and effectually rid the posts of the defacing cards."

Little Things Count.

An improvement company subdivided a farm, and in place of cutting down a large tree in the sidewalk they went to some expense to lay a stone walk around both sides of it. As no one purchased the lot by the tree in time it died from lack of moisture. Some one removed it for wood, and a family near-by planted flowers in the circle. Then the family left the neighborhood, and attending to the space was "nobody's business." Year after year hundreds of people walked by the place daily. This year a man a half-block from the circle had a tree planted in it. The tree is growing. A great many have spoken well about it. He did not have to do it, but he did it. He does not expect to buy the lot, but his little girl sees the tree every day. Every locality has little opportunities for all who are willing to do such little things.

Well Trained.

A number of jockeys and horses had lined up for the start of a steeplechase, but a delay occurred because a tall, rawboned beast obstinately refused to yield to the importunities of the starter. The patience of that worthy was nearly exhausted. "Bring up that horse!" he shouted; "bring him up! You'll get into trouble pretty soon if you don't!" The rider of the stupid animal, a youthful Irishman, yelled back: "I can't help it! This here's been a cab horse, and he won't start till the door shuts, an' I ain't got no door!"—[Harper's Weekly.

Explained.

Bridget: Yes, mum. Me policeman cousin was after droppin' in to tell me of me uncle's death.—[Harper's Bazar.

Practical Poultry Culture · in the Southwest.

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF STANDARD-BRED POULTRY AND THE PEOPLE WHO GROW IT.

A VOICE FROM WYOMING.

COWBOY TURNS TO POULTRY BREEDING AS AN OCCUPATION.

By Henry W. Kruckeberg.

NOTE.—Short articles of a practical nature are cordially solicited from breeders and fanciers, relating their experiences with poultry, giving their successes as well as failures. The writer will be glad, in so far as lies in his power, to answer inquiries of public interest bearing on any phase of an enlightened poultry culture, such as feeding and management, disease and its prevention, market conditions, fancy points, etc. The co-operation of utility breeders and fanciers is cordially solicited, to the end that the best thought and practice in an enlightened poultry culture may find a healthy expression in these columns.

VERILY "The Times do circulate," for here comes a valued reader from way off in the wilds of Wyoming writing to this department for information touching the prowess of the American business hen. Though evidently a free lance upon the stock ranges of our Rocky Mountain region, he nevertheless writes with intelligence, not to say a certain humor, as follows:

"Through the kindness of a tenderfoot friend I have had the pleasure of reading through a bunch of your illustrated Sunday issues. I am not handing out any 'blarney' at all when I say I was delighted with it. I am something of a raconteur myself, and your 'Good Short Stories' struck me just right.

"What I am most interested in is your poultry lore. I have been endeavoring for some time to break into the chicken business. For more years than I care to remember I have been riding the Wyoming ranges. But the cowboy is today very much in the position of Othello—'his occupation is gone.' As such honest industries as cattle rustling and stage robbing have also become obsolete, it was necessary to adopt some line which would insure, if not wealth, at least a competence. I have a ranch ideally located for chickens—water, grass, shade, etc. But the business seems to be one of strange and harassing vicissitudes. Last fall I made a move; beginning, in keeping with a not-too-plethoric pocketbook, I bought four hens and a rooster from a neighbor. The hens were white, but of what breed they were I do not know. The rooster's family tree had its roots, or at least some of them, in Plymouth Rock soil. Like many another novice, I had reared, on paper, an imposing edifice of success, and saw myself in my mind's eye the proud possessor of dozens of broilers and possible egg producers in the near future. These 'chateaux-en-espagne' were sadly wrecked by the fact that my hens seemed infected with the race-suicide heresy, and refused to adopt motherhood as a profession. Finally one became converted to the laudable theory of our revered and beloved President and decided to sit. Her good intentions were nipped in the bud by a marauding coyote. I then rode fifty-five miles in the storm of last May and carried on my shoulder, in a sack, an Irish Black Red Game cock and his mate. Later I got a couple of hatches, but I want to get into some good breed, or two breeds—one of layers and one adapted for table purposes. Both would pay well here. I have taken the liberty, therefore, of asking your advice on the matter and of requesting you to refer me to some reliable poultryman in your neighborhood. I notice also that your city is a pigeon center. I would like to buy—if price is not too high—a pair or two pairs of pigeons of some suitable breed from which to raise squabs."

It is certainly pleasant to learn that one's words in the way of imparting practical information along poultry lines are appreciated. Nevertheless, our correspondent's letter is not only breezy and humorous, but also contains a note bordering on the pathetic. The idea of a man who has spent his life on the plains in the capacity of a cowboy herding, possibly, thousands of head of cattle, expecting a competence and a residence on the sunny side of Easy street from the product of four hens and one rooster, breed unknown, is certainly a step ahead of the wildest dreams of chicken wealth that we have heard of in Southern California.

Of course the "Lord of the Manor" of the establishment that contained the four hens, having Plymouth Rock blood in his veins, shows that our friend was somewhat on the right track in the selection of a breed. If the females of this embryo chicken seraglio being white of color denoted White Plymouth Rock blood, the beginning was certainly not bad. However, in view of the fact that the entire bunch were addicted to race suicide, we are quite convinced that they were no relations whatsoever of the strain of birds that find their home on Sagamore Hill, over whose destinies our beloved President rules. Going a step further, we have always supposed that Paul Revere's ride was about as patriotic a trip as was ever taken on horseback, but since reading the note of our correspondent, who mounted the bronco and rode fifty-five miles in a storm, carrying on his back an Irish Black Red Game cock and his mate, we think he deserves immortality from some of the Wyoming rhymesters. If the "poesha" of the Wyoming region does not come through with a ditty worthy of the occasion, it is not impossible that The Times' poultry sharp may supply the omission.

To descend, however, from the region of Parnassus to the Wyoming chicken yard, we would suggest to our correspondent that he try any of the Mediterranean or American breeds for his purpose. The former are recognized as good laying birds, while the latter, also good for egg production, possess the added advantage of being good table fowl. Avoid the mongrel and tie to the standard-bred bird. In other words, breed only the pure bloods and try to get your parent stock from strains of well-known economic value, either for egg production or table purposes. The fact that our correspondent possesses a ranch with an abundant supply of pure water, meadow or grass land, with here and there tree and shrub growth offering shade, certainly offers ideal conditions for the poultry business. If followed along intelligent lines, there is no reason why he should not make a success of the venture, provided always that he will house more than four hens and one rooster from which to gain a livelihood. As a matter of fact, an annual output of 1200 to 1500 head will afford a living. This number will give something like 600 laying hens; the surplus males, of course, to be disposed of for market purposes. To bring the question a little closer than mere classes, we do not think a mistake would be made in selecting either Brown or White Leghorns and Barred or White Rocks for his purpose. Two breeds are quite enough to occupy a man's attention if in the commercial poultry business. A larger number only leads to a diversity of product, both in color of eggshell and also in size and weight of carcass, which is not desirable. The market demands a uniform product. Another point to consider is that though there is no difference in the economic value as between a white and a brown-shelled egg, the general tendency is for the market to give preference to a white, because they are more easily candled, thus saving time when in the hands of the trade, as the poultry centers now candle and grade all hen fruit irrespective of age.

The probable returns from a ranch breeding annually something like 1200 to 1500 head is a matter depending largely upon local conditions, namely, cost of feed, value of land, labor, expense, etc. A strain of good laying hens should average, under favorable conditions, $1.50 per head profit per annum and the average number of eggs should be about 150 per hen. This, of course, varies more or less with different localities and management.

A Nice Portable House.

Mrs. Royce of South Pasadena has some nice portable houses. The framework is strong, but not heavy. It is boarded up on three sides, with about nine inches at the bottom left open. The roof is a shed roof with about a foot slant, the house being about five feet in front and four behind, and deep enough for three perches. There is no floor and no dropping-board. The droppings fall on newly-made ground and there is a constant draft over them so that they dry quickly and are easily removed in fine condition. With a tight roof and three sides, no drafts can come across the perches. The front of the house is burlap stretched on a frame the size of the front, and hinged at the top. This drop front is never down except on a very stormy night, and it is a question if it is ever necessary to drop it, in such a mild climate as ours. It is propped up with one small post and makes splendid shade during summer and a water-tight roof in winter. Mrs. Royce has a separate nesting-house, using this kind of house only for night perching, which makes the house most sanitary. The hens lay and breed in low houses.

Where one has room, this is nice to do, but if one is short of room, instead of having three perches, he can put a row of nest boxes in the back of the house against the lower boarding, which would keep them off the ground about nine inches. The back perch should be far enough away from the boxes so that no droppings will fall into them; and a cover in the shape of a wide board should be hinged to rise and fall above and upon them. At the morning feeding this cover should be hooked up against the back of the house to let the hens in to lay, and at the night feeding it should be let down so that no fowl could conclude to sleep on the edge of a nest box and drop into the nest. It should fall in a slant so that no fowl could perch on it. It is better to use individual boxes which can be taken out and sunned.

Mrs. Royce's houses have no handles for moving them but it adds usefulness to the house to nail firmly to each side a two-by-two arm letting it project about four inches front and back. If left longer, hens will perch on them for the night. With a strong frame one person can move a house easily on to a freshly-spaded ground, by using the four handles on each corner of the house, one at a time. The drinking water is kept in the shade of a house.

There is just one out connected with these houses: If during the night a hen gets restless and a quarrel ensues on the perch and a bird falls down in the dark, she will keep backing on the ground in search of a refuge. She will not fly up in the dark as a rule to the perch. If she nests where she falls, she will get cold in the draft. It is well to put a big box in one of the back corners of the pen for a refuge in case of such an accident where the fowl will at once shelter from the drafts. No sick fowl not perching should be allowed in such an open house, but be put in a hospital.

The University Farm Short Course.

Much interest is being shown in the course in Poultry Husbandry to be given at the University Farm at Davis, from October 12 to 20. This interest is justifiable because the people who are to give the instruction are experts in their several lines and the subjects which they present are vital to the industry.

Prof. Jaffa has been connected with the university for many years and has made an especial study of feeding problems. He is at the head of the poultry work of the Experiment Station at Petaluma, and has published several bulletins on poultry subjects. Mrs. Basley is well known throughout the State through her lectures at farmers' institutes on the care and management of fowls. Her home is in Los Angeles county, where she has been a successful poultry woman. Mr. Huntley is foreman of the Petaluma Poultry Station, and will instruct in judging fowls; a subject in which he handled by two well-known veterinarians: Dr. is assistant veterinarian of Berkeley, and was time instructor in the poultry course at Cornell sity. All poultrymen and women would do spend the eight days at the University Farm at beginning October 12 next.

A Smart Hospital.

The smartest kind of a hospital for hens is one, a little low house just big enough for one fowl no floor. Planning to care for a great many sick is all nonsense. No very sick fowl should be al live long. Every flock of hens should be watched eating, and if one fowl does not eat well, take of the pen and give her a hospital-house for fresh water, grains, greens, and study her. The should be placed over soft, newly-made sun-warm in the summer, and in winter over a board floor than the floor space of the house, with a second just the size of the floor space. It can stand orchard, and in rain the water will run off the down to the big platform floor and off, while the the house being higher by a thick board, will not water, only as rain spatters in at the open placing a board from the roof to the ground at the no rain can spatter in. The sick bird can have without being damp if the flooring is raised ground, resting upon bricks or stones or blocks making a draft underneath the house. The inclined to eat, if taken out early to a hospital and especially treated, will soon be well, while with the flock unnoticed, will contaminate the water and infect the whole flock perhaps with a gious disease. A few of these little houses hundred well-kept hens need.

Prevention of Disease.

Prevention of disease is the great key to poultry cesses. No bird that eats poorly is well. A generally is not in the egg business. If a tended to. If many birds eat poorly, is wrong with their environment, and if

Only a couple of miles to the south of the Gable lie the Scafell group of peaks, with the 3200 feet of Scafell Pike rearing high above its neighbors, the most lofty summit in England. But it is the Scafell Crags that most draw upon the energy and resource of the climber. Along the foot of these mighty cliffs runs the Rake's Progress, a sloping and broken-up ledge from which the majority of the Scafell climbs start, and it needs a sanguine temperament and a trifle more than the average amount of nerve to look aloft, when sleet, drizzle, and racing mists envelope these great black cliffs, and to calmly pick out a particular climb, and climb it.

Many are the famous names that have left their stamp upon Scafell Crags. Men with a pluck and daring that dazzles the humbler essayist as he scrambles, with the moral support of an eighty-foot Alpine rope tied to a "safe" leader. Only this last year has seen a fresh and hitherto deemed impossible climb added to the Scafell list. A climb that starts from the "Progress" a mere crack, and opens out thirty feet above into rock face and nothingness for the entertainment of those cragsmen who find life a burden, or who are blessed with an adhesiveness that a fly paper alone can emulate.

To the north of Wastdale lies another playground of the cult, a great citadel of rock that stands out from Pillar Mountain, a mighty sentinel above the Ennerdale Valley. Its walls are almost sheer upon every side, but sufficiently broken into to allow of human hold, and upon it the expert finds some of the best climbing in the district. But woe betide the party who come late to their climb upon the redoubtable rock, and have it but half-accomplished when darkness descends upon them. The route, both up and down, is then fraught with danger, and, given the addition of but a slight ice glaze, an impossibility. This experience fell to the lot of three exponents of the craft one Christmas Eve not many years ago, and they had to spend the night far upon the north face wedged in a split boulder of rock, the prey of every icy blast, in company with but one stick of chocolate, and their far from Christmas-like sentinels.

E. ELLIOT STOCK.

Treed by a Stallion.

A PROSPECTOR'S THRILLING ADVENTURE IN NEVADA.

By a Special Contributor.

THOUGH not very widely known, yet there are thousands of wild horses roving over the valleys, plains and mountains of Nevada. In some parts of that State, these wild horses are very numerous, herding in large droves, and in other regions roaming in straggling, scattered bands. They are rarely found except in uninhabited and very sparsely-settled parts of the State.

It is roughly estimated that there are at least 15,000 wild horses in Nevada. In fact, they are becoming so numerous that they have been declared a public nuisance, and war has been waged against these equine nomads. They consume an immense amount of public pasturage, and in many cases do great damage to crops.

Hundreds of them are being hunted and killed for their hides, and a great many are caught and broken to the saddle and harness. Though generally much smaller than the average American horse, these wild animals are tough and wiry, and high-spirited, and when well broken become very serviceable—under saddle or in harness. In their native state, they are extremely wild, and very difficult to approach, taking to flight at the first signal of danger. However, the stallions are, at certain times, very savage, and do not hesitate to attack either man or the domesticated horse. Each wild stallion has his chosen harem, the number ranging from half a dozen to two dozen. During the breeding season, when the colts are young, the master of the equine seraglio is very vigilant in guarding his numerous family, and quick to rush to the defence of his charge. He shows the same savage disposition when a rival appears on the scene, and a great many fierce combats occur between the male leaders of the numberless bands, frequently resulting in the crippling or death of the combatants.

In many parts of Nevada, where there are no settlements, hundreds of wild cattle may also be seen roving about in small scattered bands. Like the horses, they are very wild—even more difficult to approach than the horses. A great many of the wild cattle are hunted and killed both for their meat and their hides.

The horses came originally from those that escaped from the Indians, and the cattle were strays from the settlers and ranchers, many years ago. Both have multiplied very rapidly.

C. A. James, who is now the personal owner of some very rich mining properties in the camp of Rawhide, Nev., once had a very thrilling experience with some wild horses. He had a very narrow escape for his life, and was literally "treed" by a wild stallion.

In recounting his experience, Mr. James said:

"There were four of us in a prospecting party. We had been out 'cruising' in a wagon drawn by two mules, for several weeks. You may depend upon it we were pretty dirty, dusty, and tired out. We had been drifting about through a wild, rough and desolate region, and were within about twenty miles of where Rawhide is now located. Here we had pitched our camp for a few days.

"One hot morning I started out alone to prospect on my own hook, taking my pick and shovel along. How far I tramped I do not know, but about the middle of the afternoon I found myself in a very wild, rough region, very tired and thirsty. I carried a small pocket compass, and kept the location of our camp well in mind. I had no fear of getting lost. I had met with very poor success in prospecting that day, and had about made up my mind to strike out for the camp.

"A burning, intolerable thirst possessed me. I began looking about for a spring or stream. To my great joy, I soon discovered a little spring below me to the right, and hastened toward it. However, before slaking my thirst, I carefully reconnoitered. In Nevada, one should always be on the sharp lookout for two human enemies—rattlesnakes and tarantulas. The former are always fond of loitering around a spring in hot weather.

"But the coast was clear, and I drank my fill. I was very weary, and sat down to rest a little before starting back to camp. I heard a loud trampling sound, and looking down the incline to my right saw several head of wild cattle browsing an the low bushes. They were totally ignorant of my presence, though less than 300 feet away.

"Just then I heard the shrill whinny of a colt, and looking to my left, saw five wild mares, each with a colt, and also a mouse-colored stallion. They were about 150 yards away. The mares were quietly browsing, but the stallion was acting as sentinel, walking around the mares and colts, sniffing the air, snorting and pawing the ground, now and anon opening his mouth widely and showing his yellow, glistening teeth.

"With the exception of two small piñon pines that stood some distance on the hillside above me, there were no trees in all that region—nothing but small brush. One of these small pine trees was leaning at an angle of about 45 degrees, and stood several yards from the straight tree. A little later I had special reason for noting this.

"It just occurred to me that I would yell and shout at the top of my voice, and so frighten away both the cattle and horses, and have no further bother with them. There is where I made my great mistake.

"I began to whoop and yell, when the wild cattle broke and ran away at top speed—a regular stampede—and in a few moments had disappeared over the hill.

"Not so, however, with the horses. When I began yelling, the mares and their colts ran together—huddling in a bunch, with their heads close in, and there they stood, shivering and neighing. But the stallion acted very differently. He reared straight up several times on his hind legs and wheeled around as if poised on a pivot, snorting, neighing defiantly, and showing his dangerous teeth.

"Both by smell and by sight the angry stallion immediately located me, and he started directly for me at the top of his speed—with his ears back, and his mouth distended, and screaming like a demon.

"Instantly I thought of the two little piñon pines above me. They were my only salvation. The next instant I was running up the sharp incline for dear life. The trees stood fully 100 yards away. Behind came the infuriated stallion snorting and screaming. I forgot all about my weariness. It was a close, tight race—a race for life. The stallion gained on me fearfully, but I reached the pines just in time. The leaning pine stood first, and I leaped up and scrambled from branch to branch. Not a second too soon was I, for I just missed the teeth of the angry animal, and I felt his hot breath on my hands.

"I climbed as high as it was safe, for the slender tree bent and swayed under my weight. I was just out of the stallion's reach, and that was all. He kept rearing up, striking wickedly with his hoofs and trying to tear me down with his teeth.

"He kept this up for some time; then he circled around the trees many times, rearing, snorting, and screaming. A little later the animal withdrew a short distance and began to paw the earth viciously. Meantime, I determined to get into the straight tree near by, as I should be safer there. Watching a favorable opportunity, I sprang down to the ground and rushed for the other piñon. Quick as I was, the stallion was faster. He rushed at me swift as a tiger, and had not the tree trunk been between us, he would have got me sure that time. As it was, I just 'saved my bacon' by the merest scratch. This only seemed to infuriate the animal, for he reared and plunged like a caged lion. But the end was at hand.

"The stallion uttered a defiant scream, reared, whirled around like a top, and then shot off at a tangent, heading toward the still huddling mares and colts. At a neigh signal, the latter scattered like a flash, and started away down the hill, going like the wind. The stallion brought up the rear, and I heard his shrill, defiant screams long after he had disappeared with his harem.

"I was only too glad to make my escape, for it was one of the closest calls of my life. The sun was getting low as I gathered up my pick and shovel and started for the camp. It was three miles hard tramping, and I didn't get in until after dusk. The other three boys had already begun to get uneasy about me.

"As we ate our rough meal by the flickering campfire light, I told my companions about my thrilling adventure, and of my lucky escape. It was my first experience, and I hope it will be my last, where I was literally treed by a wild stallion down in Nevada. If I ever chance to come across another band of wild horses, or cattle either, I'll just quietly sneak away myself and not try to frighten them away."

The Advance Guard.

They gazed with envious awe about the metropolitan restaurant, filled with men in evening dress who, with large pearls gleaming in their shirt fronts, ate lobster and drank champagne.

"Is this," they inquired, "an assembly of trust magnates?"

"Oh, no," the manager replied. "It is only the advance guard of our summer hotel proprietors, waiting for the next boat to take them on their winter trip to Europe."

In a horse trade, beware of the man whose prayers are the longest and most unctuous.

FIELD NOTES.

About Fumigation.

I WILL have something interesting to say about the use of cyanic gas in the next week or so—something that has not been said before. Do not think, dear reader, that I have originated anything in this line, but I do, perhaps, find out what is doing along with the average agricultural reporter. However, I feel encouraged that the men who are in the field of investigation appreciate this department, for one of the chief men recently wrote me that "The agricultural people of the southwest with entire accord look upon your work in The Times as the standard of truth and accuracy." Of course the notices I receive are not all of this flattering character, but it is of great credit nowadays to be complimented with being able to record the truth as it is.

Two years ago last May the Board of Horticultural Commissioners of Los Angeles county asked the Department of Agriculture to send a commission to Southern California to make a scientific study of the use of hydrocyanic acid gas in the destruction of orchard pests. Senator Flint and Representative McLachlan were asked to favor an appropriation for this work, and the money was provided in March, 1907. Dr. Howard and his chief assistant, Marlatt, took immediate and personal interest in getting the investigation under way, and Prof. R. S. Woglum was placed in charge, about twelve months ago. Last January Mr. Maskew was added to the force. I think it can be said with truth that since this commission began work more advancement has been made in effective, economical fumigation than was made altogether since this method of disinfection came into use. Mr. Woglum's paper published in the 34th State Fruit Convention Report (of which report an extra edition of 1000 copies is now on the press,) and it is a classic of plain experimentation and common-sense achievement. Other reports from this source will be published in The Times.

Queer Advertising.

A friend sends me a copy of a serial real estate publication of Sacramento. It is published by a prominent and reputable firm, but one must admit that this firm was not in reputable business in sending forth the following statements concerning Pasadena and the San Gabriel Valley. Here they are:

"Pasadena is twelve miles from Los Angeles, built on a naturally barren, knobby upland, with a summer climate as hot as the Mojave Desert; a chain of high hills shuts it off from the sea breeze; the surrounding hills are as brown and bare of vegetables as a brick wall; in the town several millionaires have built magnificent homes and hotels. These alone comprise the beauty of Pasadena."

Then this truthful booster takes a whirl at the San Gabriel Valley. "Looking down the valley from the hilltops, one sees now and then a fertile section, then a barren and again an oasis. No forest, no stream, no farm after farm and vineyard and orchard in unbroken chains of fertility, such as many imagine, etc., etc."

Such publications as this ought to be condemned by every citizen of California. I do not remember to have seen anything quite so raw, but I have only been in the State twenty-one years, and may yet learn that it is helpful to a community to have this kind of alleged boosting done at the expense of some other community. It is not fair to the people of Sacramento, who are so successfully building up a great city in a magnificent valley, to be handicapped by a knocker who in the disguise of a booster is foisting such stuff upon the public. It is charitable to assume that the writer of the above extracts has never journeyed south of the Tehachapi, or that the office boy did it unbeknown to the reputable firm which published it.

Alfalfa Paramount.

COBURN, the celebrated Secretary of Agriculture for Kansas, in an eastern tour recently spread the doctrine of the favorite fodder of the Southwest. For some reason this plant has not found favor with the people of the thirteen colonies, nor has alfalfa been cultivated extensively in the central part of the Mississippi Valley. Probably because they have the red clover there, and have a bit of conservatism, too, which holds on to the good things known rather than to going after the better unknown. Coburn's speeches and writings will do much to popularize the best forage plant in the world, partly because Coburn says so.

Alfalfa bids fair to be to the western half of the republic what the orange is to Southern California—the whole thing in its line. It tickles our vanity here to see that we can grow both equally well and all the time, but this is no rare statement regarding the productions of the Golden State. However, alfalfa is of more value to the United States than a hundred sections of orange groves as large as Southern California, and it is interesting to know more about the plant that our people can make produce a crop every sixty days throughout the year.

The term "alfalfa" tried to be the cities' cognomen for "hayseed," but it is difficult to make a term of reproach stick to men who, if diligent in growing a crop, ride by in an automobile while the city fellows have to go by on foot. So we must trade the origin of the word to other sources than—"hayseed." It comes from the Arabian word "alfacfacah," meaning "the best kind of fodder." Like that of the fig, the grape and the orange, its cultivation antedates the very earliest history, but unlike them, it seems to have been unknown in a wild state. The Romans thought it originated in Media, hense Linnaeus gave it the name Medicago sativa, the latter name probably from a use of the word for "planted in a garden." We may thank the Spanish for the alfalfa, both in the adaptation of the name from the clumsy Arabic and for its introduction to the great Southwest. Since the latest investigations have been made as to the origin of the plant the scientific name of alfalfa is Medica sativa, the genus name being shortened to that form.

We have heard since our childhood that "tall oaks from little acorns grow," but do not have to go to the oak for all remarkable growth. From an alfalfa seed only two millimeters in length a plant has been produced in three years with a root penetrating the ground to a distance of eighty feet. Very few phenomena in nature can equal such a growth in so short a space of time. It is largely the penetrative powers of its roots that enables this plant to establish itself in such divercity of situations and to become finally the greatest forage plant in the world.

Olive Knot.

THE readers of this magazine throughout the States and the Southwest will be interested in the fact that the olive tubercle is getting a fair start in some of the newer localities devoted to olive culture, and that the disease is not abating where it has been longer prevalent. Thousands are the homes in California possessing a small olive orchard, or a clump of trees, or a single shade tree from which the family may gather enough fruit for pickling, to say nothing about the millions of orchard trees all over the State and in Arizona which are cultivated for commercial use. To see a new plantation or an entire locality with its trees gradually yielding to this obscure malady is to excite a general interest in the progress of the olive's only serious trouble; now that the scale is so largely controlled by parasitic insects, at least in the coast counties. So a few of our younger groves are gradually going into an unprofitable condition, on account of the olive knot, and a warning to plant no trees with a suspicion of the taint that may prove their undoing later, may be of value this winter.

There is now no doubt of the infectious nature of the California outbreaks known as olive knot. The organism that produces the disease will be known as Bacterium Savastanoi, the latter name being attached in honor of Savastano, who first described the organism ten years ago. There seems to be no remedy for this disease, any more than for pear or walnut blight, and the olive grower who has trees affected with it is very unfortunate. He may be able to ameliorate the attack by pruning away the tubercles, by avoiding excessive irrigation, and heavy manuring, for, like the conditions inviting pear blight, an olive producing heavy, tender foliage invites the rapid spread of the malady. Spraying must necessarily be impotent, as it is with the cure of other bacterial troubles, because the infection cannot be reached by the spray. So the probabilities are that all groves now affected will continue in that condition to the end, unless pathology make advancement in lines not now thought possible.

If this is true we are brought again face to face with the nurserymen—that race of human beings which of late are being held to the impossible. But what other means of salvation to the olive industry are we to look to than in the planting of untainted stock. Perhaps, in a case of ruination to an olive section I have in mind, if we could trace the infected trees back through their cuttings age to their ancestors we would find the well-known tubercles there all over the branches. The most aggravating phase is that the nurseryman who raised these now decrepit trees could have selected his stock from clean-sapped trees. I know the infection may have been carried from tree to tree in this grove, but it could no more originate without a parent tubercle than could the grove originate without a parent olive tree.

Pest of the Ant and Fly.

PROF. C. W. WOODWORTH, of the College of Agriture, Berkeley, has just issued a carefully-prepared and very valuable circular (No. 38) upon the Argentine ant, that new household and probably fruit pest now found abundantly at East Oakland, Alameda, San Francisco, San José, Los Angeles, Azusa and several other places widely separated throughout the State. This circular contains a great deal of practical information, and I wish to say the good things of it that it deserves, for truth obliges me to take issue with a few statements therein contained. While no means of extermination will probably be discovered, the people should inform themselves upon the habits of this ant, as some method of mitigation or even control may be discovered later on. Prof. Woodworth has sent me a bundle of these circulars, and any one can be supplied with them by addressing the College of Agriculture, Berkeley.

In one paragraph of this circular Prof. Woodworth says of this ant: "The writer fears that, besides its other injurious habits, it may not be second in importance from the orange grower's standpoint to the introduction of the white fly, to which attention was called by this station a year ago, and which seems to be gradually spreading over the State. Prof. Titus, of the Utah Agricultural College and special agent of the United States Division (Bureau) of Entomology, tells me that while not particularly looking for the insect, he noted the presence of the Aleurodes citri white fly, in Chico and Visalia."

I shall not pretend to account for the vagary that impels Prof. Woodworth to wait for months to info orchardists through a circular that the white to be "gradually spreading over the State." It is illegitimate criticism to suggest that it was his duty to run down this rumor, and to locate every infection and notify the State commission he is now doing at every new discovery of the Ar ant. As a matter of fact, I had two expert deputies days at Chico within forty-eight hours after I hear Titus rumor, and they found no indication whatev the pest. I also sent immediately another expert salia who spent two days on the few hundred trees assisted by the entire local Board of Commis His written report is in hand, in which he states he found nothing of the fly in any form at that pl

In another paragraph of the circular the followi pears: "There is no legal authority in the State duties would include the eradication of a househol unless it be in those counties having county ento gists, whose duties are whatever the Supervisors ating these offices direct." I told the author of th cular very recently that the Attorney-General de that the so-called county entomologists (of Santa C San Mateo, Monterey, Santa Cruz and San Benito ties) have no legal standing, and hence are being gally paid for their services. Here is the opinion Attorney-General:

"It would not be legal for the Board of Supervis create the office of county entomologist, for they no authority to do so under the constitution. The islature alone has the power to create an office only standing such a person can have is as an ins working under the County Board of Horticultural missioners. Such a person (county entomologist no legal standing except as an employée of the C Board of Horticultural Commissioners. The B Supervisors has no power to make regulations nature, which conflict with the general law."

But suppose the gopher-weed provision, under these county entomologists are appointed, were effect (which the Attorney-General states it is let us see how far short it comes of empoweri Supervisors to direct what the duties of the ento gist shall be. The whole subject is covered in 23, which gives the Supervisors power "to provi the destruction of gophers, squirrels, other wild noxious weeds, and insects injurious to fruit trees, or vines, or vegetable or plant life." It w less confusing should every one adopt the policy curacy in making public statements.

Machine Milking.

THE machine milker is making surprising popular use. Before we hardly realize the that is taking place it bids fair to become a part established dairy plan, like the separator and the gathering system. These changes will bring other changes, and there are people who think already a tendency toward larger herds and a cattle especially adapted to machine methods, a trend toward the establishment of great sanitary farms conforming to the requirements of health and making a high-priced market for the produ other words, they think dairying will develop kind of factory system, which will compete with the small dairyman and his hand-labor But even so it may be that the small dairyman taken care of. Satisfactory milking outfits wil likely in time be brought within the means of the of a few cows. Some of the great successes in ture will no doubt be made by men who get int with these changes at the right time.—[Cultivato

African Edible Nuts.

IN answer to inquiries, Consul-General Robert P. Skinner of Marseilles, furnishes the following information relative to some new edible nuts of the west coast of Africa:

"The dyka nuts have no present commercial value whatever, and are not dealt in commercially, either in Marseilles or on the west coast of Africa. This nut is used by the west coast natives to some extent for the production of a vegetable butter. Thus far, although complete knowledge is available in regard to the article, it has not been found possible to utilize it practically.

"On the other hand, the fruit of the karite tree is now being handled in fair commercial quantities, for the production of a cheap type of vegetable grease, useful for the manufacture of soap and candles. The natives of Africa hull the nut, which somewhat resembles the chestnut, mash and boil the kernels, skimming off the floating grease, which has also an alimentary value.

"Another edible nut of commerce, comparatively unknown in the United States, is the acajou or mahogany nut, the kernel of which is solid, large, and sweet, and resembles the almond in flavor. Some shipments of this nut have been made to the United States within the last year or two."

Almeria Grape.

THE Almeria grape is the grape that is shipped from Southern Spain packed in barrels of coarse cork dust or chips. The name of the variety is the Ohanez. It is a very late grape, tough, hard and very firmly attached to the pedicel. It is so firm that it does not dry up readily, and its firm attachment to the stalklet preserves it from moulding or decay. It is of very poor quality as an eating grape, but sells well, as it can be put on the market in December, January and even later, when no other grapes are procurable except at very high prices.

Many attempts have been made to grow this grape in California. The attempts have not been successful commercially for several reasons. The grapes will not mature except in the hotter districts, and to obtain good crops they must be grown on high trellises. By training them on two or three wires several feet from the ground they can be made to bear well, and the position of the grapes preserves them from injury by rain. It is impossible to obtain the cork dust cheaply enough in California, but if we raised the grapes they could be shipped the same way as the Tokay.

A very late shipping grape, to come after the Cornichon, would be very desirable. Several varieties recently imported from Algeria and China are promising for this purpose, but have not yet been sufficiently tested. The Hunisa, a variety introduced by the Department of Agriculture at Washington, D. C., from Asia Minor, is among the most promising. It resembles in appearance the Red Emperor as grown in the upper San Joaquin Valley. It is, however, of better quality, and remarkably resistant to rain and other unfavorable conditions.—[Bioletti, in the Press.

Dwarf Apples.

G. T. POWELL of Columbia county, New York, is conducting some interesting experiments on the value of dwarf apple trees in business orchards. It is the idea of Mr. Powell that trees of a low habit of growth will be required more and more, because of the need of convenience for spraying and harvesting. The scale insects make it almost impossible to thoroughly treat large trees, and the cost of labor makes a saving at harvesting time of great importance.

Two styles of dwarf trees are under trial. The so-called "Paradise" is very dwarf and is short-lived. The "Doucin" stock is half-dwarf, making trees sixteen to eighteen feet high, and promises good results in commercial orcharding. The trees are planted two or three inches below the union of stock and top. In Mr. Powell's orchard the trees of "Paradise" stock are set as fillers between those of the larger dwarf kind. The rows in the orchard are twenty feet apart, and the trees ten in a row. The wide spaces between the rows allow plenty of room for cultivation by horse power, while the trees in the rows will be thinned out as soon as they become crowded. The dwarf trees give fruit in a few years from planting, and the amount gradually increases. The small dwarf kind lasts six to eight years, and the semi-dwarfs for about twenty years. For dwarf trees the Spitzenberg, Jonathan, McIntosh are found successful. They produce fruit of very fine appearance and quality, suitable for packing in boxes for the choicest trade. For the half-dwarfs the Northern Spy, Roxbury Russet, Twenty-ounce, Astrachan, Baldwin and Greening are satisfactory.

The dwarf trees must receive good culture, with plenty of plant food, and careful cultivation. The soil is plowed and harrowed in the spring, and is kept in a cover crop of clover during the summer. Scale and other insects are easily treated in the dwarf orchards. The idea appears so promising to Mr. Powell that he is pruning his larger trees on the dwarf plan, cutting back the tops of the standard trees, in order to cause them to spread out, and to remove the high parts of the tree, which make so much difficulty in spraying old trees.—[American Cultivator.

Why Not Raise Flax?

A SAMPLE of flax has been brought into the Chamber of Commerce, Los Angeles, that was planted the 15th day of June. This sample was gathered the 29th day of July, showing a most remarkable growth, with only one irrigation. Indications suggest a yield of twenty sacks to the acre. The seed when gathered brings in San Francisco $2.20 a hundred, f. o. b.

This sample of flax is from the Irvine ranch just south of Santa Ana, where fifty acres have been planted as an experiment.

The suggestion has been made by many that it would be well to rotate flax with wheat. Experiments of this character have been tried in San Luis Obispo county, raising from twenty to forty acres of wheat after crop of flax.

The question of diversified farming has become a serious thought with our large land owners in the various sections of California. The renters and share farmers have brought this question to an actual necessity; land that has been planted to barley for fifteen or twenty years, and in some cases thirty, has gotten down to a 2 per cent. investment in many sections of the country, and the owner of the land finds it is necessary for him to take the initiative in ascertaining what crop to put in his land that will rotate the soil and bring back into the surface soil plant life which the barley or wheat roots have completely exhausted. Successful experiments have been made with a crop of beans; this plant absorbing nitrogen from the air and depositing in the surface soil a new life for the barley to feed on the following year. In the sections where beans have not yielded satisfactorily they are putting in flax seed with better success in that the flax plant absorbs its nitrogen from the subsoil or lower soil and deposits with the rotting of the roots the plant life in the surface soil for the barley plant to feed on. It has proved in this case that the land not only yields a larger income in flax seed than a crop of barley, but the yield the following year has been increased 25 per cent.

Motorite, What It Is.

Motorite is a self-combustive fuel, consisting of a compound of seventy parts, by weight, of nitroglycerin to thirty parts, by weight, of gun cotton. The gun cotton is dissolved in the nitroglycerin, forming a dense, tough and rubbery material.

This material is made into bars about 7 inches in diameter and 6 feet long for use in torpedoes the size of the 18-inch Whitehead torpedo. For the 21-inch torpedo, the stick will be both bigger and longer.

The motorite bars are forced into and sealed in steel tubes for us, and these steel tubes containing the motorite are inserted into the torpedo and are surrounded by a water jacket.

The motorite can be ignited and can burn only at and from one end, and the water to be evaporated is forced along a water jacket surrounding the motorite tube into the combustion chamber, where it is evaporated into steam by mingling with the products of combustion of the motorite.

One pound of motorite evaporates a little over two pounds of water, so that one pound of motorite produces the equivalent of three pounds of steam, for the products of combustion of the motorite mingle with the steam produced.

The steam from the combustion chamber is conducted to turbines, or other engines or devices for propelling the torpedo through the water.—[Hudson Maxim in Metropolitan Magazine.

AMAZING.

The student laid down the ancient, brass-bound tome and rubbed his eyes.

"Astounding!" he murmured, "positively astounding! These humorists of the fourteenth century borrowed all their jokes from the humorists of our own day, and never gave a particle of credit."

Making The Garden

Our new illustrated and accurately descriptive plant, shrub and tree catalogue will be mailed to our patrons in October. It will be found an invaluable guide to ornamental gardening for the Southwest. Send us your address for a copy to be mailed to you.

The Pink Flowered Cherokee Rose

This very charming rose has laurel-like, evergreen, mildew-proof foliage and salmon-pink blossoms which are very large, free-blooming and deliciously fragrant. It is a sister of white Cherokee, more beautiful and of really tropical luxuriance. Magnificently effective for pergolas, for fences and to cover banks. Unsurpassed as a cut flower.

Offered solely by us. Price each by express, prepaid, $1.50. Smaller size, by mail, $1.00.

Uric Acid.

DR. ALEXANDER HAIG of London is recognized as the leading proponent of and authority on the uric-acid theory of disease. He was led to take up the subject by noticing that the severe headaches from which he suffered ceased whenever he gave up flesh and other uric-acid foods.

Like others who have hit upon an important fact, Dr. Haig is inclined to override his hobby a little. However, it is a most important subject, and he has undoubtedly done much good in bringing it to the attention of the public.

The doctors nowadays sneer at the uric-acid theory. This is not surprising, for if it were generally accepted it would undoubtedly enable a great majority of the people to cure themselves, and thus lessen the income of the medical fraternity.

Dr. Haig's little book "Diet and Food" was reviewed here several years ago. His latest book is a digest of his larger book on uric acid. It is entitled "Uric Acid—An Epitome of the Subject." (J. & A. Churchill, 7 Great Marlborough street, London. Price 2s 6d net. For sale in the United States by P. Blakiston's Son & Co., 1012 Walnut street, Philadelphia.)

Uric acid is normally developed in all animals, and xanthin, the vegetable equivalent of uric acid, is found in many vegetables, also in pulse and cereals. As it occurs mostly in the hulls or skins of cereals and pulses and fruit, it can, to a great extent, be avoided. In a letter from Dr. Haig to the editor of the Care of the Body, written last year, he said:

"It is impossible to get quite free of xanthin, but if you take the vegetable substances that contain least of it, you can reduce the daily output to one-half of its amount on a flesh and tea diet. This is generally enough to prevent and control disease."

Dr. Haig declares that directly or indirectly uric acid controls the circulation of the whole body and produces high blood pressure on the one hand or low blood pressure on the other, according to the amount present in the blood and circulating fluids. He describes a simple test by which any one may detect the amount of uric acid in his system—a test that was first mentioned by Raynaud. If a white patch is produced by pressure on the surface in normal conditions, the blood will return into it in two or three seconds, otherwise it will remain more or less white for a considerable time. The author shows that one of the effects of an excessive secretion of uric acid is to produce a stimulation which is mistaken for strength. He says: "Alcohol is bad, but tea and uric acid contain stimulants that are worse." Practically all consumers of animal flesh are, he says, anaemic—with a slow circulation in the skin which may easily be tested as above described. The normal production of uric acid in the human body is, he declares, about ten grains.

In regard to the amount of uric acid in various foods Dr. Haig writes:

"Roughly speaking, meat, fish, fowls, game, and eggs may be said to contain about 6 to 8 grains to the pound. Xanthin is also contained in many vegetables, and in some of these (as peas, beans, lentils, peanuts, Cashew nuts, asparagus and mushrooms) there is more than in meat, even up to 12 or 16 grains per pound."

In this statement the distinguished English physician is altogether wrong. A short table, contained in an article published in the London Lancet of October 6, 1906, gave the number of grains of uric acid per pound in beefsteak at 14½, and in beans at 4⅛. Reducing this to a water-free basis—the only logical way to estimate—we find that beefsteak contains about 50 grains of uric acid to the pound of dry substance and beans less than five grains, or only one-tenth as much. Moreover, in the bean the xanthin is mostly contained in the hull, which may be removed by boiling them for five minutes with a little soda, then leaving them to stand over night when the hulls may easily be rubbed off. However, this is a tedious process. The Battle Creek Sanatorium people have hulled beans on the market. Or you may use hulled peanuts in place of beans.

Dr. Haig mentions two groups of diseases that he says are due to uric acid, the gout group and the collaemia group. He makes the following interesting statement in regard to the possible cause of an eye disease:

"There is one disease of the eye itself which has almost certainly a similar or identical relation to high blood pressure, that is glaucoma. The causation of glaucoma has long appeared to me to be practically identical with that of the uric acid headache, the blood pressure acting in the closed or partly-closed cavity of the eyeball just as it does in the closed or partly-closed cavity of the skull. In both cases we must bear in mind that there are other factors of anatomy and physiology which determine the effects of the blood pressure. But in both cases also the trouble is essentially due to high blood pressure, and in its absence would not occur at all. There are also some interesting facts which seem to show that the more common errors of refraction due to the length or shortness of the eyeball bear a very similar relation to high blood pressure, and it is possible that the hypermetropia of old age is, at least in part, one of the results of the falling blood pressure which old age occasions; for with lower blood pressure the globe of the eye will probably become less distended and the distance between the refracting media and the retina will be diminished. Similarly it is probable that in myopia the extent of the error is increased by things which raise the blood pressure, as this will tend to distend the eyeball and increase the distance between the refracting media and the retina. And the onset of myopia in young people whose muscle and heart power are increasing is thus the converse phenomenon to the hypermetropia of those enfeebled by age."

The author declares that women who adopt a uric-acid free diet escape much of the pain of childbirth. He also intimates that uric acid may be the precipitating cause of cancer. Whether this is so or not, it is a fact frequently noted that cancer is practically unknown among vegetarians. He also shows why uric acid causes fatigue and lessens endurance because, as he says, "the effect of an excess of uric acid in the blood stream is much the same as if in working a machine we were to pour sand into the bearings in place of oil." Dr. Haig traces national degeneration to the large use of flesh food. His remarks on this subject were recently published here in an article on flesh eating:

Here are some interesting remarks in regard to the manner in which an excess of uric acid injures the health:

"When microbes find themselves precipitated on, or inoculated into, the tissues of a body where the combustion is slow and poor and the fluids and solids are loaded with waste products, they naturally flourish and multiply in what may be called a pathological sewage farm; while those falling into the brightly-burning fire of a quick combustion, with fine circulation and small accumulation of waste products, are themselves burnt up and cannot produce disease. It seems to me that evidence is steadily accumulating that tubercular troubles, for instance, do not originate in those who have a sufficient supply of natural foods and are consequently in a state of normal combustion; and that even after the tubercle has got a foothold it may be rooted out by feeding up on uric-acid-free foods, which not only make the fire roar up the chimney, but help its combustion as long as they are continued. On the other hand, those who are fed up on the uric-acid-containing foods have an intensified combustion while the stimulation lasts, but later on, clogged by the added uric acid, find even the ordinary standard of combustion impossible of attainment. The tubercle then, if it has not been completely destroyed, is able once more to flourish at the expense of the invaded organism and can complete its deadly work."

The author shows that drugs are useless in combating uric acid, and that the only way to do is to stop consuming it. He also declares that mineral waters, massage and electric treatment are of no real use, as they do not affect the cause, but only influence some of the results for a time. Yet he recommends the use of "solvents" in rheumatism, so as to bring the uric acid back into the blood that it may be disposed of. Far better and more effective would it be to seek these solvents in the organic salts, that are so richly contained in some foods, such as spinach and lettuce and other green leaves. Sodium, in which these vegetables abound, is here of special value.

The author makes a significant admission when he declares that "fever clears the blood of uric acid more completely than any drug." Yet, how many physicians recognize this simple fact? Instead of that, they seek to check this effort of nature by administering food and poisonous drugs.

Dr. Haig shows that it is useless to attempt to wash out uric acid by an excess of fluid, as the water cannot pass out through the kidneys, which are obstructed by the uric-acid crystals, while the large amount of liquid is bad for the heart. The only sensible thing to do, he reiterates, is to give up the foods that introduce uric acid.

This is all right, so far as it goes, but Dr. Haig seems to overlook the fact that by eating an excess of proteid food, even when that food does not contain any uric acid, you may generate an excess of uric acid in the blood.

The author advocates bread as the best substitute for uric-acid fods. He admits that it is not the natural food of man, but a compromise or substitute. A poor compromise. Dr. Densmore was not far wrong when he declared that bread, instead of being the staff of life, is the staff of death. This is true of all bread, owing to the fact that starch digestion involves an undue strain on the system. Dr. Haig, however, doubtless refers to white bread, because wheat contains a little xanthin in the bran. Now, white bread is a starvation food, deprived of a large portion of the organic salts which lie just underneath the bran. Dr. Haig advises that the bread and other cereal foods should be very thoroughly cooked—"super-cooked." He suggests that puddings and porridges may be cooked for a whole day. While in this way—or at least by prolonged dry heat—cereals may be dextrinized, on the other hand they thus lose much of their vitality. So there you are.

The author is eminently correct when he expresses the opinion that fruit and nuts are the natural food of man. He suggests, however, that it is impossible for many to eat nuts or digest them, owing to destruction of teeth and impairment of the digestive organs. For this reason he suggests that they must take to bread. Not so. By means of a nut mill nuts—after being deprived of

As to Living Forever.

A NEW YORK dispatch recently announced that a resident of New Jersey has given forth the important if true information that he had found the secret of perpetual life, and that any one could easily live to be a thousand years old. So far as disclosed, the "secret" consists in "laying on of the hands."

Be sure of this. No amount of laying on of hands—or feet—will enable a person to escape death at a comparatively early age, if that person continues to break the laws of nature and to live wrong—especially to eat wrong.

As to living forever, in the physical form, that is, of course, nonsense. It is true that William A. Hammond, reputed to be one of the great authorities in medical science, and formerly surgeon-general in the United States army, is credited with having said: "There is no physiological reason why man should die." It is really astonishing that apparently intelligent people should profess to entertain such an absurd, illogical and altogether impossible theory. As previously remarked, the human race, the animal creation, the vegetable kingdom and the mineral kingdom—the "everlasting hills" and even the great planetary systems that constitute the universe are all subject to the immutable law of change. For puny man, who crawls about like a tiny microbe on one of these fly specks that revolve around one of the minor suns—for puny man to imagine that he can escape this great law of nature is to display either a depth of ignorance or a height of impudence—or both.

As to living a thousand years, that is a somewhat different question from living forever. We cannot say, for sure, how long human life might be extended, under entirely favorable conditions of heredity, training, mode of life and surroundings. Among records of remarkable ages is one of a resident of Portuguese Africa, who is said to have attained the extraordinary age of over 300 years. Certain animals, such as the turtle, are known to have attained an age of several centuries. The tortoise lives mainly on green leaves and sleeps all winter. Perhaps, if man were to live on green leaves and sleep all winter he might live for several hundred years. Would it, however, be worth while? That is another question.

Some people claim that we are immortal in the sense that the material of which our bodies is composed continues in some other form. That, however, is, of course, an entirely different phase of the subject. Caesar's dust may stop a bunghole, and your grandchild may perhaps eat a pear that contains some of the materials of which your body was composed, but this has nothing whatever to do with living forever on the mortal plane.

At a meeting of a medical society in New York J. Mount Bleyer, speaking on the subject of "Longevity," made some excellent remarks on the subject. He addressed himself particularly to those who have passed the half-century mark, declaring that the keeping alive of the sympathies and the affections is what constitutes happiness on earth, and the holding of one's age well. For "if the soul be not young, youth as to birthdays has no advantage over senility." He declared further that to men who have no resource in themselves for being happy, every age is burdensome; that old age is the death of youth, not the passing of time, that we live not by our years, but by our experiences, and he added:

"We are young while our hearts are aflame with the rich spiritualities of life. We are young while we take a vital interest in all the interests of our common humanity. We are young while we love. We are young while we sympathize with every cry of human agony, while our eyes flash, and our hearts grow indignant over the brutalities and cruelties and greeds of mankind. We are young while we are tolerant and yet helpful, while we weep with those who suffer, while we help those who are helpless, while we bind up the bruises of the injured, while we live a life that is not only helpful, but uplifting, and raise the fallen."

These are truthful remarks, that should be regarded when we consider the subject of length of days. As the poet wrote:

"It is not all of life to live,
"Nor all of death to die."

Vegetables and Fruit a Bad Combination.

A CORRESPONDENT asks why vegetables and fruit should not be eaten together. In reply to this question, the following is quoted from Dr. Daniel S. Sager's recently-published book, "The Art of Living in Good Health." (Frederick A. Stokes Co., New York:)

"It is a principle practically amounting to a law of digestion that those foods should be eaten together which digest together. As previously stated, the coarser vegetables and fruits are not a good combination. To more fully explain this idea of the incompatibility of food, let us suppose we have a diet of peaches and lettuce. Alone, the peaches are ready for almost immediate digestion and assimilation within a period of one-half hour to an hour at the utmost. The introduction of the lettuce puts an entirely different phase on the digestibility of the mixture of the two foods. Until the lettuce is digested, probably a matter of two or three hours, the digested products of the peach have to remain in the stomach, awaiting the slower digestion of

No fasting, drugs, injections, operations, trusses, springs, bandages or elastics. I was born a weakling, lost my health learning the machinist's trade, cured myself solely by nature-aiding means after being given up to die eight different times by as many different doctors. After studying medicine and surgery I spent 15 years close to nature studying her laws among primitive people who cure themselves BY OBSERVING NATURE'S INSTINCTIVE PROMPTING and utilizing simple available Nature-Aids. And so my method simply aids nature and YOUR OWN VITALITY does the healing NATURE'S WAY. And there IS no other. THE HUMAN BODY IS SIMPLY A PLANT, PRODUCED BY EXACTLY THE SAME LAWS. Hence should be treated BY THE SAME METHODS. Just as a gardener makes conditions for GROWTH and Nature does the rest. Instructive literature FREE. 217 Mercantile Place, Los Angeles, Cal.

the lettuce. The delay of any digested product, or in fact of any undigested product, in the system beyond a certain time, is bound to end in fermentation, decomposition, putrefaction, or marked food perversion of some kind, inducing in the stomach pronounced digestive disturbances. These disturbances are largely the result of germs, ferment, or microbes. If the digested products of each food were passed out of the stomach, separately, this perversion of food might be obviated. We know, however, that the pyloric orifice or lower end of the stomach does not open spasmodically for the discharge of food, but does so only after the food products in it have been reduced or churned to a uniform mass, all prepared and ready to be passed along together for intestinal digestion. If two foods of different degrees of digestibility and assimilation are likely to produce disturbances, the conditions will be accentuated where several different foods form the diet. Vegetables, owing to their woody structure, are particularly slow of digestion with some individuals. It is for this reason that, taken with fruits, or in fact with almost any other food combination, they produce gastric disturbances. A purely vegetable dinner is more likely to prove digestible than a dinner composed of vegetables mixed with several other foods. Nuts, cereals, and fruits form a perfect food combination—all the better if there is one food only of each class. The addition of vegetables will spoil the combination, excepting possibly raw tomatoes and baked beets, or any of the digestible vegetables not possessing woody fiber. Vegetables approaching fruits in structure are not likely to be incompatible with other foods."

Limitations of Osteopathy.

IN Health Culture for June the editor of that magazine, Dr. Latson had a good article on "Methods of Healing." Among other things he referred to osteopathy, regarding which he said:

"Osteopathy is a poor name. But the system built up under that name is a valuable addition to the healing art. But in my library there are about a dozen books on 'Osteopathy,' and in not one of them is there a recognition of the fundamental fact of 'osteopathy.'

"The founder of osteopathy is a close observer—but not a clear thinker. He noticed that displaced organs could not do their work properly—that laxated structures produced many anatomical and physiological derangements.

"This was a great discovery. And it is what I am trying to preach all the time: 'Get your organs into their proper places and they will do proper work.' But manipulation alone will not do this. And here is the great mistake of 'osteopathy.' To push back the organs into their proper place is not enough; they must be held there. And who shall hold them? Their owner—naturally. And how shall he accomplish this? By learning to stand and to walk and to breathe and to think correctly.

"Osteopathy is valuable—very valuable in the treatment of a large class of disorders. I use it daily. But in the treatment of disease we need other methods as well as osteopathy."

As previously mentioned here, there is a great difference between osteopaths, as there is between practitioners of other schools. Some are broad-minded, attaching due importance to diet and other hygienic measures, while others are—otherwise. It is, of course, only the former class who can expect to achieve any great measure of success.

Almond Meal—Almond Butter—Almond Cream.

IN a recent article on diabetes, mention was made of almond meal as being preferable to flour made from grain. Several correspondents have asked where such meal can be obtained. Any first-class grocer should keep it, or if not, he would probably order it, if a customer wished to use it regularly. To make the meal at home, buying the almonds at retail price, would not only be tiresome, but expensive.

The following directions for making almond butter are from "The Art of Living in Good Health," by Dr. Daniel S. Sager:

"Blanch the shelled almonds by covering them with boiling water for two or three minutes, then remove the skins with the fingers. Gently dry the nuts in baking pans in an oven until quite crisp, but not brown in color. Then run them through a loosely-adjusted mill or a sausage grinder, and place them on a cloth, stretched over the stove until perfectly dry, then grind in a tightly-adjusted nut-butter mill. This preparation, almond cream, or butter, freshly prepared, is a delicious substitute for cow's milk, and does not produce gastric disturbances of any kind."

Almond cream—or other nut cream—may be made from nut butter by taking one or two tablespoonfuls of the butter and whipping it up with a fork or other beater with a small quantity of tepid water, making in all about one-half a pint of nut cream. Nut creams or nut milks must be kept in closed vessels in a cool place, otherwise they will sour in a day or two.

The No-Breakfast Plan.

A CORRESPONDENT sends the following clipping from the dump column of some newspaper:

"Statistics show that the longest-lived people eat the heartiest breakfasts."

Statistics can be made to prove almost anything. People who eat hearty breakfasts usually have inherited strong digestions, that can stand much abuse. Dr. Dewey has shown the logic of the no-breakfast plan. The editor of the Care of the Body has personally proved its advantage. Scores of readers of the Care of the Body have testified to the benefit they have derived from adopting the plan.

If you are hungry, on rising, eat, not less than an hour after getting up, a light breakfast. Remember, however, that hunger and appetite are two quite different things. When a piece of dry bread tastes good to you, you are hungry. If, on the other hand, you can only shove hot cakes and bacon and eggs down with several cups of coffee, or tea, then don't eat before noon, and notice what a good healthy hunger you have for your lunch.

This is not a wild-eyed theory. It is common sense, based on experience. Some ill-informed people seem to think that "no-breakfast" is a new thing—a twentieth-century fad. By no means. Following is from an article in Conable's Pathfinder, for January:

"The no-breakfast advocates are called foolish faddists. The writers and speakers making this statement are evidently not aware that not until the middle of the fourteenth century was such a thing as eating breakfast ever known—that is, eating in the morning before the noon hour. At this period the race, or some portions of it, commenced to dissipate more or less, and little by little the habit of eating a light morning meal was indulged in. . . . At this period not even a hearty meal was eaten at the noon hour; something light and simple and then the one hearty meal of the day (by no means of such a deadening character as the dinner courses of today) was taken at 5 o'clock in the evening. There is no record in existence indicating that at any time during the evolution of the race has man attained to the degree of normal longevity by commencing the labors of the day on a full stomach. The digestive and assimilative functions of the body cannot properly do their work in the presence of bodily or mental activity. There must be complete relaxation—quiet, repose—all cares and worries set aside."

Rye.

THE subject of this article is not, as some might mistakenly suppose, rye whisky, but rye flour.

A correspondent recently asked the editor of Health Culture: "Is rye a more laxative food than other cereals?" To which Dr. Latson answered: "They differ but little, if any, in that respect."

This is not in accordance with the editor's experience. In North Germany, where rye bread forms the principal article of dietary among the mass of the people, the evidence of the efficacy of rye meal, in producing free peristaltic action, may frequently be noticed along the highways. In America, some people find pumpernickle one of the surest remedies for constipation.

Why this is so is not altogether apparent. Rye contains about 10 per cent. less of the organic salts than wheat. The only one of them in which it is ahead of wheat is sulphur, of which it contains 0.28 parts per thousand of dry substance as compared with 0.09 in wheat. It is possible that the laxative effect of rye is due to a difference in the form of the granules, which may be coarser, and thus act mechanically on the bowels.

A prominent German writer on dietetics has pointed out that rye contains a substance not found in wheat. This is fluorine, which is found in the teeth. This may count for the fact that the north Germans are noted for their fine teeth.

It would be a good idea to add a little rye flour to your wheat flour. There is no reason why there should be such monotony in our consumption of grain, which is almost entirely confined to wheat, when we have other such valuable grains as corn, rye, barley and oats. The rye bread and pumpernickel on the market are fermented, which is objectionable, from a hygienic point of view, but you can buy rye flour, and make your own bread or gems either "straight" or mixed with entire wheat flour. A firm in Minneapolis recently commenced putting up rye flakes. "Boston brown bread" is a mixture of corn, rye, white flour and molasses.

A Sensible Temperance Movement.

NEARLY 200,000 residents of London have already joined a new organization known as the "Semi-Teetotal Pledge Association." The pledge of the Association contains the simple words:

"I solemnly undertake, by God's help, to abstain from all intoxicating drinks, except at my mid-day and evening meals." The society has the approval of the King, the Prince of Wales and the Bishop of London.

This is a sensible idea. Most of the harm done by overconsumption of alcoholic beverages comes from nipping during the day. On the continent of Europe nearly everybody drinks with the principal meals a little light wine, usually mixed with about one-third of water. This is a far more wholesome beverage than the coffee which so many Americans drink at every meal. It is, of course, better not to drink anything with meals, but if people will drink something, a little claret or Riesling and water is better than tea or coffee. See, however, that you do not let the ever-ready waiter put ice in your claret. That is an abomination. It not only kills the delicate flavor of the wine, but is also harmful in chilling the stomach, and so retarding digestion.

Women and Alcohol.

A SAD sign of the times is the increasing prevalence of the drinking habit among women. This is more serious to the coming generation than drinking by men, for the child is directly influenced by the alcohol absorbed by the mother during the two years of pregnancy and nursing. The Romans, at one period, recognized this fact, and made the drinking of wine by women punishable by death.

A writer in Health Culture, discussing the drink habit of women, says:

"Drunkenness is bad enough in a man, but in a door, and ere long the old padre opened it, and stood in the doorway holding a lighted candle over his head that he might see who it was that wished admission at this early hour.

McNally pushed by him into the room, followed by Carmelita. He then told the priest, in a few words, what he wanted.

"But, sir, I cannot do this," the priest answered him, in English. "You know I cannot."

"Oh, yes you can," said McNally, and his smile showed mirthless in the flickering light of the candle.

"You mean——?" asked the priest.

"Just what I say," said McNally, throwing open his coat and displaying his pistols. "You are a priest, and I respect you; but you are going to marry us right now, or I'll forget what you are."

"Of course," said the priest, hiding a smile, "I can do nothing but obey, but under protest. Go into the mission, and as soon as I put on my robes I shall come to marry you."

"On your word, father?"

"On my sacred word."

McNally slipped an arm around Carmelita. Together they walked into the mission. A few candles sputtered uncertainly on the altar. They took their stand before them.

"That was a pretty good bluff I put on the father," chuckled McNally.

Carmelita smiled up at him in response and came closer to him.

There was silence in the room for a little time, save for their quick breathing and an occasional stamp of their tired horses outside. Then suddenly there was the quick thud of other horses' feet outside that ceased abruptly at the door. Into the dimly-lighted room strode four men.

"Ah, there is the traitor!" cried Dario, running forward. The rest followed him up the long isle.

McNally thrust Carmelita behind him, and his pistol gleamed dully in the fitful light.

"Tell 'em to stand back, Carmelita," he said in low, even tones.

Dario paused at sight of the drawn pistol and sprang to a dark corner. The rest scattered to like shelter. Dario's pistol roared out of the darkness, the bullet striking the altar not far from McNally's head. Another pistol spoke out of another darkened corner, and McNally's roared out in answer, filling the room with sound.

"Can't you slip out of here over to the priest's house?" McNally asked Carmelita. But she only huddled closer to him and would not move.

"Throw down that pistol this instant, or I shall kill you!" cried Dario, forgetting that McNally could not understand.

McNally fired at the sound of Dario's voice. The little Mexican gave a half-frightened cry.

From the other corners of the room tiny spurts of flame licked out of the blackness. The roar of the reports was almost deafening. McNally's hat was knocked off, and a bullet grazed his cheek, but he fired back at every spurt of flame. Carmelita screamed once, and McNally begged her to fly to safety, but she would not move. Bullets whined and spat wickedly against the thick adobe walls. The room became congested with smoke. McNally felt a numbing pain shoot through his right leg, but already two of the pistols had ceased firing from the dark.

Then from somewhere above him McNally heard a voice boom out through the room, seeming to drown out all other sounds. He glanced up and saw the old priest standing above him on the altar, his arms extended and his eyes blazing.

"Cease! cease!" cried the priest. "Would you defile the holy place of God with your sinful blood? Mother of God! this is unbelievable! 'Tis a mercy that God does not strike you dead where you stand. Cease! cease!"

The firing stopped, and the room became quiet again. McNally gaped up at the priest in astonishment, for he had not understood a word that had been uttered.

"Come forward, all of you, and kneel at the altar," commanded the priest, his voice suddenly grown calm.

Dario came out of his corner, holding his hand to his side. Don Hernando followed, nursing a wounded arm. The other two fell in behind, and all knelt at the altar.

McNally, still too dazed to realize what it all meant, was drawn to his knees by Carmelita. The priest stood over them, his quiet voice droning monotonously through the room as he repeated the marriage service over to them in English, then in Spanish, while the kneeling figures at the altar rail raised not a hand to stop him.

One Industry of the Pesky Ant.

Out in Burma and the Far East, where sandalwood is worth its weight in silver, the pestiferous ant is a valuable assistant to the loggers of that precious timber. The hard and fragrant heartwood alone has value, but as the tree grows this valuable heart is overlaid by a soft and worthless layer forming two-thirds of the trunk. When a tree is felled and cut into lengths the loggers let the timber lie. At once the ants begin work upon the soft wood, which is sappy and sweet enough to attract them. In a few weeks, less than a month in the case of the largest butts, the ants deliver the heartwood free of all the worthless sapwood.—[Washington Post.

pathway, and for miles a bare brown streak stretches out into the green pine woods. The signs of volcanic activity are everywhere, and it is evident that the "Hill of the Morning Fires" has covered the whole region with death and desolation at intervals.

The natives in the villages about its base seem to have no fear of the mountain, yet they keep wooden buckets always at hand to cover their heads in case they should have to flee under a cloud of ashes. During the summer when foreigners come to Karuizawa the railroad company keeps an engine under full steam night and day. When the clouds above the mountain become black with the pulverized dust, the guides consider the volcano dangerous and no parties are taken to the top; but when the steam is white the climb is supposed to be quite safe, although we noticed that our guide was not inclined to linger.

The wind was keen and cold, notwithstanding the hot steam which blew in thick tuffs and swirls over the edge and down the mountain side. After a half-hour rest, we began the descent. A couple of hundred feet below the hot crater little balls of ice were dug from under a thin layer of ashes. The party satisfied their thirst with these until the luncheon baskets were reached half way down. We stopped to rest and eat, but were soon driven down the mountain by the rain.

The horses were reached an hour and a half after leaving the crater, and the hotel at 7 in the evening. Tired but happy we went to rest with our curiosity satisfied—and what more could a woman ask?

PAULINE CURRAN.

Religion in Modern Life.

Dr. Cadman, the American preacher who is at present occupying Mr. Silvester Horne's pulpit, has expressed himself somewhat skeptically in reference to the supposed revival of religion in the United States. He may perhaps be right in reference to his own country, but in England there is at present a distinct reëmergence of religious sentiment and religious aspiration in circles where religion has long been regarded as a mere aberration of the human intellect. The atheist, or even the determined agnostic, is now a mere survival of the Victorian era. The old contest between religion and science is gradually dying away, although some belated combatants still continue the fight, knowing not that a fresh light has changed the very issues of the battle.

This changed attitude toward religion has two causes. The psychological researches of James and Starbuck have made it clear that the religious emotions are not mere delusions, are not disorders of the human mind, but are genuine facts, as real, as spontaneous in their own way as any other mental phenomena. The theories which they advance make it perfectly possible to reconcile the cultivation and enjoyment of religion with the adoption generally of the scientific attitude toward life. Indeed, some would go now so far as to say that those who scoff at religion as mere self-deception are unscientific, for they leave without adequate explanation a whole series of facts in human history and in human psychology. At all events, the recent researches into the psychology of religion have, as it were, lifted an embargo which many, in the supposed interests of truth, had laid upon the springing spiritual life within them. But the religion of such people does not necessarily lead them back to the churches. Some of the strongest forces of religion in the modern world are to be met with among those to whom both the ritual and creed of the existing churches fail to appeal. But in their turn the churches are modifying their position. They, too, are coming to lay more stress on emotion than on belief or ceremonial. They are realizing that creeds and rites were created to answer older needs and older conceptions of the world, and that as Dr. Cadman said, there is a growing demand for a restatement of religion in the light of modern research and scientific discovery. If the churches will boldly and straightforwardly meet this demand, holding that fidelity to all known truth, scientific, historical, and psychological, is in itself one of the needs of the deepest religious life, they will find that they may awaken a wider and deeper response than they yet suspect. This quickened religious life will bear, as it has already borne, fruits in action. The truly religious man cannot be satisfied with the conditions under which the masses of our population live. A modern revival, if it comes, will not spend itself in emotion only. It will issue in action, in greater enthusiasm and loyalty for all phases of social reform.—[London Daily Mail.

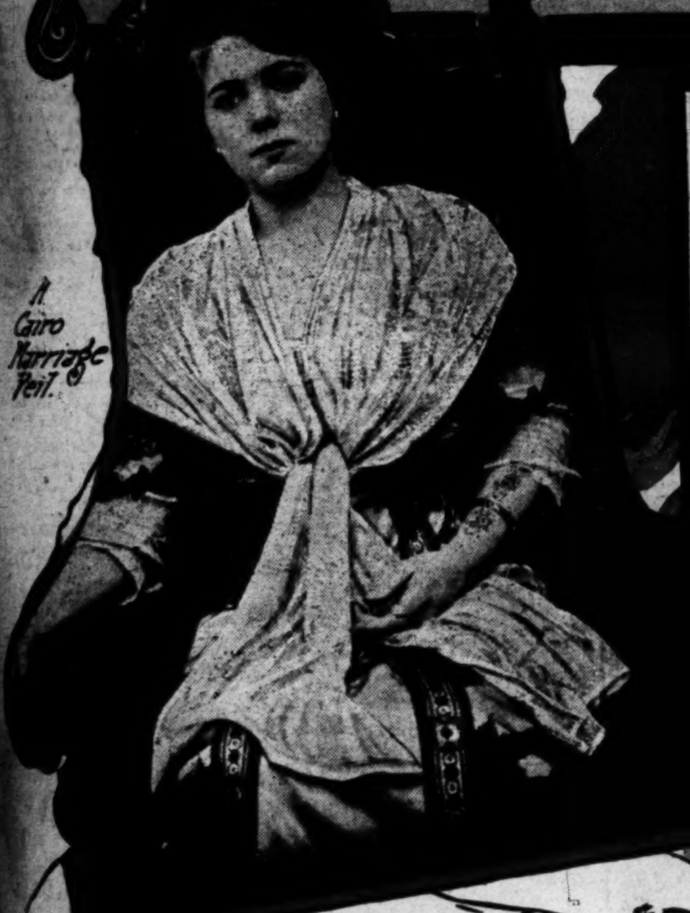
THE GRACE OF THE SCARF



A Cairo Marriage Veil.

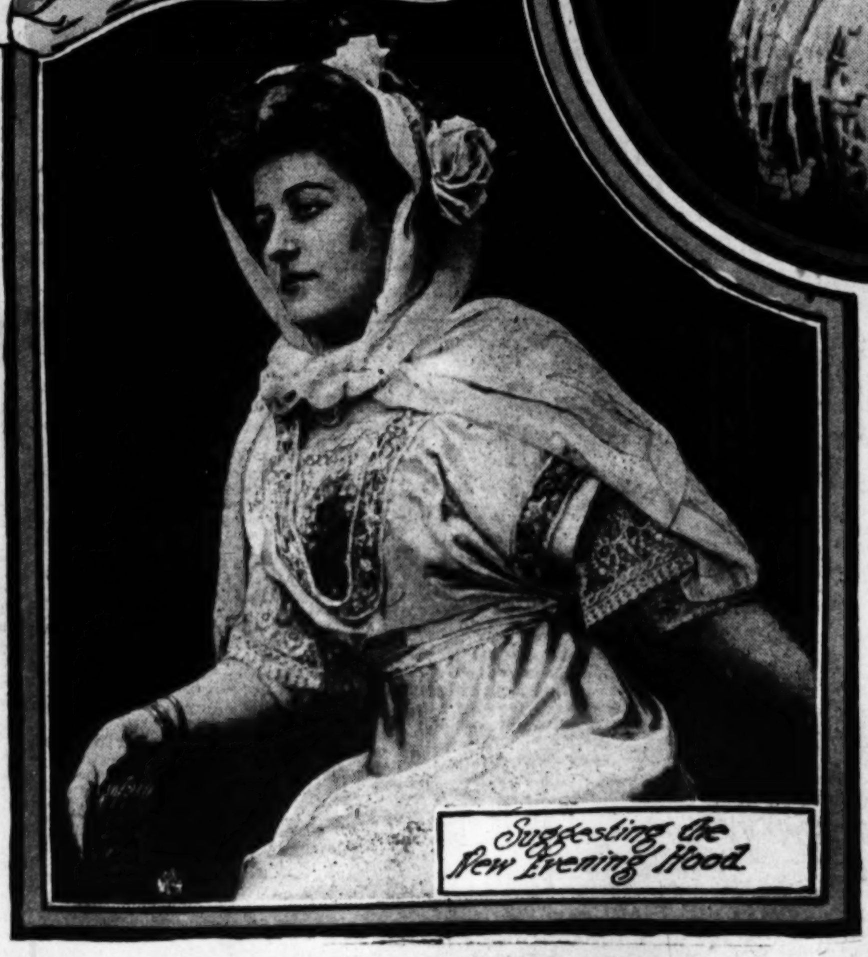
In Persian Coloring



Suggesting the New Evening Hood

ALL Paris is raving over the scarfs which serve to protect dainty shoulders from the cool breezes at the resorts. Not only do they serve this purpose, but they also accentuate every beautiful line of the feminine figure, and give a touch of grace and distinction to the most simple of costumes.

Take, for instance, the scarf shown at the top of the page—that hangs so straight in front and so prettily on the shoulders, giving an air of beauty and softness to the otherwise simple gown. It is of dotted net, trimmed all round the edge with a filet net, heavily embroidered in golden thread. What dress would not be handsomer or more distinguished when worn with such a scarf? True, it would not be of any great benefit as a sole protection on a snowy night, but at all times and in all places it is a pretty accompaniment to almost any gown, whether decollete or not.

The Cairo marriage veil is worn rather in the style of the fichu of Marie Antoinette. This gold-embroidered net is so heavy, and yet so light looking, that it may be arranged in many graceful forms impossible for other scarfs. It gets its name from the fact that these veils are said to be worn by Egyptian women on their marriage day.

The scarf of white net embroidered in silver paillettes is quite a novelty. They fall into the most graceful lines, and their unique beauty will recommend them.

The scarf of bordure chiffon is worn in rather an original way, with real flowers to match the color of the border. What a charming finish this would make for a frock made of the chiffon itself! What a pretty wrap could be formed of the bordure of the dress!

The scarf with Persian coloring is extremely graceful and effective; the colors are very soft and possess a certain richness which cannot fail to tone in well with a dress of almost any shade. For instance, in the picture it is worn with a gown of palest apricot satin, and, although the scarf includes almost every color in the rainbow, there is no one color strong enough to clash with the yellowish pink of the gown.

White chiffon appears in the scarf which falls from the coiffure over the shoulder. Such a drapery would be fascinating worn when hats are unnecessary and yet one feels that some head covering would be better. The flowers used to hold the scarf in place are fresh from the garden, and it gives a little fairy-like beauty hard to obtain when the head is crowned with a mere example of the milliner's art.

The theater hat is said to be out of fashion for the winter. Instead of the huge hats that we have been accustomed to wear to the theaters, we will, in the future, be required to wear only a scarf, or a hood and cape combined. This is said to be worn in Paris at the moment, and it is made of chiffon, embroidered satin or finest white embroidery.

The scarf with the hand-embroidered ends is arranged in much the same way as the hoods will be when worn, and it gives an adequate idea of how pretty the audience will look as it files into the playhouse.

SCHOOL for HOUSEWIVES

The Evening is Her Own

THE MAID OF ALL WORK

She Sees that the Refrigerator is C

Part of the Sweeping May Be Done on Wednesday

SOME ONE has aptly called the general housework servant a "Pooh-Bah in petticoats." All branches of household toil are included in her province.

This does not mean, however, that she discharges them all. When she is engaged she doubtless agrees to do cooking, chamberwork, waiting on table and very likely washing and ironing as well. Sometimes she does all these things, but it is usually when she is very competent and the family is very small. Gone are the old days when one maid was considered sufficient for a good-sized family. This is a period of specialization, and we must have a maid for nearly every variety of work. The higher wages these specialists command make it an object with the general housework servant to seek promotion from her solitary state as soon as possible.

Whether it be the result of this same specialization or an outcome of more elaborate methods of living, there is no doubt that a good maid-of-all-work is hard to find and to keep. It goes without saying that her wages have gone up, like everything else. The fact that she does not pay rent or food or fuel bills does not militate against her demanding more pay for the same work that was done ten years ago at a smaller wage.

None the less, since a competent maid is a rarity, it behooves the possessor of one to consider her so far as she can. The average mistress accepts it as a matter of course that she should lend a hand in the cookery on Monday and Tuesday, besides washing the dishes and making the beds. On other days she probably does the dusting and assumes small duties about the house. Yet, while she is ready to take a share of the work, she should have it clearly understood with the maid that certain duties fall upon the servant's shoulders and that when the mistress performs them she does it not of merit on the maid's part, but of free grace on that of the employer.

Because the women who have remained general housework servants until middle age are generally either not competent for higher work or are so "set in their ways" as to be difficult to manage, it is sometimes well for the mistress who has the time and the strength to take a young and comparatively inexperienced girl and train her to her hand. I know there is a strong probability that so soon as she is of a real value in the household she will seek another home where she will get higher wages; but she would be likely to do that anyhow. And there is always a chance that she may have either the common sense or the loyalty to stand by her first employer.

The maid engaged with the understanding, always to be borne in mind in such conditions, that she is "to turn her hand to anything," the mistress should set about training her in the way she means to have her follow steadily. When the new incumbent has become accustomed to her work and to the ways of the house, she may introduce variations, but for the time it is better that she should adhere to a fixed schedule.

A regular hour of rising should be one of the first rules laid down by the mistress, and it should be early. In a house where breakfast is at 7.30 or 8, 6 is none too early an hour for the maid to rise. This gives her time to take half an hour for dressing and brings her downstairs by 6.30. In a house where a coal or wood range is used, her first duty will be to start the fire, fill the kettle, put it on to boil and place the cereal over the fire. These two duties may be done if gas is used as fuel, and gives the maid more time for her other work. In winter she may have to go down to the furnace, open the draughts and put on fresh coal.

The next step is to go into the living rooms and open them to air; after that the front hall may be brushed off and a touch given to the front steps and the sidewalk, unless there is an outside man engaged to do this. The dining room and drawing room may also be brushed up, if they need it, and the furniture straightened—dusting done, too, if this is one of the maid's duties. In any case, the dining room should be put in spotless order for the morning meal.

When the maid is brisk about her duties, all this can be done before it is time for her to put the kettle over. Should the cereal be one needing long cooking, it should have been set over a low flame when the maid first came downstairs.

The amount of work a maid can do before breakfast depends, as a matter of course, upon the kind of breakfast to be prepared. In households where there is a simple meal of fruit, cereal, bacon and eggs, toast and coffee, her work is comparatively light, but in a home where hot bread must be made, potatoes and meat cooked, she can hardly be expected to get through with much before the morning meal.

In households where only one maid is employed she is not expected to do any waiting at breakfast beyond bringing in the successive courses and removing the plates as they are used. By the time the family reach the last stage of the breakfast she should either eat her own breakfast or go to the upstairs work. If the beds have been stripped to air by their occupants on rising, the task of getting the rooms in order is taken in hand. Beds may be made, the furniture put in order, the floor gone over with a carpet sweeper, soiled water emptied, the utensils cleansed. This, too, is the time to put the bathroom in order.

In a good-sized family this care of the bedrooms generally devolves upon the women of the household. In this case the maid can set to work putting her kitchen to rights, washing the dishes used in preparing the breakfast, looking over the pantry to see what supplies are needed and the like. By the time the family has finished eating the maid is ready to come in and clear the table, take the dishes to the kitchen, arrange and darken the dining room and after this to wash the dishes. When this is done, if she has not had time to finish her upstairs work properly, she should go back to it. Before she leaves the kitchen she should rinse out her dish towels and put them over to boil.

By this time, or earlier, the mistress should have come in to see what there is in the larder and to decide about the meals for the day. This is the time when she sees that the refrigerator is clean and if there are left-overs which should be used at once.

The general work of the house should be divided up on the different days, so that there will not be a hard pull one day and a lazy time another. Monday and Tuesday are taken for granted for washing and ironing. If the ironing hangs over into Wednesday, it may be necessary to crowd most of the sweeping and cleaning into the last of the week; but when the laundry work is out of the way by Tuesday night, part of the sweeping may be done on Wednesday—the dining room or parlor, rather than the upstairs rooms, since there is usually some baking to be done on Wednesday, and it is well for the maid to have work which will not take her too far from her kitchen.

Thursday's work may be silver cleaning, brass polishing and window washing. The maid's weekly or fortnightly "afternoon out" usually falls on Thursday, unless special arrangements are made otherwise. Friday is the day to do the upstairs sweeping and cleaning, and Saturday brings in baking, odds and ends and general preparation for Sunday.

The week's work having been outlined, let us look again at the daily vocations. The midday luncheon, at which the table is spread as at breakfast, is one which requires little waiting. The mistress should endeavor so to plan the work that there will be no heavy or dirty work to be done in the afternoon. If the maid and mistress agree in judicious discharge of the daily duties, there is no reason why the afternoon should not be comparatively free, or filled only with light tasks, until the time comes to make the dinner ready.

At dinner time the maid is expected to do more waiting than at either of the preceding meals. She is not to stay in the room after the dishes are passed, but she should be ready to come at sound of the bell. Her work after dinner is practically the same as that after the other meals. If she is forehanded about her work and washes the dishes of one course while the subsequent course is eaten, she can get through her work early, and after she has turned down the beds, the evening

The Housemothers' Exchange

WILL you be kind enough to let me know if there is any way of testing yeast cakes before using them to ascertain if they are fresh and fit for use? I have had a great deal of trouble with yeast cakes lately. They do not raise the bread as they should.

2. Why does pie crust, after it is put into the oven, rise into blisters? We do not use baking powder—simply lard, flour and water. Sometimes it puffs up so high that, in order to have it bake well, we must prick it with a fork while in the oven to let the air out of the blisters and make the settle.

3. I should be glad to get a nice recipe for lemon meringue, with directions for making the crust also.

4. When frying oysters, after the first lot is taken out of the pan, the lard foams so high and furiously that we can hardly see the oysters when the next lot goes in. I have often wondered if the fault is in the lard. If not, what can be done to prevent the foaming?

DAISY B. S. (Minneapolis).

The experienced housewife judges of the freshness of the yeast cake by the color and the smell. I have no difficulty in deciding that a viscid, unwholesome-looking cake which emits, when broken, an acrid odor, is not fit for use.

Other women may know of more infallible tests. Will they let us have them?

2. I should surmise that your crust has not been rolled and beaten sufficiently. You will comprehend what I mean when you have read the recipe for making pastry, to be given below. If you had pricked the crust when you put it into the oven, the air under it, which raises the blisters in heating, would have escaped without puffing up the surface.

3. Find recipe later.

4. There must be water or other foreign matter in the lard. Water would cause the phenomena you describe, or the flour or cracker-dust in which the oysters are rolled may have soda in it, which, when wet by the oyster juice and then heated, may effervesce.

Puff Paste.

Sift half a pound of the best flour twice into a bowl. Have ready six ounces of really good butter, which has been washed in two waters, then squeezed dry in a clean cloth and left on ice for an hour. Chop this into the flour, not touching it with your hands. Wet to a stiff paste with a teacupful of ice water. Use a wooden spoon in mixing. Turn the paste out upon a floured board and roll out quickly and lightly. Do not handle. The human hand is always warm and pastry is delicate. Fold into a close roll and beat seven times with the rolling-pin. Then roll out thin and stick little dabs of butter all over the sheet. Sprinkle lightly with flour and fold up as before. Beat flat and roll thin again. Do this three times. Fold up closely and set on the ice for some hours before making it into pies. Bake in a quick oven.

This pastry is flaky and delicious.

Lemon Meringue Pie.

Rub a tablespoonful of butter to a cream with a cupful of sugar; stir into four tablespoonfuls of cold water a tablespoonful of cornstarch, and this into a small cupful of boiling water. Stir and beat smooth and add, beating all the while, to the creamed butter and sugar. When it is cold beat into the mixture the juice and half the grated peel of a large lemon and the beaten yolks of two eggs, the white of one. Line a buttered pie-plate with puff paste and fill with the mixture. Set in the oven and when done cover with a meringue made of the whites of two eggs whipped stiff with two tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar and a teaspoonful of lemon juice. Leave in the oven just long enough to color lightly.

Relieving Prickly Heat

My bonnie baby boy is bonnie no longer. In fact, he is a sight to behold and as cross as a bear, with prickly heat. It covers his whole body and is especially fiery and swollen on his face, hands and neck. He will scratch it, too, poor little man! and a crust forms when it bleeds. Can you tell of something that is not drastic that will help him? Neighbors advise "cooling medicines." So does the doctor. The child's digestion is perfect, although this is his second summer, and I hate to upset it by laxatives and aperients. There ought to be some local application that would soothe the flesh.

You are such an enemy to drugs and so strong on "simples" that I come to you.

HARRIET N. (Buffalo, N. Y.).

When I was a child this same plague of prickly heat was the bane of my summers. It took possession of me in May and held on until October. I well recollect that I was not allowed, at 10 years of age, to attend church for a month at a time lest it might be suspected that I had the measles.

Finally, a visitor whose children had suffered in like manner told what had cured them and we forthwith put the course into practice. Night and morning I was bathed from head to foot with milk and water (half and half). I can imagine even yet that I feel the cool deliciousness of the application to my tortured flesh! This was allowed to dry without being wiped. Then I was powdered all over with "baby" talcum. We did not know it by that name. It was plain starch, pulverized to the last degree of fineness and sifted through muslin. The merest dust of baking soda was added and a trifle of borax.

The operation over, I was endued with a linen gown and put to bed at night. In the morning I put on linen underclothing. In one week I was free from eruption and fever, but the treatment was continued until the fierce heats of summer were gone. The next year we began with bath and powder at the earliest appearance of the rash and drove it off. Until I was 15 we kept it up.

Since then I have treated a flock of children and grandchildren according to the rule laid down by that kindly guest, and invariably with one result. But yesternight the babiest of the six came to me at bedtime with the whimpering request that I would "look at her back."

The nurse reported that the doctor had talked of "impure blood."

It is one of the most convenient of stock phrases with the profession. The girlie slept sweetly all night and this morning there is not a sign of redness or heat.

"Impure blood," forsooth!

Taking Out Spots

While I was in the kitchen I was so unlucky as to spill liquid stove polish on a fine linen waist. Can you tell me how to take out the spots? The garment has not been washed yet.

DISTRESSED (Camden, N. J.).

Wet them and rub into them all the cream-of-tartar they will take up. Have the kettle on a furious boil over the fire, and hold the spots close to the lip of the spout so that the steam will rush through the linen. Presently, rub in more cream-of-tartar. Keep this up for ten minutes; then coat thickly with the powder and lay in the sun. Let it remain there all day.

Painting Wild Animals From Life

THE Bronx Park lion house, in the Central Park, New York, is fitted up with a unique studio, which will enable artists to make a study of wild animals from actual life. The new studio cage is at one end of the building, shut off from the main lion house. There are two parts to it—the auditorium and the cage. The former is 20x17 feet, with platforms ranged one above the other, so that a number of artists can work at the same time. About thirty artists can be accommodated at once.

The studio cage is arranged directly under a big skylight, and when a lion is wanted by the artists the animal is driven into a shifting cage and lowered to a subway communicating with a studio cage. Then it is an easy matter to get the animal from the shifting car safely inside the studio by simply opening the gates and throwing in a piece of meat. With the animal inside the cage in a perfect light and no bystanders to disturb them, the artists are free to begin work.

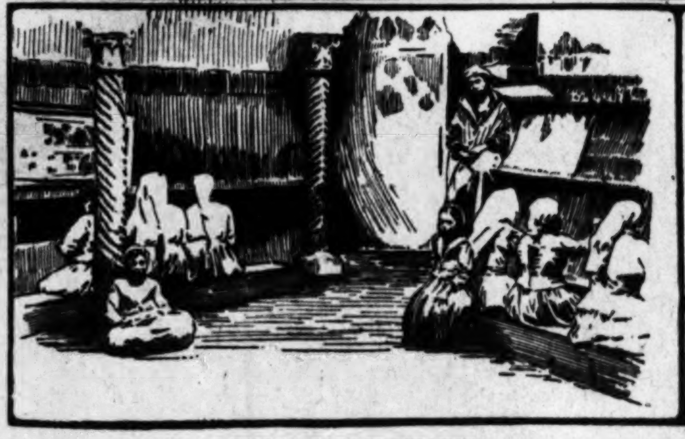
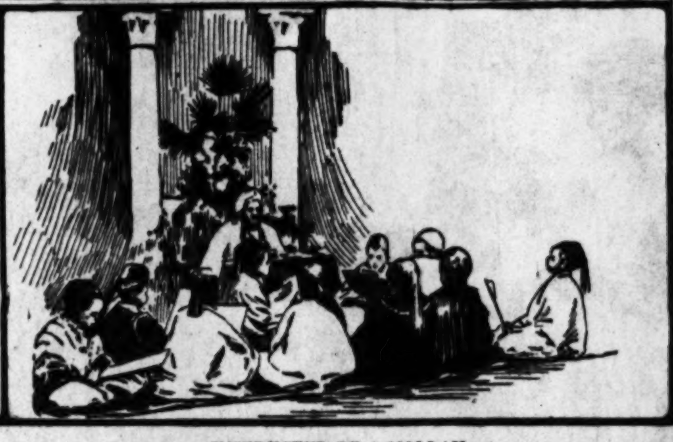
The Great Resolve



WHERE YOUTHFUL CARPET WEAVERS LABORED



INSTRUCTED BY A MOLLAH

HAVING cast his line with precision, Hassan leaned against the barrel placed for his convenience on the edge of the quay. Hassan also gave a deep sigh of content. True, the future held painful punishment in store, for little Arab boys may not run away from carpet-weaving to fish, without hearing from angry fathers. But what of it! He was having a glorious time now, and the future must take care of itself.

Hassan thought of the first time he had gone a-fishing. Ben Ali had coaxed him down to this very quay, and had instructed him exactly how to handle his line. He remembered how he had run away in terror from the ugly squirming thing he drew from the water—a thing with eight twisting, twining, snaky legs, fastened to a body ten inches long, and with horrible, protruding green eyes. He remembered, too, how Ben Ali had called threateningly after him:

"Coward, come back! Come back, or I shall never let you come with me again!"

He had returned to watch, with fearful fascination, the snaky legs curl about Ben Ali's hand. Then Ben Ali, with a dextrous sweep of his knife, had cut off the entire eight legs close to the ugly creature's body. They had relaxed helplessly; the haunting green eyes had lost their luster. And Ben Ali, after hacking the body and legs into small pieces, had placed them in a bag and carried them home. Hassan had eaten his share of the dish at supper that evening, but he had not relished it, for, try as he would, he could not help thinking of the frightful green eyes.

Then how severe his father had been! "No good, self-respecting Mohammedan," the stern parent had said, "should spend his time fishing, like the poor Turks, when he might be engaged in the ancient and honorable trade of carpet-weaving."

THE DARING IDEA

Hassan detested carpet weaving. It was too tiresome to sit with several other boys from 8 o'clock in the morning until 5 in the evening, pulling the fine threads through the warp, to make nice, smooth rugs. He would much rather play about the streets until he grew big enough to sell newspapers and curios; to clean and shine the boots of rich foreign gentlemen and to assist old Arabs in the sale of oranges, dates and matches.

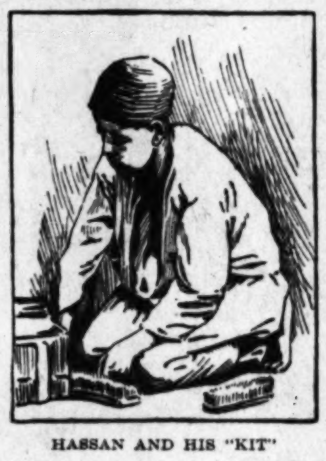
No longer did Hassan feel content. He thought of the jolly little foreign lad he had seen the other day. This boy, whom Ben Ali called an American, didn't need to weave carpets. The more Hassan reflected the more he longed to be an American. Hardly realising what he did, he framed in his heart this resolution:

"As soon as I can, I shall run away to America and not be a Mohammedan or weave carpets."

Then so frightened was he at the daring of his idea that he pulled in his line and ran home to be punished.

"Hassan, you are not growing up a good boy. I must send you away to learn the Koran," sadly announced his father.

So the lad was placed under the care of a mollah, who made him work as hard as he had labored at carpet weaving. All day long he and his boy companions squatted before their teacher, learning the Koran by heart and repeating in a peculiar, sing-song way words of which they little understood the meaning. They were also taught to write and to count.



HASSAN AND HIS "KIT"

All through the rainy month he applied himself to study, until there arrived the brilliant holiday of Bayram.

Hassan spent this day strolling about the city. Chancing to be near the wharves when a big steamer came in, he earned a pretty silver piece for carrying a lady's satchels. With this he bought a handful of peanuts and two handfuls of sweetmeats, and he had, besides, five sous with which he thought to surprise his father. But his father was very angry, and scolded him, saying:

"Your study of the Koran has apparently been in vain, or you would have known that no good Mohammedan may work or accept pay during Bayram."

The discouraged parent now took Hassan from school, and, as the lad was quite a good size, provided him with a bootblack's box, a set of brushes and blacking.

From this time Hassan became quite prosperous. He could fill his pockets with sous during a day; and, although he was supposed to hand it all to his father, a few of the coins always stuck in some manner in his pocket. Hassan did not realize how very wrong this was.

Then Hassan became quite a merchant. He had grown somewhat tired of the rivalry and competition of shoeblacking, where he was often compelled to fight another bootblack to gain a customer. And when he dodged under the tables of the Cafe Bordeaux to escape flying brushes he was cuffed by the waiters and kicked by the gentlemen there. Yes, he decided, a merchant's life was much more pleasant.

Therefore Hassan collected sea-stars, shells, pins, buttons, pictures and skins of the sand snake. Many tourists came to Algiers, brought by the French steamers which arrived three times a week. The lad made great profit upon his wares, especially as he learned to employ the different languages of the people whom he asked to buy.

So at last Hassan was able to purchase his canoe. It cost twenty francs, and Hassan possessed only ten francs; but his father kindly loaned him the other ten. The lad was so grateful that he consented to accompany his father to the mosque, where, it must be confessed, his only emotion was that of pride in entering a building where only men and no women were allowed. Little did he think of the sincerity of his prayers to Allah.

PROFIT IN HIS BOAT

But the boat! Ah, it was a fine one, with double sculls and a handsome piece of carpet to cover the seat at the stern. Hassan could now sail upon the deep blue waters of his beloved sea. Far out upon the Mediterranean he would row, until the white buildings of the city of Algiers looked like a tiny white spot upon the shore line, and the green gardens which flanked it, and which also rose in terraces to the hills back of the city, showed only in dark patches. Then, riding upon the waves, he would bask in the sunshine and gaze upward at a sky that was as blue as the waves.

Much money he earned by rowing tourists out upon the sea. Always he demanded 10 sous. And if the gentleman insisted that the price was too high, Hassan would merely say, solemnly:

"I'm afraid, then, you must stay where you are."

But when there were sailors who had almost overstayed their leave on shore and who were anxious to get back to their boats to avoid punishment, Hassan generously rowed them this distance without charging more than 4 sous. It was this kindly trait, too, which led to his friendship with Jack Harmon. Jack was a sailor attached to a United States torpedo destroyer which lay in the harbor. He had missed his regular boat back to the vessel, and had therefore sought out Hassan, whom he had hired upon previous occasions. Now, Hassan had picked up a few words of English, and as he knew Jack owned allegiance to the land he so much admired, it did not take him long to open conversation.

"I wish I was American," he had said gravely.

Jack, much surprised, asked the reason. And when Hassan told of the resolve he had made years ago, that some time he would be an American, the sailor became thoughtful.

"Do you know," said he, finally, "you look like a decent young Arab, and I don't know but what I could get a friend of mine to find you a berth on one of our transports lying over there."

Hassan's cheeks flushed with gratitude, and Jack, observing how the suggestion was appreciated, decided to make good his offer.

One afternoon Hassan stole from home for the last time. His conscience reproached him for leaving his father, but he left a note telling of his ambition, and promising to return some time in the future. His boat he had already sold; therefore all his possessions he carried with him.

His heart throbbed as he clambered up the side of the transport, and he whispered exultingly to himself:

"I have at last begun to keep my resolution, for I am now learning to be an American!"

Cracking Walnuts

ANNOUNCE that you can place an English walnut in the joint of your arm and crack it without difficulty by simply exercising the strength of your muscles. Place a nut in the joint of your left arm. But first conceal two other walnuts in your right hand.

Close your left arm, and strike it an apparently violent blow with the right hand, at the same time strongly clenching the right hand, which will smash the second walnut in it and cause your audience to believe it was the English walnut under your arm that broke.

Pretend to drop very carefully the fragments from your arm, and show the nut you have cracked in your hand instead of the other.

Youthful Criminals

TWO bad little boys were standing on the street corner, when another well-dressed little boy passed on his way to the drug store to buy candy.

"Let's take his penny away from him," one bad boy suggested to the other.

"No," replied his wicked companion, "it's best to wait until he goes in and buys chocolate with it, and then we'll steal the chocolate. Wot's the use of doin' extra work?"

Mademoiselle Elise

"MON PERE, I have an idea—the grandest idea one could possibly think of!" exclaimed pretty Elise.

"And what is this clever idea?" smilingly asked Elise's father.

"Eh, bien! Thou knowest how our lovely queen, Marie Antoinette, often escapes from wearisome court life and runs out to her country retreat at Trianon, where she and the noble folk play at being simple peasants. They make hay, milk the cows, and they say that even the king grinds out flour in a little mill there."

"Yes," nodded the father, "so they do."

"And why cannot I invite some of my friends out to the chateau, father?" Elise went on, enthusiastically. "Life here in Paris is, oh, so tiresome; and we would have a most splendid outing!"

"BORNE IN A CHAIR"

Elise's father gravely considered this request, and, to Elise's great delight, finally gave his consent.

Thus it was that the following week many little noble girls and boys, who were so fortunate as to possess Elise's friendship, made their way toward the charming little chateau. In all sorts of conveyances they came. Elise herself traveled in a cozy chair, and was carried from the neighboring chateau, where she had been spending a short visit.

Then how they romped! "It's such a relief," merrily remarked Mademoiselle Lucie, "to forget all one's grand manners for a time and play at being peasant children." Every one agreed with her.

You may be sure they were sorry when the day ended. And you may know that they promised themselves similar treats in the near future.

But as Queen Marie Antoinette herself was forced to forego her delightful visits to Trianon, so Mademoiselle Elise and her friends found it impossible to carry out their plans. This was because the horrible French revolution was upon them—a dreadful time when Elise's father and mother and all the other noble ladies and gentlemen were in gravest peril, and were fortunate if they escaped with their lives.

Flower Enemies

IT IS rather interesting to note that certain flowers have great dislike for each other. For instance, if you will make up a bouquet containing, among other flowers, roses and mignonettes, and place the bouquet in a vase for an hour, you will find that while the other flowers remain perfectly fresh, the roses and mignonettes have wilted—that is to say, they have killed each other.

Lilies-of-the-valley also kill without pity any other flower with which they come in close contact.

On the contrary, carnations and heliotropes have the greatest affection for each other.

Yet some people say that flowers cannot feel!

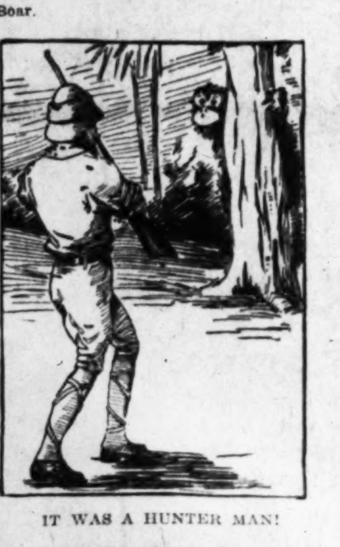
"Why are you all so excited?" growled the Lion, when they passed by his majesty's lair.

"The Monkey has a strange, new thing to show us; come along!" shouted the Boar.



IT WAS A HUNTER MAN!

"What is this strange, new thing?" questioned the Lion, stalking along at the rear of the procession.

"You'll have to ask the Wolf," responded the Boar.

But when the Wolf was asked, he replied, "I don't know; you must inquire of the Bear.

The Bear, however, was as ignorant as they, and referred them to the Monkey, saying, "He alone knows of this strange, new thing."

But the Monkey was too excited to tell them what it was.

After a while he stopped suddenly and whispered to his friends: "Go about one rod farther and peer through the thicket. There you will see the strange, new thing!"

The company crept forward. A moment later they were fleeing through the forest helter-skelter. For the "strange, new thing" was nothing less than a Man Hunter, armed with a formidable gun which might go off and kill them.

When they were out of danger the Lion started in pursuit of the Monkey; the Boar flew after the Lion; the Wolf ran along behind the Boar, and the Bear waddled in the rear—all vowing vengeance on the Monkey should they catch him.

The Monkey escaped by climbing a tree out of their reach. But he had forever lost his reputation for wisdom. How any one could be ignorant of what a Man Hunter looked like the animals of the Smaller Forest could not imagine. The Monkey, you see, had for the time forgotten the Serpent's description of a Hunter, and in his desire to gain fame among the Forest People had committed this unpardonable error.

Wonderful Map

ONE of the greatest objects of interest in the Louvre, Paris, is a map of France made of precious stones, which was presented to that country by the present czar. The map is forty inches square, and is made of gold and precious stones. The gold came from Siberia and the precious stones from the Imperial Russian mines. It is framed in slate-colored jasper. The sea is represented by pale and precious marble, and foreign countries (necessarily included)—England, Germany, Italy and Spain—are represented in dark gray onyx. Some of the gems are so rare they are never found in commerce. One hundred and six of the important towns in France are given, their names being inlaid in gold, and the towns themselves are marked in jewels. Paris is represented by a huge ruby, Havre by an emerald, Rouen by a sapphire, Lille by rock crystal, Rheims by a chrysolite, Lyons by a tourmaline, Nantes by a beryl, Bordeaux by an aquamarine, Nice by a garnet, Cherbourg by an alexandrite from the Urals (which is green by day and a red blue at night), and so on for all the towns. The map is valued at $500,000, and came out of the czar's private purse. The French jewelers said if such a map was ordered from them they would charge double that sum.

Had Given it Away

LUCILLE'S mother had taken her for an outing in the Luxembourg Gardens. Now that the hour for luncheon had arrived, she called to the little girl:

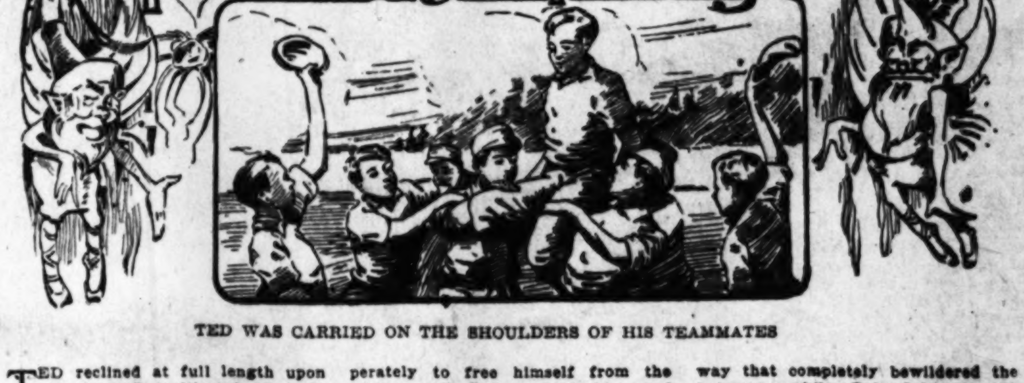
"Lucille, we will now have a little roll and some chocolate, and you shall pay with the two sous I gave you but a short time since."

"Oh, mama," cried Lucille, "I have already given the two sous away to an old woman!"

"I am so glad you have disposed of the money in such a charitable way. How did you happen to present it to the old woman?" asked the mother.

"Well, you see, I gave it to her in payment for two nice apples," confessed Lucille.

A Friendly Thingumbob



TED WAS CARRIED ON THE SHOULDERS OF HIS TEAMMATES

TED reclined at full length upon the hay. But although his body was at rest, the same could not be said of his mind. Indeed, one glance at the wrinkled brow would have told you that Ted was perturbed.

"I just can't do it! I know I can't! I don't pitch well enough by half to beat the Leroy team. And my arm's all bad!

"It's exactly my luck to be in bad trim for the game I'm most anxious to win," he concluded, kicking out his heels vengefully.

"I'll wager I could beat the Leroy team," said a voice almost at his ear.

Ted looked around in astonishment, but could see no one. "And who are you?" he asked aloud.

"I? Oh, I'm a Thingumbob—the nicest person in all the world," replied the voice, as a tiny creature no bigger than Ted's thumb hopped upon his chest and grinned in a friendly fashion at him.

"Well, of all the little persons I ever met you are the smallest!" gasped Ted, carefully scrutinizing the elf.

The Thingumbob responded, with a smirk, "And I'll wager you I'm the smartest, too!"

The lad was now so interested that he raised himself on his elbow. This caused the Thingumbob to slide down into the hay, where he struggled desperately to free himself from the wisps until Ted rescued him and placed him upon his hand.

"You want to be more careful!" scolded the little visitor, swelling with indignation and striving to catch his breath.

It was all so funny that Ted found it hard to keep from laughing, but he tried to look penitent as he replied, "I'll remember hereafter that you're not quite so big as I am."

This only served to make the Thingumbob more angry, for he sputtered:

"I may not be as tall as you, but I can pitch far better ball. Don't believe it, do you? Well, I'm going to prove it. Don't be surprised when you see me in your hand when you pitch in tomorrow's game. I can get from place to place in a marvelous manner. And I'm going to ride on the ball and guide it so that it will curve in a way you never saw before."

With these words the Thingumbob disappeared. Ted tried to make himself believe it was all a dream, but he couldn't help thinking of the elf's words when he walked into the pitcher's box to pitch the first ball against the Leroy batsman. Just as the ball was about to leave his hand he saw a tiny little creature balance himself about it.

Then as the ball sped upon its way you should have seen it curve! It twined and twisted on its course in a way that completely bewildered the batsman, while Bob Johnson, the catcher, was so surprised that he simply let the ball hit against his glove. This was only the beginning. Man after man came up to the plate, only to strike out.

At the close of the half of the inning, the team crowded around Ted.

"You're a wonder, Ted!" cried Bob. "I've never seen such curves! How in the world did you manage to practice them?"

The Leroy team might as well have given up right away. Every man who came to the plate struck out. None could solve this puzzling delivery.

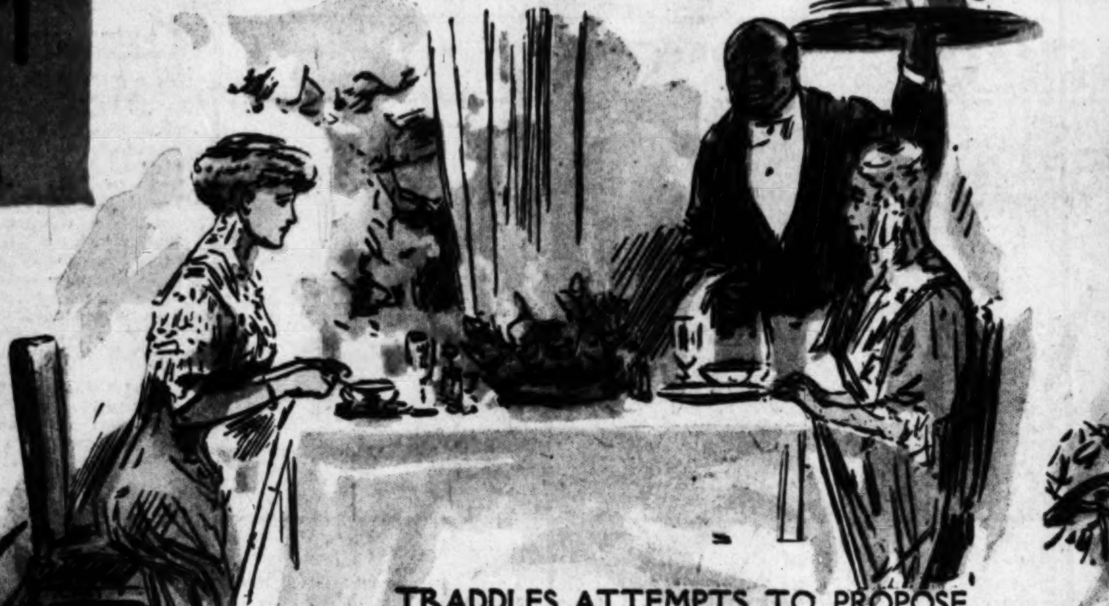
Meanwhile Ted pitched as in a dream. He knew it was all the work of the Thingumbob, and he was honest enough to realize that this wasn't playing ball in the right way. But he couldn't talk to the Thingumbob, because the umpire would think he was crazy. And if he told the other players they would also think him out of his mind. So he continued in the box, striking out every batsman who faced him.

How they cheered Ted when the game was over! Every one imagined that Ted took the honor in such a quiet way because he was so modest. They didn't know that all credit belonged to the Thingumbob, who had merely redeemed his promise, and that Ted didn't feel at all a hero when he was carried from the field.

FLUFFY RUFFLES

Drawings by Wallace Morgan

Verses by Charles Battell Loom



TRADDLES ATTEMPTS TO PROPOSE.

-One day when summer's heat was spent and nights were cool and sweet
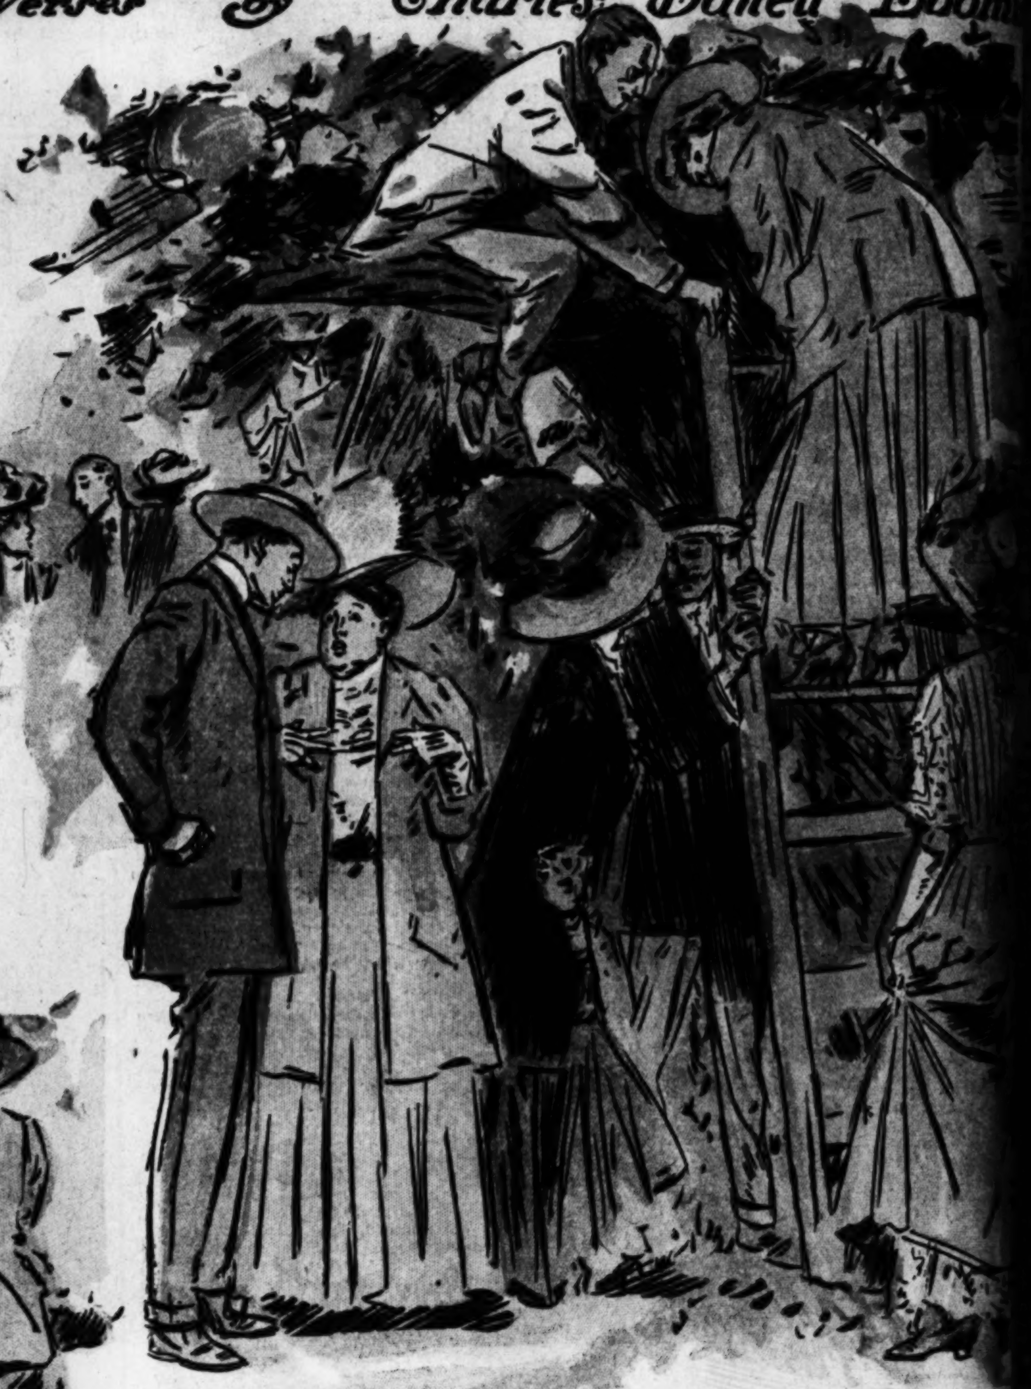
They gave an arbor dinner at the Devens' country seat.
Now at an arbor dinner all the guests are up in trees
And waiters hand the food aloft (a thing not done with ease).
Wise Fluffy thought it foolish, but 'twould serve to pass the day;
So when she was invited she accepted right away.
Aunt Mary sought Joe Traddles, who was going to the frolic,
And found him looking very blue—in fact, quite melancholic.



2-She said, "Now, if it happens that the honor comes to you
To take Miss Fluffy 'up' to dinner you know what to do;
As side by side the branch you sit you readily can ask
If she'll consent to be your wife, a truly pleasant task."
The seventh of September came; at breakfast Fluffy sat
And much amused her maiden aunt with pleasant chitter-chat.
"They've labor troubles at the Devens'; some Italians there
With big black hands and thumb marks red have worked up quite a scare.

3.
Who knows but they may saw the limbs and give us all a fall
Let's hope it rains and then they'll have it in the dining hall."
But all that day the autumn sun in cloudless heavens sailed,
And if sweet Fluffy prayed for rain her prayers had not availed.
They climb the trees, a merry crowd; the branches sway and rise
And little birds with piteous pipes give voice to their surprise.
The soup is served, the guests "fall to" and almost leave their perches
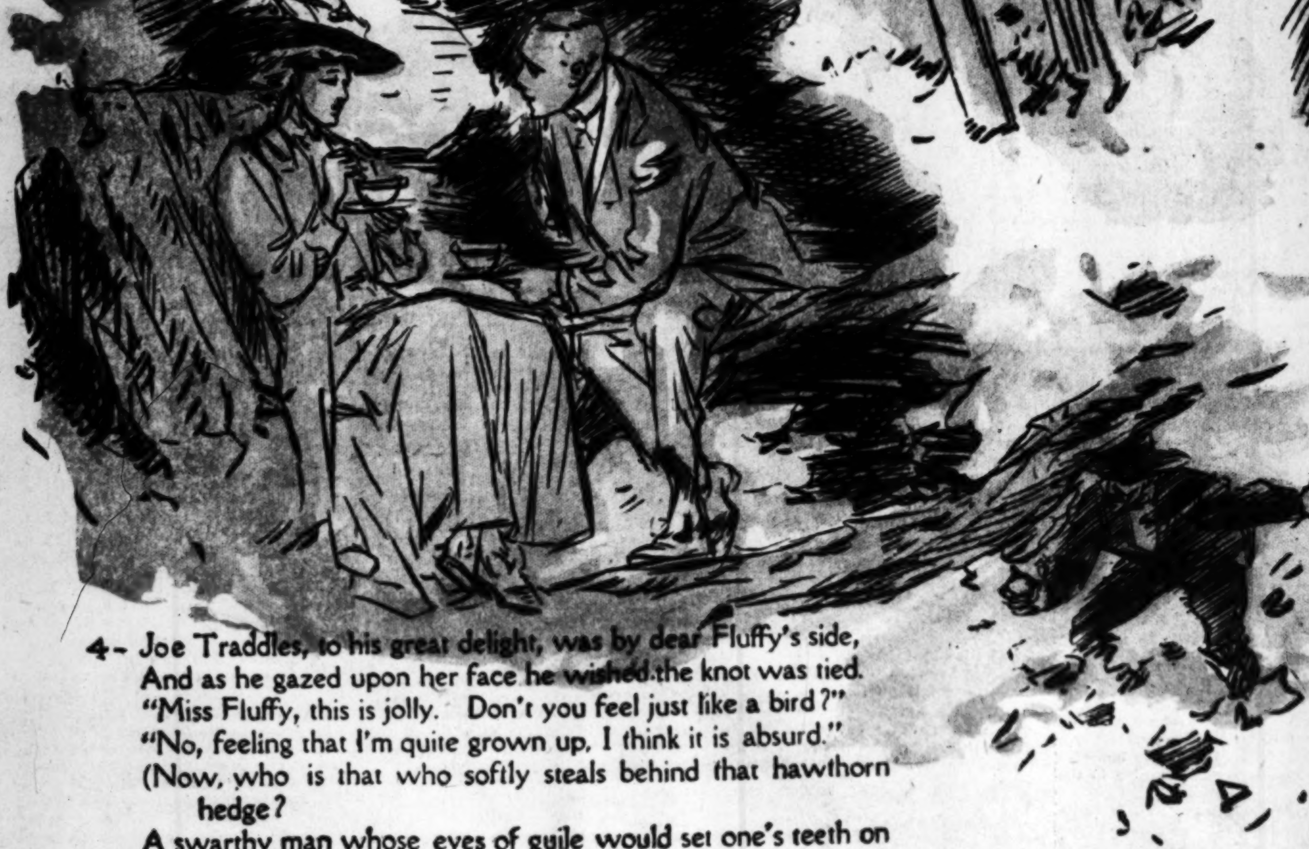
Retaining equilibrium with many sudden lurches.



4- Joe Traddles, to his great delight, was by dear Fluffy's side,
And as he gazed upon her face he wished the knot was tied.
"Miss Fluffy, this is jolly. Don't you feel just like a bird?"
"No, feeling that I'm quite grown up, I think it is absurd."
(Now, who is that who softly steals behind that hawthorn hedge?
A swarthy man whose eyes of guile would set one's teeth on edge.
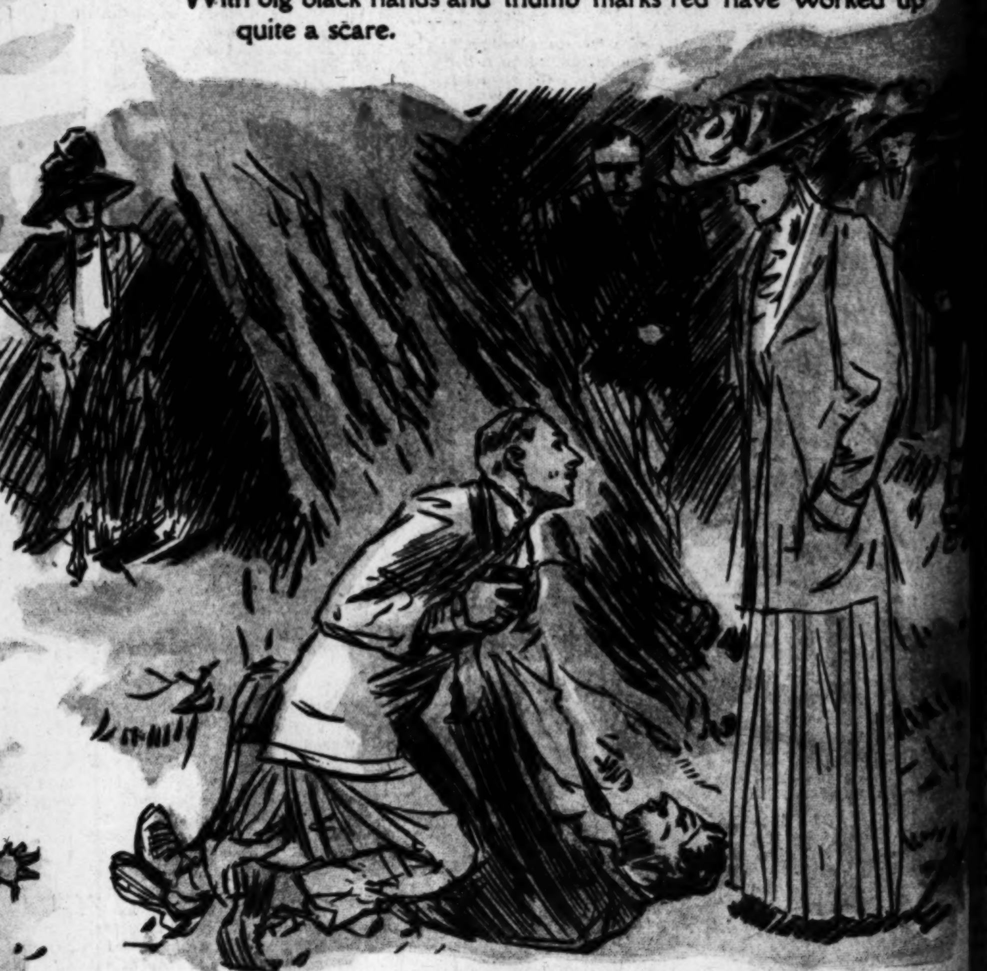
A smoking sphere is in his hand, his errand is most foul,
He seeks to kill the diners there, all sitting cheek by jowl.)



5- "Miss Fluffy, I would like a chance to say—to say a word,
I do not think"—(Oh, say it quick)—"it's like from me you've heard."
He looks below, he sees the man, he fathoms at a glance
His diabolical design (she sees him look askance).
He drops upon the fellow's neck and chokes his windpipe dark.
And pinches with his fingers strong the fuse's wicked spark.
The guests all praise him; but beyond he prizes Fluffy's glance,
Yet realizes he has lost another precious chance.
